A TRIBUTE

Without the untiring efforts of Ruth Sleight Widdison, who gave literally one year of her life almost entirely to the editing, typing and preparing of the manuscript for the printer, this valuable and impressive history of the Wixom Family would not now be in your hands. It is with humility and love that we dedicate this tribute to her.

In 1961 the manuscript, pictures, clippings and miscellaneous items relating to the Wixom Family History were returned to us; but as your Officers checked them over, the problem of coordinating everything into a manuscript that could be turned over to the printer in proper book form, seemed monumental. To hire a trained person to prepare the manuscript would have been a financial impossibility; and yet to see all of this valuable material not made available to the family for whom it had been so lovingly and painstakingly assembled seemed a tragedy and sacrilege to the work of "J. H." and the many others who have helped in the past.

At this point Ruth, prompted by her love and respect for "J. H." and his many years of selfless work and by her father, Richard S. Sleight, who had dreamed for so long of seeing this book become a reality, and who had supported so diligently efforts made toward this end, volunteered to undertake the project.

From that time on her every waking moment, and possibly even her dreams, were occupied with either planning or working on the manuscript. She became ever increasingly enthusiastic and excited over the work as chapter after chapter of fascinating family history unfolded itself as she poured over the records. Much of the work was done in the wee small hours of the night after her family was cared for and asleep.

In acknowledging Ruth's countless hours of self-sacrifice and work, we must also give much thanks and credit to Ruth's wonderful husband, Milton G. Widdison, and to her four lovely children who have so patiently and unselfishly taken over household duties and given many hours of their own time in proof-reading and helping in every way possible to give Ruth more time to spend with her precious records.

To all of them we give our deep and sincere thanks---this book will remain a living record forever of their part in making it a reality.

PREFACE

The Wixom Family History is, first and foremost, a monument to one man--Justin Humboldt Wixom--who spent the last 15 years of his life, and much of his income during that time, collecting the genealogy of Robert Wixom, who came to Massachusetts in 1630, and his descendants. As members of the Wixom Family, we are indeed fortunate to have had one so dedicated and willing to undertake such a project.

In the section on "J. H.," beginning on page 139, there are excerpts of letters he wrote to different family members explaining some of the problems he encountered during the time he was working on this history--problems which would have completely discouraged a less resolute and dedicated person; and also the joy and satisfaction he received from his efforts. It was his plan to have the history published during his lifetime, but the necessary funds were not available and time eventually ran out for him.

Since his death on January 16, 1934 other attempts have been made to put the history in print in order that more members of the family, and others, could be assisted in gathering their genealogy; but these also failed for lack of money. In 1941, Family Officers sent out a call for assistance and many responded with their payments. However, because there were not enough subscriptions obtained, this money had to be refunded--or, with the permission of the donor, was used in research. At this time the records were brought up to date by Mrs. Mae Broomhead Findlay, then Family Genealogist.

In 1955 another attempt was made when Mr. Stanley F. Earl of Canada volunteered to publish this History on a hand press he had in his home. This time a considerable amount of money was collected and forwarded to Mr. Earl; but because of the enormity of the project, he found it impossible to complete the work. During the time Mr. Earl worked on the manuscript, however, a great many more names and histories were added, increasing the size of the volume.

In 1959, at a reunion held in Preston, Idaho, Mrs. Maude Wixom Thompson was elected President of the Wixom Family Organization. She chose to assist her Mr. Reed Tippets as Vice-President and Mrs. Ruth Sleight Widdison as Secretary-Treasurer. These new officers, who had never been active in the family organization before, found themselves faced with many discouraging problems and difficult decisions. Because of repeated disappointments relative to the Family History, overall family interest in their organization was at a very low ebb; and hurt feelings and disillusionment were prevalent. It was a period of "sink or swim."

However, with the encouragement, monetary and otherwise, of such stalwarts as Mr. Richard S. Sleight, Mrs. Lois Shaffer, and many others, your officers have attempted, one by one, to face and surmount the many problems, and build once more a strong Family Organization, whose faith and interest could enable us to publish this valuable Family History.

The manuscript was received back from Mr. Stanley Earl; you voted to retain the officers elected in 1959; and at the reunion in 1961 you voted that the Officers also be designated as the "Book Committee," this Book Committee to remain as such until the book was published and sold.

At this reunion you also elected a 2nd Vice-President, Mr. D. Clyde Wixom, of Idaho Falls, Idaho.

In 1962, our Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Sleight Widdison, as a tribute to "J. H.," whom she had had the privilege of knowing when she was a child; to her father, Richard S. Sleight, and his boundless faith and interest in this work; and to the many others who had given of their time and talent down through the years, volunteered to undertake the monumental job of editing and typing the History and preparing the manuscript for publication. At this time Mrs. Ruby Noyes Tippets was appointed Secretary of the organization. Note special tribute to Mrs. Widdison on separate page.

There have been few changes made in the information collected by J. H. Wixom. The information added to this volume has been compiled as completely and accurately as possible. However, in a work of this kind it is impossible to avoid errors and omissions entirely. In some cases information has not been submitted accurately. We have been able to catch some of the more obvious errors and correct them but there are undoubtedly others that have not been detected, but we have tried our best.

The Undersigned Committee wishes to thank the many family members who have assisted in gathering the material to bring this book as nearly up to date as possible. We know that because of lack of addresses there have been many omissions of families with whom we have had no contact. This we regret.

MARY WIXOM SLEIGHT

Mary Matilda Wixom Sleight was born April 7, 1853, in the little pioneer town of Little Cottonwood, Utah. When she was five years old the family trekked south with the other inhabitants of the northern part of the State of Deseret (now Utah) when Johnson's Army had threatened to exterminate the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. About August of that year all disputes between the territorial government and the United States were amicably settled and all the Saints returned to their homes.

The Wixom family continued to live in their Little Cottonwood home until the year 1864, when they joined the company of pioneers who were called to settle Bear Lake Valley, Idaho. This year they made their home in Paris. Mary was then a tall slender girl of twelve years, the eldest in a family of eight.

Because of the many responsibilities placed on her young shoulders as the eldest daughter in the home, Mary matured young and at fourteen was already above the average stature of women in height and looked and acted like a mature woman. Before the summer of 1867 had passed Mary had become the wife of Thomas Sleight, a man twenty years her senior, and one whom she had ever regarded with feelings akin to reverence.

The years immediately following her marriage were extremely trying to her because of her youth; however, her strong character carried her through to success. Her mother was a very efficient housekeeper and she imparted her expert knowledge to the fifteen year old bride. She became skillful in most of the household tasks--cooking, sewing, weaving, etc.

In 1884 Thomas Sleight was called into the mission field to Great Britain. His pillar of strength was his noble wife who encouraged him in every way to respond to the call. She would cheerfully care for and support their six children, and pass through the sufferings of maternity without him a few months after his departure. Thomas left Paris October 23, 1884, and returned two and one-half years later. Many trials awaited the brave young wife during this time.

Mary had some outstanding characteristics that were forces which impelled her to success in the many trying situations that were part of her daily life. One was her determination to finish successfully what she began. If she had an objective she never wavered, but bent every effort to accomplish her task.

As her family grew in numbers and increased in size, the problems of her life grew and expanded with the same speed, and yet she was able to meet every problem. Thus her ability and skill as housewife and mother kept pace with every need, and she developed from the inexperienced child of her early marriage to the successful and skillful manager of a family of nine children.

As her family grew up they relieved the mother of much of the responsibility of the home. This gave Mary more time to devote to her work in her church. In 1916 her neighbor, William L. Rich, returned from a visit to San Bernardino, California, reporting the number of Wixoms in that city sufficient to turn an election if they all voted. This city was not so far away, but would her well-to-do non-Mormon relatives there take notice of a letter from one so humble as her?

Nevertheless, with the help of her dear friend, Mrs. Mae Broomhead Findlay, she wrote to California. They waited weeks for a reply but none came. Her next impression was to write to Pres. Joseph Robinson of the California Mission and ask him to instruct his missionaries who labored in San Bernardino to obtain the names and addresses of Wixom families there who might give them the information desired. In a short time they received the name of Mrs. Cynthia Payne, a relative of the Wixom family, whose reply to a letter addressed to her gave them the name of Justin H. Wixom of Michigan, who was reported to be in possession of records of the earliest known ancestors of the Wixom family.

Again she and Mrs. Findlay prepared a letter asking for Wixom records, and this time received a most joyful message in return. Justin had the records and would leave his work as attorney in Michigan and come West to confer with the family about the great subject of Genealogy. Mr. Wixom later said that as soon as he received his Cousin Mary Sleight's letter he lost all interest in everything but Wixom Genealogy, and that he felt impelled to find all the history and genealogy of his ancestors that he could possibly obtain. More about this is told in "My Experiences in Genealogy" written by Justin H. Wixom and printed under his name in this volume.

That Mr. Wixom acknowledges Mary Sleight in the part she played in bringing about the publication of this great book of Wixom genealogy, is evidenced by his having prepared on the flyleaf of the edition he hoped to have printed: "Dedicated to Mrs. Mary Wixom Sleight, whose urgent request for information concerning her ancestors started the movement that produced this book."

She was responsible for calling together the members of her family in Utah and Idaho for their first family reunion and family organization. Throughout the remainder of her life she corresponded with J. H. Wixom and sent him what financial support she could.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Many people have been responsible for the final publication of the Wixom Family History. Much help was given J. H. Wixom during the years he was gathering the information for this volume. Through the years the interest and assistance have continued by many members of the family.

During the time J. H. worked on this manuscript, he received much valuable assistance from May Broomhead Findlay, who worked for many years for the Genealogical Society of Utah, and who had a personal interest in the work through her friendship with Mary Wixom Sleight. We owe much to Mrs. Findlay.

After the death of J. H. Wixom, this work was carried on by Mrs. Findlay and Lois Wixom Shaffer, who both worked at research, as well as keeping this valuable record up to date for many years. It was Mrs. Findlay and Mrs. Shaffer who had the record ready for publication in 1941.

When another attempt was made in 1955 to get this work into print, many hours were spent by Mrs. Celia Wixom Meacham, who for many years acted as Historian for the Wixom Family. She spent great effort in collecting the information and money that was sent to Stanley Earl at that time. She was assisted in this by Lois Sleight Poulter, who was Secretary of the family organization.

Mrs. Lois Shaffer has been a great help in this final editing and I have appreciated being able to call her at any time for advice and assistance in getting information more correct. Her moral support and encouragement have been invaluable.

The final effort to get this history in print has required great teamwork. Without the encouragement and assistance, both financial and physical, of my father, Richard S. Sleight, this publication would not have been possible. He has refused to become discouraged and let this work be dropped. At each reunion through the years he has put forth great effort to get enough people interested in completing this history. I honor him with the small contribution I have been able to make in getting this volume printed.

Without the business leadership of our fine President, Maude Wixom Thompson, it is very doubtful that this book could have reached final completion. She has assisted both financially and physically. Besides handling the many business and financial problems, she has helped in many other ways--from lending moral support to assisting with the final proofreading. Her husband, Irwin A. Thompson, has assisted Maude in all of her efforts during the four years she has been President of the Wixom Family Organization and we extend our thanks to both of them. The family has indeed been fortunate to have had anyone as capable and willing as Maude to see this work to completion.

Two other stalwarts in this work have been Reed and Ruby Tippets. Two more willing workers could not have been found. Ruby has spent much time and effort in contacting the various members of the family for information, pictures, etc. They also have assisted financially, with the proofreading, and in many other ways.

I also owe a debt of gratitude to my neighbor, Mrs. Marilyn Barrow, who spent many weeks helping proofread this manuscript. It was necessary for two different proofreadings of this information, and Mrs. Barrow assisted with a great share of this. Her assistance has been invaluable in the completion of this work.

Ray Nash, a lawyer from Vernal, Utah, has merited our thanks for his valuable legal assistance and advice during the past few years. This he has done without monetary remuneration.

I also wish to express appreciation for the many encouraging letters many of you have written expressing interest in this work. This has made this project even more worthwhile to me. Because of the efforts of many of you who have worked to obtain the information to add to this volume, it has become more valuable and interesting to all of us. To each of you I express my thanks.

No one can possibly appreciate the help and assistance and encouragement I have received from my husband, Milton G. Widdison. Without his help and support I am sure this work could not have been completed at this time. I also have enjoyed the cooperation of my daughters, Leilani and Lyn, for assuming many household responsibilities, and also for help in the proofreading of the manuscript. I have been especially thankful for my family during this past year.

Any many thanks to the Wixom Family for entrusting me with this tremendous task. I have appreciated your confidence in me. It has truly been a labor of love and an experience I will always treasure. I am proud to be a member of this great family.

INTRODUCTION
by J. H. Wixom

Reuben Hiram Wixom died in Troy Grove Township, La Salle County, Illinois, in the year 1848, leaving eight sons and one daughter surviving him. Those nine children, now all deceased, have nearly a thousand living descendants scattered over the country between the east line of Ohio and the Pacific Coast, with two in New York City.

The grandchildren and later descendants who have grown up in the vicinity of the ancestral home in Illinois, have, for many years, followed the practice of holding a family reunion every years at the home of one of their members; and at their annual meeting in the year 1919, a movement was set on foot to "write a history of the Wixom family, to be made as complete and accurate as possible, tracing back as far as can be done the ancestry of Reuben Hiram Wixom and his wife, Clarissa Walker Wixom, and make a record of all facts that can be obtained of such persons and their descendants."

This movement was in answer to a call from the West; and the compiler of this record was assigned the task of gathering the necessary information and arranging the same to be published in book form. It was thought at the time of the commencement of this work that the Wixom family was a very small affair and that the labour of carrying out the plan would not be great. But as the work advanced and the magnitude of the undertaking became apparent, the circumstances of the writer also changed for the better, and during the later years he has been able to give most of his time and energies to this work.

The task of listing the names and gathering information of the descendants of Reuben Hiram Wixom was not so much a matter of difficulty as one of great labour. But the tediousness and monotony of the work was much relieved by the continual receipt of encouraging letters from the cousins, many of whom were far away and previously unknown to the writer. The exchange of pleasantries in the correspondence, however, helped to lighten the burden of the work; and while there was naturally a feeling of relief when that part of the work was finished, it was, withal, mingled with a tinge of regret.

In tracing the ancestry, however, difficulties were presented at the start that seemed almost insurmountable. The records at hand were meager and the well established traditions of the family did not go back very far; but both proved to be sufficient for the purpose, when used in connection with certain records, which good fortune afterward placed in the hands of the writer.

Through a vigorous combing over of the towns in central and western New York, by an extensive correspondence with local officials there, other branches of the Wixom family were discovered. Those people kindly referred the writer to one of their members, a lady living in a distant city, who had secured abundant records of our early ancestors. This information was followed up with splendid results; and it is a great pleasure here to acknowledge the indebtedness, and extend feelings of gratitude to Mrs. Cornelia Mead Bagley of Minneapolis, a Wixom descendant of Robert II, for complete copies of the early records of the Wixom family that she had secured at a cost of twelve years of constant labour and a large expenditure of money. For without this almost Providential aid the writer would have been unable to obtain that all-important information; for he had neither the equipment nor the means to make the necessary original research for the purpose.

Early in the year 1923 the work was practically finished, in accordance with the original plan; and it was the plain duty of the writer at that time to pass the manuscripts to the printer. But a temptation presented itself that was difficult to resist, and it was finally yielded to.

At that time the writer had partial lists of some other branches of the Wixom family that he had stumbled onto in the general search for family information; and he conceived the plan of enlarging the scope of the work to include the names of all persons concerning whom information could be obtained, whose ancestry could be traced to Robert the First, the original emigrant of the family from England. This change of plan called for some extra years of labour, but it would make the book more complete. And inasmuch as no book concerning the Wixom family had ever been published, it was thought that this one should contain all available information on that subject, at whatever cost of time and labour to the writer; and yet there must be a reasonable limit.

This book is not complete. A few of the early families are lost for want of records in the districts to which they moved in the early days; and occasionally there is found the name of an individual who strayed away from the home nest and became lost to his people. Another difficulty on the part of the writer was the failure of some of the relatives to answer letters calling for family information. The writer had no means of compelling such people to answer his letters. To trace up all persons whose names properly belong in this book would require almost infinite labour, and the duration of the life of the writer, now near the age of three score and ten, is somewhat limited. He has, accordingly, come to what he considers a good stopping place and laid down his pen. If any other writer desires to continue this work and fill in the missing names, the field is his.

ORIGIN OF SURNAMES

Surnames, or family names, with the exceptions here given, were not used in ancient times. They are mostly a modern contrivance. The Romans had a system of surnames; but with the overthrow of the Western Empire the system was lost, and the barbarians who settled on its ruins brought back the custom of using a single name only. The Chinese had a system of surnames in use 1200 years before the Christian era.

Modern surnames commenced in England soon after the time of the Norman Conquest in 1066. The Domesday book, made in England in 1086, compiled by order of King William, was a sort of survey of England, giving the names of land owners, and compelling each of them to give some distinguishing name besides the personal name. That was the beginning of surnames in England. Many of these surnames were taken from places where the people lived, or had formerly lived. One authority states that there is hardly a town in Normandy that has not given a surname to some English family.

Surnames, being of modern use, have been taken not only from names of places, but also from names of things, events and occupations connected with the persons to whom they were applied. Thus John the smith, in time became known as John Smith; and William the turner became William Turner. The oldtime shopkeeper at Frankfort-on-the-Main had a shield for a sign over his place of business which was painted red to distinguish it from other places. In time the place and then the owner came to be called "Red Shield." In the German language of that place these words are written "roth schield," and when joined together they form the name Rothschild, which is the name still used by his descendants, the famous Hebrew money-kings. Many years ago, as the story goes, a man without a surname had a little son who was peculiarly marked by having an abnormal amount of hair on his body at a youthful age, and the father spoke of him as "my hairy son." The name clung to the lad the remainder of his life, and that is said to be the origin of the name Harrison. While this story is not authentic, yet it illustrates the way a certain class of surnames originated.

It is easy to guess the origin of the following surnames: Armstrong, Black, Carr, Fisher, Goldsmith, King, Mason, Reed, Shakespeare, Taylor, Victor, West, etc.

The name Wixom was originally Wickham, sometimes written without the letter "h". It is easy to understand how the name came to be changed from time to time, in that illiterate age when few people could read and fewer could write, and the exactness that comes from frequent writing of names was unknown.

The history of the Wickhams in England begins at the time of the Norman Conquest, in 1066. It does not appear in public records whether the first of the Wickhams were resident Britons before the conquest, or came over with the Norman invaders. Walchelin was probably a Norman, as all Norman names in England at the time of the Conquest were Anglicized, and Walchelin was named Wyckham. Walchelin's son Robert is also mentioned in the Domesday Book, which is further evidence that the Walchelins were Normans. The history of Sommershire states that Sir Robert Wyckham was knighted by Edward II at Bristol in 1327.

We find the Wickham Arms in glass windows in Swalcliffe Church, Oxford. The same arms are shown on the tomb of Rector John Wickham of Rotherfield. William Wickham bought Broughton Castle, and it is still held by his descendants. There have been several changes in this name by later generations. It is quite certain that the Wixoms of this country derive their name from the Wickhams of England and are descended from them.

The history of the Wixom family in this country begins with the landing of Robert Wixom in Massachusetts in the year 1630. He wrote the name "Wixam," but in the third generation of the family in this country, the name became quite generally written (by those who could write) "Wixom," which does not change the sound of the original name. The sound is the real name, not the spelling. In this book the former spelling will generally be ignored, and the modern spelling used.

There is one branch of the family who writes the name Wixson, and another branch who writes the name Wickson. Both changes were made more than a hundred years ago. Both changes were made by accident and both are now well established and quite proper. But the changes in the name do not change the relationship. We are all descendants of Robert Wixam the First.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY AND GENEALOGY

FIRST GENERATION

1. ROBERT WIXAM, born in England, date unknown; emigrated to Massachusetts in 1630. That was the year of the Great Emigration from England to Massachusetts. A fleet of seventeen ships in charge of John Winthrop, the newly appointed Governor of the Colony, under a new and more liberal Charter of Government, brought over more than a thousand colonists, and landed them off the mouth of Salem Harbour on the 12th day of June that year.

Robert Wixam was married about 1654, to Alice, surname unknown, born in England. He was at Plymouth in 1643 and from there moved to Eastham, Cape Cod, where he is registered as one of the legal inhabitants in 1665. His name is found in the list of inhabitants of Barnstable County who were able to bear arms in the colony, ages from 16 to 70.

Robert Wixam's will was made October 1, 1686, and proved ten days later, which fixes the time of his death between those dates. His widow, Alice Wixam, appeared before the court October 18, 1686, and testified that the inventory of her husband's estate was correct. The following is a complete copy of his will and inventory of his estate.

WILL OF ROBERT WIXAM

Robert Wixam of Eastham being very weak and infirm of body but yet in perfit memory and understanding and not knowing the time of his departure, but dayly expecting when my change will be, leave this as my last will and testament.

I do give unto my daughter Jemimah one browne cow with a star in the forehead and one hive of beese and houseroom and privileges in the orchard as long as she lives unmarried.

I give to my grandchild Nathaniel Mayo one cow calf. The rest of my personal estate, my debts being paid, stock and moveables I give unto my loving wife Alice for her support during her natural life, and that part of my dwelling house that I now live in the benefit of my orchard during her natural life.

It. I give unto my son Titus Wixam the other part of my dwelling house and outhousing and all my land on that side of the highway my housing stands upon and all my meadow adjoining to it, and half an acre of meadow lying in Knock Harbour, lying between to parcels of Thomas Williams meadow and the other part of my dwelling house, after my wifes decease, and a parcel of upland lying between the mouth of Little Skiket and Knock Harbour and a small field of upland above the highway which he now improves with two acres bredth of land from that field down to the highway, against the house.

It. I give to my son Barnabas Wixam all the remainder of my thirty acres of upland above the highway with all my meadow and marsh-ground lying in great Names Cakitt by the beach and a small parcel of meadow lying in Knock Harbour, between Daniel Cole and Giles Hopkins.

It. My will is that my two sons Titus and Barnabas Wixam do provide for and winter four or five cattle annually during her natural life. Further my will is that after my wifes decease my son Titus Wixam shall have one fether bed and an iron pott. And my son Barnabas shall have another fether bed and a brass kittle.

This I leave as my last will and testament with liberty to add to or alter as I may see cause, if God shall be pleased to prolong my days.

As witness my hand and seal this first day of October in the year of our Lord One Thousand, Six Hundred Eighty and Six.

THIRD GENERATION

14. JOSHUA WIXAM, son of Barnabas (5), b. March 14, 1695, at Eastham, Barnstable Co., Mass., the settlement then called Cape Cod; date and place of death unknown; md. March 9, 1715, at Yarmouth, to Hannah Baker who died Nov. 27, 1730; md. (2) about Dec. 1731, to Elizabeth Chase of Harwich (b. Oct. 6, 1718), dau. of William Chase and Dorcas Baker.

From the first marriage two children were born, Reuben and Hannah. The son, Reuben, married a younger sister of his step-mother, which made him a brother-in-law of his father, and the older sister became the mother-in-law of the younger. The situation was a little novel, to be sure, but quite proper.

Here is the beginning of the use of four Christian names not previously found in the family, and found later only among the descendants of Joshua. They are the names Joshua, Reuben, Solomon and Dorcas.

Here may be given an amusing local law or ordinance found among the early records of Barnstable County, which provides that: "Every single man must kill three crows and six blackbirds each year. None shall be permitted to marry until he complies with this requisition."

In the annals of Dennis, Barnstable County, Mass., appears the name of Joshua Wixam in the year 1749. He was then a representative for two years and a selectman for five years. Many Wixams held public offices in those early days.

26. SOLOMON WIXSON, son of Joshua Wixam (14), was born at Yarmouth, Mass., on the 10th day of August 1751. At the age of about four years he moved with his parents, brothers and sisters, to Dutchess County, New York. There he grew to manhood; served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War; married about the year 1777, to Mary Randall; and about the year 1791 moved with his family to what is now Steuben County, New York, then a wilderness. There he remained the rest of his life, and died there on the 11th day of April, 1813.

Solomon Wixson was the youngest of nine children in the family of his parents, and was about a year old when the family moved to Dutchess Co. from Massachusetts. There he grew to manhood and from that County served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War as a Private in the 7th Regiment of Minute Men, Militia of Dutchess Co., commanded by Col. Jacobus Swarthout, as shown in "New York in the Revolution," Vol. 1, pp. 156 and 252.

A century and a half ago people were more illiterate than they are today. In those days they read little and wrote less. They often made mistakes in writing their names and in pronouncing them; and Solomon's people at that time erroneously wrote the name Wixson. Later the other members of the family discovered the error and corrected it accordingly. But in the meantime Solomon had moved to the wilderness in the western part of the State, and never again met any of his people, and never corrected his name. He was always Wixson. All of his descendants follow that form and spelling of the name, and very properly so, for it has become fully established. The writer is inclined to believe that this branch of the big family is more eminent than any other. Some members have dropped the letter "s" in writing the name, but this does not change the sound of the name.

It is pretty safe to assume that all persons who carry this name are direct descendants of the above named Solomon Wixson, or are descended from John Wixson or Isaac Wixson, who emigrated from Dutchess Co. to the western wilderness when the name in Dutchess Co. was uniformly written Wixson. The record of the first Government census taken in 1790 by Deputy U. S. Marshalls gives all our people there this form of the name.

Little is known of Solomon Wixson and his family during the time they lived in Dutchess County, where seven sons were born. In the spring of 1790, Solomon made a journey to the western part of the state to find a location for a future home. He found a place to his liking in what is now called the Finger Lakes District, near the present town of Wayne, in what was then Steuben, near Schuyler, County. There he built a log cabin on the west side of the outlet of Waneta Lake and cleared some land for cultivation. In the fall of the year he returned to Dutchess Co. for his wife and children, and the following spring moved family and effects to the new home in the wilderness.

In making the westward journey the family traveled by flatboat up the Susquehanna and Chumung Rivers to what is now Elmira, then called Newtown. There the boat was left and the remainder of the journey was made by ox team transit. Here the writer pauses to wonder if Solomon Wixson knew at that time that his brother, Barnabas Wixom, twelve years his senior, who had preceded him to the wilderness, was then living near Newtown.

The new home was in a wild country. Only two or three white families lived in that vicinity. There were many Indians there, with Indian villages nearby, but no account of Indian troubles are mentioned by present day descendants.

During the first winter in the new home Mr. Wixson learned to his chagrin and sorrow that he could not obtain a clear title to the land he had selected; so the following year he purchased 200 acres nearby from Elder Sanford, who owned two thousand acres of timberland in that vicinity. He paid for the land at the rate of two shillings per acre, the equivalent of about twenty-five cents of our present money.

There the parents spent the remainder of their lives and there is their final resting place. The sons helped the father clear land and cultivate it, construct necessary outbuildings, and do all other work that falls to the farmer's lot, including the planting of an orchard at an early day. And in the old mansion there, built in the later years of Solomon's life, can be seen a wall clock with wooden movements, still in perfect running order, that represents the efforts of Mrs. Solomon Wixson, who sold enough dried apples to pay its purchase price, the equivalent of fifty dollars.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

The original Wixson home was a log house that a few years later was superseded by one of frame which still stands this year (1928). In the more prosperous times of later life the old pioneer built a home much larger and more modernly equipped, the present mansion now sunning itself in the glow of more than a hundred years of family pride. It has fourteen rooms, each large enough for a small ballroom. The house is made of white pine lumber, all of which was cut by the Wixson men from their own land and handled by them at the sawmill. Every room has a beamed ceiling, the massive blocks representing the life offering of majestic pines, which at one time stood sentinel over Indian War Dances or watched the curling smoke from the calumet.

Some of the furnishings of the house are of old pioneer use and make, with spinning-wheel and home-made articles of furniture and the like; but most attractive of all are the Indian relics, including thousands of arrowheads, some of which the National Museum Boards have told the present owner are argolite projectiles, older than the flint period. Stone mixing bowls, hatchets and Indian articles of every conceivable variety and description that have been picked up through that section now make a most interesting collection.

The title to the place has continued in the Wixson family to the present time, and is now owned by Edgar M. Wixson, a great-grandson of the original owner, who occupies the place at Hammondsport, New York. This place is called "The Old Homestead." It is the Mecca of all the descendants of "Solomon the First," the original settler. And serving as a fitting background to enhance the beauty of the old mansion and in its memory are many a legend of Indian lore. To the imaginative observer Lake Waneta and its sister Lake Lamoka might have been two crystal drops, fallen from the fingers of the Creator when He spread His hand over central New York and left its imprint in the Finger Lakes; succeeding generations have handed down traditions concerning this region. One Indian legend says:

"Lamoka was the son of a powerful warrior and Waneta was the beautiful daughter of an Indian chief. These two, in spite of the bitter hatred that existed between their fathers, found life unbearable when it did not offer opportunity for love-making, as other pairs have found it so from the beginning of time. Waneta's father could not sympathize with his only child. It had been a long time since he had been in love, and it seems that he had forgotten what it was like. So he sought revenge on Lamoka, and sent four of his bravest redskins, with the great Keuka as their leader, to destroy the wooer. Lamoka was a brave warrior but the end of the fight found him sorely wounded, with life rapidly ebbing away. 'When you die, I die too,' his sweetheart told him as she paddled with him to a post where quicksand gave them the key to the gate of the Happy Hunting Ground. Here they found, it is hoped, the happiness denied them on the shores of the lakes which now bear their names."

Many times, and especially when the harvest moon makes a shimmering path across the water, though not a leaf stirs in the trees, the waves will splash angrily against the shore, without any apparent provocation. Indians of Waneta's day said it was the spirits of the two lovers still protesting against the injustice of their fathers; and later days have given no better explanation.

The descendants of Solomon Wixson had for many years held annual family gatherins at the Old Homestead; in the year 1891, the centennial year of the settlement of the place, the reunion was a big affair, and was well attended. Edgar M. Wixson, the owner of the estate, was the Family Historian, and had collected considerable information regarding the descendants of the founder of the family. A year later Mrs. Herbert S. Wixson of Wayne took charge of the historical work, and after several years of labor practically completed the lists of descendants of Solomon the First.

No efforts had been made to trace the ancestors of Solomon, and only a few vague traditions of ancestry were known to the members of the family. The compiler of this book, however, before getting in communication with this branch of the family, had obtained much information on the early history of the Wixom family from the Town records in Massachusetts, where family records had been officially recorded for more than a hundred years. From those records it was an easy matter to trace the ancestry of Solomon the First, and also to learn how the name came to be changed. When these proofs of ancestry were furnished the Historian of the Wixson Family at Wayne, the writer was in turn furnished with the list of descendants of Solomon the First, consisting of 586 names, arranged by generations. Then the work commenced of hunting up as many as possible and securing family information.

Many members of the Wixson family in an early day moved to Sanilac County, Michigan, and some of them helped to organize that county and held county offices there. One old timer writes: "There were so many Wixsons in Sanilac County in the early days that a man could not kick a dog without offending some Wixson or a relative of that family." Quite a number moved to Canada; but most of them returned to New York, or settled in Sanilac County. Each one will be described further under his own name.

Fredericksburg then included Patterson, Carmel and Kent. Elijah bought a farm in Patterson and lived on this farm until his death. His children all married and lived in that vicinity. In later years Isaac, one of his sons, gave his farm to his daughter Martha, and moved to Hector, then in Tompkins Co., N. Y. The history of Putnam Co., formerly part of Dutchess Co., by Peletreau, gives Elijah Wixam's name in a list of houses occupied in Patterson in 1798. Elijah served in the Revolutionary War in the same Regiment with his son Elijah. He was a Private in Third Regiment, Dutchess County Militia, enlisted May 18, 1776, under the command of Col. John Field. This Regiment was formed on sundry alarms in 1779-80-82. He also served as a Private in the 5th Regiment, Dutchess County Militia, under the command of Col. William Humphrey. Elijah Wixam made his will in 1803, and in it all his children are mentioned. The will was proved Jan. 14, 1813. Elijah and his wife Mary are buried in the old cemetery at Patterson, in what is now Putnam Co., N.Y.

The Government census of 1810 shows that the family was then living in Cayuga County, N. Y., and the traditions of the family state that the first four children were born there. It must have been about the year 1811 that the family moved to northern Kentucky and about two years later they moved to southern Ohio. There the family continued to reside until the spring of 1827, when it was decided to move to Texas, then a part of Mexico. Mexico had recently secured her independence from Spain, and was offering inducements in the nature of land grants to Americans who would settle there. It seems that the offer on the part of the Mexican government appealed to Barnabas Wickson, and he decided to take advantage of it.

The most practical method of transportation to the new country was by flatboat on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to the Gulf of Mexico and that method was adopted. A large flatboat was made of logs, and on the big raft was built a house for shelter against the storms and the arrows of the hostile Indians on the shores. A good supply of provisions and some cows and pigs were taken aboard to stock their home.

All went well until the last end of the journey, when it seems that the night watchman on the boat failed to observe that they had passed the mouth of the river, and in the morning it was discovered that the flatboat was hung up on a sandbar in the Gulf of Mexico. There they were stranded for three days, and the situation seemed desperate. Then a sailing vessel hove in sight and the curiosity of its captain induced him to investigate the queer craft on the sandbar. He came aboard the Ohio schooner, looked over the situation and offered to help the emigrants out of their plight by towing their craft into Galveston Bay. That he did, and he left it there for the people to get to shore as best they could. It was afterward discovered that the captain of the sailing ship, who had thus kindly aided the Ohio emigrants, was none other than the famous pirate of that day, of Spanish or Mexican breed, named Diaz. He probably did not wish to appear on shore or he might have rendered further aid.

The family was still in a difficult situation, for they had to contrive some means of reaching the shore. That feat was accomplished after some difficulty and with some loss of property, but with no loss of life. Today the descendants of those people use the expression, "They all got their feet wet before reaching shore." That landing at Galveston was made on the 4th of July, 1827 and it was probably the most memorable 4th of July that any of the party ever experienced.

The family moved about for a time, but finally settled at a place about sixty miles northwest of Galveston, selected a tract of land that they liked and made application for it. This application for the land is dated March 9, 1831, which was approved by the Mexican authorities and patent issued April 4, 1831.

The application for the land states that it is written by a Mr. Aramio, who called himself "The Colonists' Company Agent," and signs the application for Barnabas Wixom because Barnabas could not write. The agent probably made the best guess he could as to the spelling of the name and wrote it "Barnabas Wickson," and here is the explanation of how the name came to be changed. The younger people of the family, after they had learned to read and write a little, very naturally referred to the old man's patent to the land to learn how to write the family name. The patent to the land calls for one league, being 4,428 acres. The oldest son of Barnabas, Asa, then 28 years of age, soon after made application for a quarter league of land, adjoining that granted to his father. In his application for the land Asa signs by "his mark," which is further evidence of the illiteracy of the family, confirming the theory that the change of the family name was by accident. The same

This is a picture of the "Old Homestead" which J. H. had prepared for this book (see page 8). Mrs. Waneta Hildebrant (2545), a great, great granddaughter of Solomon Wixson (26), writes: "As to the 'Old Homestead,' it is still standing, but now belongs to Horace Conell. I own 307 feet of the original lake property, though. There is just a field that separates my place from the 'Old Homestead.'" agent who acted for the father also acted for the son in the land transactions, and apparently copied the name used in the father's application in making up the application for the son. All of the descendants of Barnabas continue to use this form of the name.

The members of this family seem to be widely scattered over the State of Texas, and it seems that the different members have not kept track of each other. The writer has not been successful in finding most of them. But quite a number of them have been reported who fought with distinction in the war for Texas Independence in 1835-1836; and also a number who distinguished themselves as soldiers in the Confederate Army during the Civil War.

Nov. 22, 1803, in the State of New York to Clarissa Walker, (b. Nov. 25, 1787, in Vermont; d. July 9, 1871, in Mendota, LaSalle Co., Ill.), dau. of Thomas Walker and Abigail Atwater.

For nearly seven years after marriage Mr. Wixom continued to live in the State of New York, in the Township of Hector, then in Seneca Co., now in the County of Schuyler. But in the spring of 1810 he moved with his family to Franklin Co., Ohio. There he took up land at a place about ten miles south of the present city of Columbus. It was a wild district inhabited by wild animals and wild men. But that feature had its advantages for the newcomer, for his ability to cope with the wilderness was his main stock in trade. The abundance of game in the forest and his skill at hunting and trapping kept the family well supplied with food, game and furs. And, as the head of the household could make every article needed, the family lived in plenty. He made wheels for spinning flax and wool, looms for weaving cloth, and shoes and mocassins for the family. Later, after the district became more settled, and afterward in Illinois, he made bedsteads, chairs, half-bushel measures and various other articles to sell to others. Several times in Ohio, and later at his home in Illinois at the outbreak of the war with Mexico, he made drums and sold them to the military organizations, and family tradition says that one of those drums sounded on the field of Buena Vista.

His wife too was equal to the demands of the times, and nobly did her part. She had been trained in the days of girlhood to spin both wool and flax, and to weave and make the clothes that were needed for the family. They were soon able to produce their own wool and flax on their little farm in the clearing of the forest home.

But the situation in Ohio had never been satisfactory. It was a timbered country and a hard task to cut the trees and clear the land for a farm, and the clayey and rather unproductive soil was hard to cultivate among the stumps. The traveling preachers, the "circuit riders," came to the rescue. They told Mr. Wixom of the broad prairies and rich soil of Illinois. He received like information from others, for the tide of emigration had set in, and was moving toward the Prairie State. The records in the office of the Recorder of Deeds at Columbus, Ohio, show that on August 18, 1827, Reuben H. Wixom and his wife Clarissa conveyed one hundred acres of land to Horton Howard in consideration of five hundred dollars.

It was late in the fall of the year, however, before the move was undertaken by ox team transit. The family reached their destination, Springfield, Illinois, on Christmas Day, 1827. It was then only a small village, ten years before it became the capital of the state. Mr. Wixom bought ten acres of land, with a house on it, adjoining the town. There the family lived for the newt two years cultivating the land and raising garden truck and feed for domestic animals.

Mr. Wixom had received personal instruction in a system of medical practice from a Samuel Thompson, and was what was then called a "steam doctor." He soon built up a good practice, and as his wife was a skillful midwife, she became his assistant in the new venture. He seems to have been remarkably successful in curing the sick and built up a large practice. That crude system of treating the sick that has been the ridicule of physicians in later years may have had its chief virtue in avoiding the use of strong drugs, and it may be that the chills and agues of that day yielded readily to the roots and herbs that Dr. Wixom gave his patients. Good nursing probably counted for much, for we must not overlook the valuable assistance he often received from Clarissa as midwife and nurse. But his remarkable success as a doctor compelled him to quit the practice of medicine; he found that he could no longer stand the physical strain. He decided that there was but one way to quit the practice--he must move to a place beyond the calling distance of his acquaintances. That he did.

In the spring of 1830 he sold his property at Springfield and moved to a place about sixty miles further north in Tazewell County, where he found a farm to his liking, and there he took up his new home. This place was about ten miles east of Peoria, then called Fort Clark. It was a good move. He now had the first piece of real good farming land that he had ever owned. The soil was productive, yielding abundantly of everything planted. There was plenty to do on the farm and everybody worked. Five years the family lived there and prospered. At the end of the third year Nathan and Justin, the first and fourth sons, went prowling over the state to find a better location, and they found it in the northwestern part of LaSalle Co. about fifty miles north and east of the Tazewell Co. home. Two years later the family moved to the new location. It was in the spring of 1835. There Mr. Wixom purchased land adjoining a new settlement named Homer, in Troy Grove Township, and soon afterward bought a half-interest in the townsite. Two years later he traded his land at Homer for a farm four miles further north and there he continued to live the remainder of his life. In his book of memoranda and accounts he records the date of moving to his new home and seems to prophesy that he will continue at that place for sixteen years without another move. But if so, the prophecy failed, for he died too soon. It was his last move. He never was a rover; every move he made was after careful and deliberate judgment, and every place he moved to was better than the place he left. He seems to have made no mistakes in that line.

According to a description left by his youngest son, the man who lived with him longest and knew him best, Reuben H. Wixom was "a very strong and active man, heavy set, full chest, with lots of hair on his breast and arms, and on his head it was fine and silky. His face was rather round and fair. He shaved smooth, but generally left a little bunch of hair below each ear. He was bald-headed and about five feet nine inches tall, and weighed one hundred eighty to two hundred pounds. Having always lived in a new country he was very skillful in hunting and trapping; and I have heard him say that he had often killed four deer by nine or ten o'clock in the morning, but was never able to get another deer the same day. My father was a better man physically, morally, and intellectually than any of his sons." The last statement is a strong one, for Reuben Hiram Wixom was a breeder of men.

From what we can learn of his character the conclusion must be that Reuben Hiram Wixom was gifted with an unusual amount of physical energy; that he had much in his make-up of the severity of the Puritans of the earlier days; and that his rigid exactness in dealing with others was an honest application of the Golden Rule, for he was always rigid and exact with himself; and he seems to have taken satisfaction in being that way.

In politics he was an ardent Whig, and just as ardent a Baptist in religion. Frequent prayer meetings were held at his home, where a traveling preacher occasionally officiated and neighbors attended.

Clarissa Walker Wixom, his wife, is entitled to more than passing notice. She was a daughter of Thomas Walker and Abigail Atwater, as above noted. Family tradition says that her father was a soldier, a Petty Officer in the English Army under General Burgoyne, who invaded the State of New York from Canada in 1777, was wounded at the Battle of Bennington, and left on the field by his comrades who saw fit to retreat in a hurry to a more healthy locality. He was picked up by an American family who lived nearby and nursed to health. In the meantime Burgoyne's army had surrendered at Saratoga, and that English soldier, Thomas Walker, remained there, used his good judgment and married an American girl and settled in Vermont. Later the family moved to the State of New York. Abigail Atwater, b. Sept. 19, 1754, dau. of Ebenezer Atwater, md. Thomas Walker June 3, 1778. Their youngest daughter, Clarissa, married Reuben Hiram Wixom. Her ancestry is shown in the Atwater History and Genealogy, traced through the probate courts of England back to Thomas Atwater, who died in Kent Co., England, in the year 1484. That was eight years before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

Joseph Earl was a Baptist preacher, and like many others of that profession in those early days, he had a mechanical trade that he followed as a side-line to insure a living for himself and family. He seems to have been an all-around mechanic. He was a cabinet maker, a wheelright and occasionally made shoes for sale to the public.

In 1803 his church officials sent Mr. Earl to a new location in Canada, at a place north of Lake Erie. There the family lived and prospered for ten years, and there five children were born to them. The pulpit and shop were well patronized, and happiness and contentment prevailed in the family. But in the summer of 1812 war broke out between the United States and England, lasting until December 1814, which brought Canada in hostile conflict with our country. A rumor came to Mr. Earl and several of his American neighbors that they would all be forced into the British Army and compelled to fight against their own country. That was in November 1813. Then those Americans got busy. They must leave Canada and get back to their native land. The journey must be made secretly and they must travel by night to avoid interference by Canadian officials. Complete plans were made and the route of travel decided on. Then one man made a journey over the proposed road and arranged for convenient and proper stopping places for members of the party to conceal themselves and rest during daylight and continue their journey by night. This scout returned to the settlement in Canada and reported; all plans on the line of retreat were properly arranged. The trip must be made with sleds, and they must all wait for a snap of cold weather and a fall of snow to make the journey. Those devout Baptists must now lay low and trust in God for favorable weather. They did.

The ideal cold snap came in December, and the several families were bundled into sleds, taking with them what few articles they could conveniently carry, left homes and possessions, and made off in the night. They traveled by night and rested by day. The third night they crossed Lake Erie on the ice, landing at a point near Erie, Pennsylvania. Joseph Earl and family then went to their old home in New York. See page 18a.

At that time there was considerable emigration from the State of New York to Ohio. Mrs. Earl's brother, Reuben H. Wixom (51) had moved to Ohio in 1810. In 1815 the Earl family moved to Scioto Co., Ohio, and in 1817 they moved to Franklin County and in 1820 to Logan County where the father died in 1822 and the mother died there in 1838. They are buried side by side in Cherokee Cemetery near Huntsville, Logan Co., Ohio.

Wixom is mentioned in the annals of that State as having been appointed to fill the place made vacant by Samuel Hamilton as an official of the Methodist Church in 1828. After living in Ohio for a few years he moved to Illinois, where he was a co-worker with such men as Peter Cartright, John St. Clair, and Russell Biglow. He moved to Minnesota later in life, and died there in his 79th year.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

There appears to be some doubt as to where the Joseph Earl family lived during the period of time from 1803 to 1813. While there is a Joseph Earl family listed on the census records of New York in the year 1910, there is not conclusive proof that it is the same family. Following are accounts by Sylvester Henry Earl and his son, Joseph I. Earl, which indicate a difference of opinion. Also, in the original history as it was given to J. H. Wixom when he compiled this book, it was indicated that Joseph Earl was a Baptist minister, while Joseph I. Earl mentions that he was a Methodist minister.

The diary of Sylvester Henry Earl reads as follows:

"This is a history of the life of Sylvester H. Earl and of my progenitors: commencing with my Grandfather Joseph Earl who was born in the state of New York. My grandfather was the father of a large family. I can only give the names of Solomon, Daniel, William, John and a daughter by the name of Lois, and then my father whos name was also Joseph; he was also born in the state of New York about the year 1780ty. He was educated for a Methodist Parson ---- when he was 20 years old he became acquainted with Dorcus Tabitha Wixom whom he married soon after. She was born in the State of Vermont, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barnabus Wixom. My parents still lived in the State of New York until the year 1812, and during that year we moved to Canada but finding the people greatly excited in relation to the War between the English and the Americans he concluded to return to New York again, and here he remained..12 years during which time that had born to them five sons whos names are as follows: Palmer W., John T., Joel, Asa C., and Alanson Earl. Then they moved to the State of Ohio, Ciota Co., where I was born in the year 1815 August 10th. When I was 2-3 years old my father moved to Franklin Co., State of Ohio, where my brother Joseph W. Earl was born and also my sister Eliza, and here my brother Joseph died. My father then moved to Logan Co., where my brother James C. (James Calvin) was born....."

The following notes were written by Joseph I. Earl, son of Sylvester Henry Earl:

"The reader will note that father says that his father still remained a minister, and that he and his wife went to Canada in the year 1812 and returned the same year on account of the war between the U.S. and Canada. I claim the following facts about it: Grandfather Earl was a Methodist minister and was sent into Canada on a mission soon after they were married, about the year 1803 or 1804, as it is positive that they had several children born there. Their second son, John T. Earl, was born in the year 1806, December 12th. No doubt it is correct that they left Canada in 1812 because of the war but they had been there several years before that."

They moved from New York State to the Province of Ontario, Canada, in 1804, and settled on land adjoining that of his brother Joseph, near Claremont in Ontario County. According to a tradition of the family, Joshua Wixson moved to Canada under peculiar circumstances. He aided by carrying a passenger in his wagon for several miles in the escape of one fleeing the State of New York to avoid payment of debt. As the story goes, the law at that time was such that a person lending assistance, even though innocent in so doing, which enabled a person to escape from his debts--the one giving such help became responsible for such debts. It then became necessary for Joshua Wixson to flee, as he had not the means to take care of the obligations placed upon him by what he supposed was an act of kindness. Many years afterward he returned from Canada with small sacks of gold coin secreted about different parts of his clothing, paid the debts and thereby cleared his name and his conscience. He then settled on a farm near Lexington, in Sanilac Co., Michigan, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was a Baptist preacher; and the history of his life in Canada is the history of the Baptist church in the townships of Pickering, Uxbridge and White Church, in the vicinity where he lived. All of Joshua's children except Ruth, who died at a ripe old age at Claremont, emigrated to Sanilac Co., Mich.

A letter from the General Land Office of the State of Texas, dated Feb. 25, 1927, says: "The records of this office show that a quarter league of land, situated in what is now Fort Bend County, Texas, was granted to Asa Wickson on the 23rd of April 1831, under Stephen F. Austin's second contract. Austin's colonist book shows the following entry: Asa Wickson, 26 years of age, a single man, farmer, from Ohio, arrived December 1827, took the oath January 24th, wants land above and adjoining B. Wickson on Big Creek." This latter is No. 49.

The application in the original title to Asa Wickson is signed with his mark.

The Assessor of Coleman County, Texas, writes: "I find that we have had in an early day in this county a man by the name of Asa Wickson as we have a grantee by that name in a tract of land near the town of Burkett, comprising 3,175 acres as the original grant."

A niece of Asa Wickson writes: "Uncle Asa was killed by an old work steer."

140. CYRUS WICKSON, son of Barnabas (49), b. Sept. 11, 1812, in Ky.; d. March 5, 1886, in Mason Co., Texas; m. Feb. 2, 1837, to Adelia Jones (b. July 16, 1815; d. May 28, 1889). He was a saddle-maker by trade but served as a sailor and was a soldier in the Texas war against Mexico for independence in 1835-6. He took part in several Indian fights in company with others, often with his brother Dyran.

After an Indian depredation a party was generally organized who took the trail and followed it with satisfactory results. There were also fights with bands of Mexicans in the border warfare that was going on at intervals for some years.

On one occasion in company with his brother Dyran and a man called "Big Foot" Wallace, the party chased a band of Mexicans over the boundary line, but before they could get back they were captured and held as prisoners of war. Cyrus was landed in jail, but his companions were put to work under a military guard. Dyran and Wallace, by means of a splendid stratagem, managed to escape from their guards and broke for the Mosquite brush; and after terrible hardships and privations, worked their way back to old Texas--footsore, ragged and starved.

They mourned the fate of poor Cyrus, who was left behind in jail and no help could be rendered him. But in less than a month, to their great surprise and joy, Cyrus came riding home on one of the most beautiful horses to be found in any land. A splendidly built, beautifully shaped creamy white mare, with a flowing tail that tipped the ground, and a mane that reached almost to her knees, cantering proudly under a silver mounted saddle of Mexican style, and on her back was one of the proudest and happiest men in all Texas. He afterward told how he made love to the jailer's daughter, and how she had arranged for his escape, and had furnished him with the horse and saddle and a revolver. Cyrus is quoted as saying that he would not take a thousand dollars for the mare.

One of the Texas cousins writes as follows: "I was well acquainted with old Uncle Cyrus. I can tell you something very uncommon that he did; he married the same woman three times. He married first when Texas was in an unsettled question with Mexico. He gave a bond for a marriage certificate. When conditions of the country were settled and the government was established, he married her again to be certain of legality. They disagreed after that and separated, and he married another woman, and there were two children by them. I think both are dead. Then he drew a pension from the government, and he married the first wife again to give her the benefit of his pension should she outlive him, which she did by several years.

Cyrus Wickson served two years as a regular in the Confederate Army during the Civil War, then he worked for two years as a saddlemaker for the soldiers.

Aug. 14, 1905, at Higgins, Liscomb Co., Texas), dau. of Robert Prueitt and Nancy Bailey. She drew a pension for many years as widow of her husband, who had served in the Texas war for independence, 1835-6.

Dyran participated in the Battle of San Jacinto and the retaking of the Alamo at San Antonio. In the latter battle he was in the front rank that stormed the works, and was the third man over the wall, but just as he landed inside of the works, a Mexican soldier clubbed at him with the butt of his gun. Dyran caught the falling weapon with his hand and saved his head from the blow but in so doing his thumb was torn from his hand and fell back on his wrist. The captain of the storming party was close behind and ran the Mexican through with his sword before he could strike again. Dyran was thus forced out of the hand-to-hand fighting, but not out of the battle; for he used his pistols with telling effect at short range. Dyran afterward stated that the cleaning up of the place after the battle was as bad a job as the fight.

Dyran participated in several Indian wars, and in trailing the Indians after depredations made by them. In these excursions he was often accompanied by his brother Cyrus, and they were always successful.

151. NATHAN WIXOM, son of Reuben Hiram (51), b. Nov. 22, 1804, in the Township of Hector, then in Seneca Co., now in Schuyler Co., N. Y.; d. July 29, 1867, at San Bernardino, Calif.; md. Nov. 1, 1827, in Franklin Co., Ohio, to Betsy Eliza Hadlock (b. Apr. 6, 1811, in Seneca Co., N.Y.; d. Feb. 24, 1890, at San Bernardino, Calif.); dau. of David Hadlock and Diana Straight.

Nathan Wixom was five years of age when he moved with his parents to Franklin Co., Ohio. There he worked with his father and younger brothers, clearing the forest and cultivating the land. Many years later his youngest brother said, "Nathan and Jesse took the lead in all of the work, as they were the oldest. They always worked hard."

Nathan was married in Ohio a few days before the family started on the journey to Illinois in 1827. He and his wife accompanied his parents and brothers to Springfield, Ill. Two years later all of them moved to a farm about fifty miles to the north and settled in the County of Tazewell. But with that unusual energy that marked every step in his career, Nathan Wixom was never quite satisfied with any locality where he lived, but always kept an eye open for something better, and he generally found it. Accordingly, in 1833, accompanied by his brother Justin, he made an exploring trip to a district about sixty miles farther to the north and east to a place in the northwest part of LaSalle County. There the brothers found a location to their liking, purchased land and settled there. There they found the settlers were few and there was plenty of room for expansion. That year both men moved their families to that district, and two years later their parents, with all children but Solomon, moved to LaSalle County, and all of them except Nathan and Urban continued to live there the remainder of their lives.

About the year 1840 Nathan and his family moved to a place in Woodford County, not far from the old home of his parents in Tazewell. There they lived for a time and prospered. Nathan Wixom always prospered.

About that time there was much activity in central Illinois among the missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called Mormons. Nathan Wixom and his wife were converted to the new faith and in June 1845 they disposed of their property in Woodford County and moved to a place near the City of Nauvoo, on the Mississippi River, then the headquarters of the Mormon Church, and purchased a farm there.

Three years later the Mormons were on their way to Utah and so was Nathan Wixom. The Mormons had a regular stopping place called Winter Quarters, now Florence, Nebraska, just north of the present city of Omaha. Council Bluffs, on the Iowa side of the Missouri River, was a part of the Mormon camp. To Council Bluffs Nathan Wixom and family moved in 1846 and remained there until the spring of 1850. It is very likely that he farmed land in that vicinity while he lived there, for there was plenty of vacant land there that he could have used for that purpose.

In the spring of 1850 he moved with his family to Springville, Utah, where he remained one year, then journied on to California and settled near San Juan Mission in Monterey County. There the family lived until November 1853 when they moved to Los Angeles Co. and settled near San Gabriel Mission. In 1855 they moved to the town of San Bernardino. There Nathan Wixom and his wife continued to live the remainder of their days, and in southern California are most of their living descendants.

Concerning the family life of Nathan Wixom in California, his youngest daughter writes: "One bright summer day we landed in the beautiful Monterey, a little Spanish town built of adobe. Here to me was the beginning of life. My father bought land, built a home, planted barley, wheat and corn, had fine horses and cattle, and was prosperous beyond anything dreamed of in the old days of farming. After father's return from a trip to Santa Barbara he concluded to trade his home for land in that country where he thought the people were more up-to-date. The new place was among the hills of live oaks away back from the little town on the coast where mother and the younger children lived. Willard, Jasper, and Joe, our Indian boy, were on the ranch with father most of the time, caring for livestock and improving the place.

"After father's trip to San Bernardino he bought land under the shadow of the mountain with the great arrowhead on its side, pointing to the hot springs just beneath, which it was claimed God placed there as a sign for His chosen people to come from all parts of the world and inhabit this wonderful valley and drink from the waters placed there for the healing of the nations.

"Then came the building of a house. Like all other houses in California at that time, it was of adobe. Father, Willard, Jasper and Joe made a thick mud plaster of black, sticky soil, which was poured into wooden boxes the size of four or five ordinary bricks, turned the mud out on smooth ground, where it was turned over every day or two and left to dry in the sun. Two tiers of these made a thick wall which would last many years if properly roofed. A barn was built farther out of town. Made of lumber, it was large enough to store any grain that might be raised, such as corn, wheat and barley. Then was built a stable or shed for a few of the fine horses father was raising. I remember one dapple-gray horse of perchon stock for which father paid fifteen hundred dollars. Most of his horses were of Kentucky breed, dark bay in color, with small, intelligent heads and graceful necks. All were gentle and easy to handle. No one was allowed to strike or abuse them.

"Ours was a busy family and happy in successful endeavors. After moving into the new house all went to work with a will, improving and building house after house in the town to rent, as the location was very desirable for business of all kinds. In a few years father had quite an income from rents and was the owner of much land in and around the city.

"My father was of medium height and weighed averaging 160 pounds. He was of nervous temperament, walked with short, quick steps, always busy and in a hurry and quick in making a decision. He had dark grey eyes and light curly hair, and had a habit of whistling when in deep thought. He was by nature religious, loved music and outdoor life, good natured and enjoyed a joke.

"My father builded well for his children and brought up a family of boys of which any man should be proud." To this last remark the writer will add that Nathan Wixom and Betsy Eliza Hadlock also brought up a family of girls of which any parents ought to be proud.

Nathan Wixom seemed always ready to push ahead into unbroken territory, allured by the hope of larger wealth, greater freedom of action; and always by the mystery of the unknown and the certainty of adventure. In his later life he was anxious to dispose of his California property and move to a more unsettled district in Mexico, but his wife exercised her veto power with much emphasis and the move was not made.

(In his autobiography he says he was born in Tompkins Co. but inasmuch as Tompkins County was not created until seven years after he moved from that State, and the Township of Hector was a part of the new County of Tompkins, it is clear that he was mislead by looking over a map of the State some years after he he had ceased to live there.)

He was twice married. The first marriage, April 14, 1831, at Springfield, Sangaman Co., Illinois, was to Artemisia Rich (b. Sept. 22, 1811, at Big Bone Lick, Boone Co., Ky.), dau. of Joseph Rich and Nancy O'Neal; she d. Her mother, Nancy O'Neal, a dau. of Charles O'Neal and Jane Shaw, was born April 24, 1782, and died Oct. 5, 1847, at Salt Lake Valley, Utah.

Jesse A. Wixom's second marriage was at Troy Grove, Ill., Oct. 24, 1881, to Mrs. Martha Clatworthy Chandler (widow) (b. May 4, 1828, at Cornwall County, England; d. Oct. 15, 1915, at Methodist Episcopal Home, Chicago, Ill.), dau. of John Clatworthy and Jane Gifford; there were no children from the second marriage.

In the latter part of his life Jesse A. Wixom wrote a brief autobiography, which is here inserted in full:

"Having but little to do, and but little disposition to do what I might, I thought I would sketch down in brief a few items of my past history. I will begin by saying I was born in Tompkins County, N. Y., January 17, 1807. At the age of three years my father and mother, one brother older and one younger, moved to the State of Ohio, and settled in Franklin County, seven miles southwest of what is now the capital of the state, Columbus. There in that heavy timber country my father bought land, and as soon as I was able to swing an ax or pick brush, I was put at it.

"I helped to clear up a farm. It was thinly settled and entirely destitute of school privileges. My parents not being able to send me from home to school, I got but little, maybe three-fourths of one year would cover all the schooling I ever got. However, I made out to live till now. In the fall of 1827 my father sold out and started for the far west, and brought up in Springfield, Sangamon County, Illinois. We remained there till the fall of 1828 when we removed to Tazewell County, bought land and improved and remained there till 1836, having bought previously at the land sale, land in LaSalle County. We all sold our land in Tazewell County and removed to Troy Grove in LaSalle County in 1836. Having been married to Artemesia Rich in 1831, I had a family of three children when I came to Troy Grove. I have lived ever since on the land I bought when I first came to Troy Grove. There are few men in this community who have dealt in land more than myself, as the records will show; yet friend Baldwin, who has given us a history of LaSalle County, never knew that I lived in LaSalle County. I have five children living and have buried two, and my wife who lived with me almost fifty years died Feb. 9, 1880. I am now in my seventy-fifth year, and have lived in Illinois over fifty-four years, and have witnessed the great changes that have taken place in that time. I once owned ten acres in the little town of Springfield, which at that time joined on the town plot, two blocks east of where the state house now stands. About where the state house now stands, in 1828 there stood a little log jail from which I saw a criminal taken and stripped to the hips, and tied to a whipping post, and twenty strokes with a rawhide laid on the bare back, which left a a red mark as soon as the rawhide was lifted. There was at that time no penitentiary in the state of Illinois. The changes since then are wonderful; yet they come so gradual, like gray hairs, we have to stop and think to realize these things. It seems but a short time when I look back; yet when we count up we find it fifty-five years ago.

Nathan Wixom (151) and his wife Betsy Hadlock.
Jesse Atwater Wixom (152) and wife, Artemisia Rich.
Harriet Teeples and Hannah Montgomery, wives of Solomon Wixom (153).

"August 13, 1883 - After taking a rest for some time, I resume my narrative and will say that since I wrote the above I have married a second wife, a Mrs. Martha Chandler, an English lady. Being always used to having a home of my own, and she being willing to cast her lot with me and see me through, if possible, we were married October 24, 1881. In my advanced age I still enjoy a home I may call my own." Res. Troy Grove, Illinois.

Solomon Wixom was one year old when he moved with his parents and two older brothers from the State of New York to Franklin County, Ohio; he was in his nineteenth year when the family moved from Ohio to Springfield, Ill.

A year or two after the family settled in Illinois Solomon's father purchased a horse and light wagon for the purpose and sent Solomon back to the place of the old home in Ohio to bring his grandmother (his mother's mother) to the Illinois home. But his grandmother had died the year before, and all that Solomon could bring back to Illinois was a sad message.

This incident in the life of Solomon Wixom must not be overlooked; for that long and lonesome journey must have given him courage and confidence in himself and his ability to cope with strangers; and soon after he commenced a career that called for much traveling.

After living in Springfield for two years the family moved to a place sixty miles north in Tazewell County, where a farm was purchased and everybody worked, but Solomon--for then and there Solomon entered on a new and remarkable career.

There was much activity in Tazewell and adjoining counties at that time on the part of the missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called Mormons. Solomon Wixom became a convert to the new faith and the remainder of his life was spent among those people, sharing their trials and hardships and performing his part in a humble way in building the Mormon Empire.

At that time the Mormon people were trying to build up a new Zion in the western part of the State of Missouri, near what is now Kansas City. There we find Solomon Wixom in the year 1832. We read from his diary: "Was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on the 22nd of September, 1832 in Clay County, Missouri, by Elder Lyman Wight and confirmed by him on the water side." Then follows an account of his journey back to Illinois. And again: "After having settled up my affairs in Clay Co., Missouri, I started with Brother William Jusic, an Elder, and William Legg, a priest, to go forth and preach the gospel, the glad tidings to my fellowmen, I being also an elder of the Church of the Latter Day Saints. We took leave of our brethren in Clay on the 30th of September and set forth down the Missouri River." At this time it will be remembered that he was but twenty-three years of age.

Again from the diary: "Sept. 1st we took our leave of the Disciples in that place and came down the river Missouri till we came to Charlton and stayed all night at Br. John Forest's and there we met with Bros. Orson and William Pratt. Orson was sick of the fever and ague. We prayed for him and laid hands on him, and then we parted with them and came".... Here is the bottom of the second page. Here comes a break in the story. From the last date, Sept. 1st, 1834, at Charlton, Missouri, there is nothing given until the 7th of July, 1835. On the first flyleaf of the book is the date, "Pekin, Illinois, March the 26th, 1835." It seems that that was the date that he commenced to write the book and the Town of Pekin is in Tazewell County, Illinois, where his parents and brothers then lived. He had been on a visit there. The remainder of the book is written with different ink, and in a bolder and more hurried style. Two days after he starts out again on his preaching he holds a meeting at Lewiston, forty miles southwest of his father's home.*****

"I held a meeting in the court house at Lewiston. I then went to Waterford, then up the Illinois bluff searching for the meek of the earth. I came to Aaron Roberd's, here I let my business be known. He invited me to hold meeting in his house. I left an appointment for preaching and then came to William Johnson's and a woman in the neighborhood sent for me to come and pray for her and lay hands on her. She was very sick. I laid hands on her in the name of Christ. She recovered. I then went to Moses Meeker's and when Sunday came (July 19, 1835), I held meeting at his house, and then the Tuesday following I held meeting at A. Roberd's. The next day I held meeting at William Johnson's and administered the sacrament.*******

"The next day being Friday the 6th of August, 1835, I met Theo. Jenkins, a Methodist, at William Myers for a public investigation of religion; I spoke first on the Gospel, then he arose and in the spirit of anger contended against the faith of the Church of Latter Day Saints and concluded by reading some man's comment on false prophets &c. I then arose to answer the objections he had of the faith of the Saints, but he would not hear, but went out, muttering as he went. Some few of his followed him, but a majority of the congregation stayed, and like men seeking for truth were attention till I had finished my discourse, which observations were given to the entire satisfaction of all that were present. I then had doors plenty opened for preaching. I then visited the sick till Thursday, then held meeting at Mr. Lofton's at 12 o'clock, and at 4 o'clock at William Johnson's. I then visited the sick till Thursday, then held meeting at Mr. Lofton's. The next day I laid hands on Sister Bemis's child, sick of a fever, and held meeting at J. Cozad's.

"Then on Thursday I held meeting at George Bennett's. After I was done, John Jenkins, a Methodist priest, arose full of malice and opposed my discourse and in the most abusive language stated that I was an imposter and for proof of the same brought up paper of the day concerning Jo Smith and railed against the Book of Mormon and against the ordinances of the Gospel, saying that they were not essential to salvation and thus the people became disgusted with him, so all became confusion. I made a short reply, and so the meeting closed. But honor be to God and the lamb; truth will out its way and over all will prevail.*******

"The same evening Window came and gave our appointment to preach on Mormonism the next day, and the next day we came to hear the said Window expose our faith. He agreed to occupy only two hours and then give way for me, but he violated his promise and occupied four hours and the people became weary and dissatisfied at his proceedings, and the most of them went away before he finished his lingo of stuff. I then arose and made some few remarks, but for the want of time I could not say much. I told the people that if they would come out the same evening at candle light I would answer what had been said by the said Window. So at night a large congregation came to hear the response. I then commenced with his discourse, and to the astonishment of all present, by the assistance of the spirit of God, made the former discourse look black, which was its true color. The people were very attentive till I was through. I dismissed the people and all seemed to move off in order; though before night I baptized James Howard, notwithstanding the opposition and power of Darkness which appeared to prevail.*******

"Then went to Avery's and baptized four more, Margaret Avery, the wife of William Avery, and Margaret, the wife of Dan Avery, and Sarah Avery and Sarah her daughter, and at evening I confirmed them by laying on of hands.*******

"On Sabbath, the 7th of Feb., 1836, I held meeting at William Avery's then labored in the shop at chair making off and on from time to time when I had no meetings to attend to through the winter before this time as well as after; on Wednesday I held meeting at Father Avery's, and next day at J. Owens's and on the next Sabbath, the 14th, I had no meeting appointed; and the next day, Monday, the 14th of February, 1836, I was married to Sarah Avery; the Wednesday following I was called to go and visit a woman that was sick. She was the wife of Luke Owen. I prayed for her and laid hands on her and through faith she was healed.*******

"On the next Thursday I started to Quincy to enter a piece of land, and arrived at home on the 28th of the same; and on the next day I began to cut logs for my house, so I labored that week at my house, and on the next Sabbath, being the 6th of March, I held meeting at Mr. Comb's. This week I spent working at my temporal concerns.*******

"April the first I went to Brother J. T. Earl's to help him to move, brought one load. And on the 3rd (it being the Sabbath), I held meeting at Ira Owen's. Then I built a house for B. Earl, and helped him move to my house, and on the 10th (Sab) I held meeting at Ira Owen's.

"The next day I started to go to Tazewell County, Illinois, and came to Reed's Landing, went on board the steamboat Helanmar, and on the next day about 10 o'clock she arrived at Pekin. I then went ashore and went out to my brother, Jesse Wixom, found them well. What pleasure it is for friends to meet after they have been absent a considerable time! I then went to Brother Rich's and then got my things together and on the 21st I got them to Pekin and went on board the steamboat American, bound for St. Louis, arrived at Beard's Landing the next day about 10 o'clock, then came on home, and on the next Monday I went to the river with a wagon and horses to move my things home.*******

"I held meeting at G. Butterfield's. The Wednesday following I laid hand on Brother William Avery's child. It was scalded very bad. The fire came out and in the morning it was perfectly well. Also I laid hands on Mother Avery. She was afflicted, and on my wife and child. They all recovered immediately, and on Friday Elizabeth and Mariah Butterfield brought their children to me. They were afflicted. One had lost the use of her arm, the other had never been well from its mother's womb. They both recovered immediately, to the astonishment of all that knew the circumstances. This was effected by the prayer of faith and the laying on of hands in the name of the Lord. The following Saturday I held meeting at Father Avery's at 12 o'clock, and at Rhine's in the town of Rushville at evening.*******

"The next day (Sab) held meeting with Wm Clark at Mr. Todd's, and at night at Father Avery's, and then worked at my temporal business till the first of April, 1837. I was sick the next day. I held meetings at Father Avery's, and on Wednesday I was very sick with fever and rheumatism and inflammation in my head. Brother Earl and Brother Howard came and laid hands on me and I continued sick till Sabbath. Brother Harvey Green laid hands on me and I recovered and went to meeting at Father Avery's. Brother Green preached. I then the next day prepared for the sale of my property, and on the 12th day of April we, Brother Dan and I, sold our property at auction, and then I fixed for going on a journey to my father's, and on the 16th (Sabbath) I held meeting at Father Avery's, and on Monday Brother Daniel Avery took the wagon and hauled me and my family to Reed's landing on the Illinois River, and I could not get on board of a boat conveniently and so we came back again and then prepared for moving as soon as we could to Zion. I settled with the people and repaired my wagon and team and on the 28th of April I started to come as far as Brother Earl's, and arrived at Brother Earl's the next day. The next day (May 10th, 1837) we all started on for Missouri, thus we came on our way rejoicing and we came through the flourishing town of Quincy on the Mississippi River. We there crossed and came on through." Here follows an account of the journey to Far West, Missouri, with the adventures and preaching and baptizing on the way. Finally he reaches the Mormon settlement at Far West May 23, 1837. He says further:

"We all drove on to Bond Stephens's on Shoal Creek at the mouth of Mill Creek. Here I let my wagon stay. I looked around and found a place to buy and bought 40 acres of Brother Wright. This is the first day I got into the City of Far West, on the 25th of May, 1837. I moved on my place on the head of Log Creek. I went to work at clearing and planting my garden stuff and potatoes, going to mill and to meeting, and on the 4th of June I went to Far West to hear Brother T. C. Marsh, the President of the Twelve, and D. W. Patten and William Smith, both of the Twelve. I then heard them all preach, and on the next Sabbath I attended meeting at the school house. Brother Charles C. Rich and H. Green preached. This was the 11th of June, 1837. Continued my common business till the 3rd of July, 1837. I attended the meeting at Far West, helped dig the foundation of the Temple in Far West.*******

"November, 1837. I labored at the common business of the day, and on the 13th Brother Cowdery, Egovis and others came to my house on an exploring expedition to the North, stayed all night.*******

"Then I heard of the excitement in Caldwell and Davis counties. I immediately moved back to Caldwell so as to be on hand for whatever might come. The excitement continued to increase till it broke out in a war between the mob and the Saints. I had the ague and was unable to do anything, but I prayed to the Lord to give me strength that I might help to defend His cause and His people. I was healed by the power of the God of Israel so that I went forth with the army of Israel. I was in the army at the taking of the cannon and on the hill a little of Adamonde Ahman on a rise of ground the cannon was placed. Brother Joseph gathered the army of Israel, formed a square, and the cannon was fired three rounds with the shout of Hosana. At each fire of the cannon Joseph Smith, the prophet of the Lord, then drew his sword from its sheath, saying with a loud voice to all Israel: 'I have drawn my sword from its sheath and I swear by the living God that it never shall return again till I can go and come and be treated by others as they wish to be treated by me,' and all the army said 'Amen.'

"The mob kept gathering and driving the Saints from the out settlements to Far West and Diahman till they had destroyed all their houses, farms, etc., till the Saints were all in those two places. On hearing that they had taken some of our brethren prisoners and were miserably abusing them, and had camped on Crooked River. David W. Patten, one of the Twelve Apostles, called out a company of the Saints and went to rescue them from the mob, which he did, and in that noble act he laid down his life. He fell close at my side, though after he fell he gave the countersign which God and liberty, and bid the little band of brethren to charge on the mob, which they did and soon routed them. They fled all directions for their lives. The prisoners were rescued. We returned to Far West, but four of our men were slain. This took place on the 25th of October in the year of our Lord 1838.

"In a few days the whole country was in arms. The mob, under cover of law, came near Far West, pitched their camp on Goose Creek, surrounded the dwelling house where Brother Sharer used to live. There was at that time 5 or 6 women and children living in it. Among them was my wife, Sarah, and a child of only 2 years old. My wife was then almost to the time of delivery with the second child. On or about the last of October the heads of the church were given up to the mob by Col. George M. Hinkle. The City of Far West was to be given up the next day. Early in the morning I had a short interview with Brother Hiram Smith. He advised me to leave the state forthwith. I sent for my wife, had a short interview with her, told her the counsel I had received. She said, 'Go, make your escape, leave me in the hands of the Lord and the brethren.' I took leave of her and the young child, not knowing that I ever should see them again, but I knew they were in the hands of an all-wise Providence. I went out of the city on the west, in company with six others, namely, Dime Huntington, Gad Yale, Morgan Gardner--the names of the other three I have forgotten.

"We took a Circuit route north through the Grindstone settlement, then crossed Grand River near the three forks. We then took into the Indian country where we felt ourselves quite safe." He then goes on with a description of the hardships of the journey back to Illinois. He continues:

"I went to Schuyler County, Illinois. I arrived at Benjamin West's on or about the 20th of November. I was now among my wife's people. I made arrangements to send for my wife, and Green Butterfield started after them and in the month of February he brought them to Crooked River to her father's house. I spent my time preaching and laboring with my hands till my family came. In the time she was absent from me she was delivered of a son near Far West, but the Lord brought us together again, although we were robbed of almost everything we had of an earthly nature, yet we felt rich and happy that our lives were spared till we met again.

"So I followed the common avocations of life, preaching the word to the people at every opportunity that offered, till in the year 1844. Sometime in the month of May we began to hear of the excitement in Nauvoo. There were all sorts of reports in circulation. The brethren would often ask me what it would amount to. I told them that I did not know, but to be still and tend to their own business and pray much and be humbe. The Lord would bring all things right along. In the month of June the excitement got high. Our business was threatened and it seemed as though we were in danger. Orders were given to the military officers to have their men in readiness to march to Carthage if necessary. Then it was asked, should the Mormons in Schuyler be left at home while the others should go to fight the Mormons at Nauvoo? It was decided, however, that the Mormons should be first into the ranks and go along with the militia to Carthage. On the 23rd or 24th of June we were all notified to be on the parade grounds, armed and equipped, according to law. I visited the brethren, told them it was best to go, so they came out and went with the militia. I took a yoke of oxen and wagon to carry the baggage. I obtained a pledge from Capt. Bryant Brown that he would not let his men abuse us, inasmuch as we belonged to his company and were under his charge.

"We arrived at Carthage on the 25th of June, stayed there till the 27th. In the time we were there I saw the prisoners marched out of the jail, surrounded by the Carthage Grays, then marched to the Court House in the midst of cursing and swearing of the multitude---some spitting at them, some threatening their lives. They looked like devils in human form. However, the prisoners were not kept long in the Court House but were soon marched back to jail.

"On the 27th Company was dismissed and started for home. Left Carthage at 11 o'clock a.m. Went in small companies. The brethren kept together with some half a dozen others that were our near neighbors and disposed to be our friends, excepting one. His name was Benj. West. He raised a report that those that were friendly to us were as bad as the Mormons. This caused some excitement in the camp, and to make it still worse, they had a bottle of whiskey along. When we got about six miles from Carthage the row began between the said West and a man by the name of James Lynn. They were both in the wagon. Lynn jumped onto West, pounded him, tore his eyes half out of his head; finally the oxen got frightened and stampeded, and before the men could part them, West was well nigh turning the corner. So much for that; he fell in the ditch he dug for his neighbor.

"We came on homewards about 10 miles and stopped for the night. All went to bed quiet and nice, but I could not sleep. My mind was in trouble, there was none to free my mind to. If at any time they saw two of us talking together, they were jealous of us. So I lay in deep thought. What will they do with our brethren in prison? All was still. It was about ten o'clock in the evening when I heard the distant sound of a horse on the gallop. It came nearer and nearer. I thought, 'What does this mean?' Soon it came to the door. A man's voice was heard rather in an excited tone, 'Ha lo!' I arose, opened the door; what is the matter?' The answer came, 'Joseph and Hiram are killed.'"

There are many details recited in that book of the writer's travels and sermons, all displaying the intensity of his feelings and devotion to his religious work, with an entire freedom from egotism. A deep sincerity marks every page. The student of psychology can readily account for the high tension of Solomon's mind the night the messenger brought the news of the death of the Mormon leaders. The telepathic message of evil tidings came to Solomon's mind before the arrival of the horseman with the verbal message. Solomon Wixom must have been highly gifted with psychic powers or he could never have accomplished what he did in his preaching and curing the sick.

In the autumn of 1844 he moved from Schuyler County to Nauvoo. Two years later the Mormons were on their way to the West, and so was Solomon Wixom. Leaving his family at the village of Farmington, in Iowa, about 25 miles from Nauvoo, he proceeded to Council Bluffs, on the Missouri River, where he could be most useful in helping to build shelters for the emigrants on their way west. There was another village built on the Nebraska side of the river called "Winter Quarters," and both were kept up for many years as stopping places for emigrants on their way to Utah. There Solomon Wixom remained for more than three years, and there he had plenty to do. It was there that he married his plural wife, Harriet L. Teeples, January 18, 1846; and there on the 15th of January, the following year, a son was born to that union and was christened Seth James. A year later the parents of the wife Harriet were preparing to proceed on the westward journey and she desired to go with them; but the wife Sarah was in poor health, and unable to endure the hardships of the long journey, and Solomon could not leave her. It was therefore arranged that the wife Harriet and her little son, Seth James, then a year old, should go on to Utah with her parents, and the husband would remain and care for the wife Sarah and her two little sons until such time as Sarah would be able to make the journey. That was the spring of 1848. A year passed. Sarah did not recover, but died on the 3rd day of January, 1849.

In the spring of 1849, as early as the weather would permit, Solomon Wixom joined a caravan bound for Utah. He had two little boys, Justin Chauncey, ten years of age, and Solomon Avery, three. Those two boys were the fortune and hope of the father, and they made good. One of them became the Puritan of the flock and the other became the Cavalier. The little boys were packed into one of the wagons of the train and the father walked. He seems to have enjoyed the hardships of the journey, and the hardships generally of frontier life.

It may be that the wife Harriet lost confidence in her husband in the long wait for him to come to Utah; and it may be that the mother-in-law's influence prevailed, for there was some friction there. Be that as it may, when Solomon arrived in Utah he discovered that his wife Harriet had secured a divorce from him by some kind of church procedure and had married another man, named David Sessions; and the infant son, Seth James, was re-christened "James Monroe Sessions," adopting the name of his stepfather.

In that thinly settled country with few people, long distances to travel, poor communications and much moving about, the Wixoms and Sessions families soon lost track of each other; and for nearly three-quarters of a century this son of Solomon was lost to the other descendants of his father. But in the year 1921 and the early part of the following year, strenuous efforts were made by the other descendants of Solomon to find the long lost boy and induce him to join their family circle. He was found and he joined the circle. And James Monroe Sessions, in the seventy-sixth year of his age, met in family reunion at Paris, Idaho, the other descendants of his father. That was in August, 1922. It was more than an ordinary occasion for those people--for among them the family ties of affection are remarkably strong.

On reaching Utah Solomon Wixom settled at Cottonwood. There in February, 1851, he was married to Hannah Montgomery; and a little more than two years later he took as his plural wife her sister, Catherine Montgomery. Here again there seems to have been a case of family friction of some kind, for the husband and latest wife separated some time after the birth of their only child. Solomon Wixom is thus seen to be not very much of a polygamist; for only twice was he possessed of a plural wife, and each time the plural wife quit him early in the game. His wife Hannah Montgomery lived happily with him nearly thirty years and survived him. She was the mother of eleven children.

During his early years of life in Utah Solomon was engaged in raising sheep, and later in raising cattle. Those occupations kept him in the thinly settled districts---the wilderness that he loved. At different times he lived at Cottonwood, Union Fort, Pelican Point, Lehi, and Springville. About the year 1860 he moved to a place near Brigham City, where he remained until 1864, when the call came from Brigham Young for families to move into and take possession of the beautiful Bear Lake Valley in southeastern Idaho, then supposed to be within the boundaries of Utah. This was another chance for Solomon to help build a new settlement, and he promptly responded to the call. He performed his part in building the Mormon Empire.

In purchasing tools and supplies for use in the new settlement that he was getting ready to move to, Solomon purchased a coffee mill, which was thought strange at the time, for the Mormons did not use coffee. But he made the remark that it might come in handy in the new home, and he was wisely prophetic in that act; for that coffee mill afterward became an important weapon in the battle against hunger. For sometime later when supplies were sent into the pioneer settlement wheat was sent instead of flour, and corn instead of meal. There was no mill there to grind the grain; but Solomon Wixom's coffee mill was put in action and kept running double shift for a long season.

In every place where he made his home, and they were many, Solomon used his Ohio education to good advantage. That education he had acquired under the instruction of that master mechanic of the frontier, Reuben Hiram Wixom, and he could make everything in woodwork that a new settlement needed. After the settlement became somewhat developed, Solomon moved on to a newer place and plied his trade. He was always a pioneer, and he had his workshop wherever he had his home.

Solomon Wixom has been described as of rather tall and spare of build, with thin face and blue eyes. His hair was of a light brown, and curly and rather thin. He wore a light brown full beard, rather thin and clipped short.

He was a man of stern countenance and of stern mind. When he made up his mind to anything, he was immovable. No one could change him. If he undertook a task of any kind, he completed it. He had great physical courage. He never carried a weapon of defense of any kind, even in places where there was occasionally a desperate character, for he feared no man. When he received a wicked threat he would quietly answer: "The worst you can do is to kill me, and I can stand that. No, I am not afraid of you."

He was a great lover of children. At times all of the children of the settlement would gather at his home to hear him tell stories and riddles and jokes. But during the later part of his life he seemed to enjoy being alone, communing with himself and with nature.

Little is known of the wives of Solomon Wixom. Sarah Avery must have had great strength of character and great faith in the Lord to have been able to send her husband off as she did just as she was to bear her second child. Although her time was short, she too did her part in the building of the Mormon Empire.

The following was written by Edna Bunn Clark about her great grandmother Wixom, Hannah Montgomery Wixom:

"I don't remember great Grandmother Wixom, but I can recall a few things that Mother (Frances Sleight Bunn) has told us about her.

"She must have been a wonderful woman and a grand mother and grandmother. Mama has told us how she loved to go to Liberty to visit with her when she was a child. It was among her happiest memories. She said many times what a wonderful cook she was. She was known to all her family and neighbors for the delicious baking powder biscuits she made. She was one of those pioneer women who saved and used all the material nature made available. Mom said she could fix a banquet out of nothing. She said she wondered what she would fix for dinner when she didn't see much to prepare, but with grandmother's quick, efficient hands and ability, a lovely meal fit for a king would be prepared within the hour.

"She was a woman of great faith, which helped her carry on in face of the great hardships that all pioneers endured. She had faith in her God, faith in her fellowmen, faith in her children and faith in the future of this great country and her church. Her religion was always a great source of comfort to her. Grandma was blessed with the very fine art of being an expert seamstress. She made all of her family clothing and her home was made lovely by the use of her quick efficient hands, which were never idle during her waking hours. The beautiful quilts, rugs, embroidery work, were masterpieces of art.

"Another of Grandmother Wixom's virtues was patience. She was calm and never complained even in her illness. Her ability to bear pain without comment or confusion, willing to accept her lot no matter how hard it was. She was truly one of God's chosen children who lived a life befitting a true Latter Day Saint, and went to an early grave, loved by all who knew her."

Justin D. Wixom was sixteen years of age when he moved with his parents and brothers from Ohio to Springfield, Illinois. Two years later the family moved to a farm in Tazewell County. There Justin was married three days before he was nineteen years of age. About the year 1833, in company with his oldest brother brother Nathan, Justin made a journey to a place about seventy miles to the northeast, in LaSalle County, where both of them purchased land and settled there. Two years later all of the other members of the family, except Solomon, moved to that district.

There, in LaSalle County all of the men of the family indulged to some extent in land speculation, but Justin was the only real plunger. He handled more land than all the others combined. He bought and sold and traded. He also conducted a store for a time at Troy Grove and later at the town of LaSalle. He was not only the plunger of the family in land transactions but also in many other activities; and he was the only Democrat of the tribe. The U. S. Government had granted to the State of Illinois a tract of land to aid in the construction of a canal and another grant for the construction of the Illinois Central Railroad. This land was sold on contracts providing for annual payments, with a condition that called for forfeiture of the contract on failure to keep up the payments. It was also provided that any purchaser who failed to keep up his payments was "blacklisted" from making any further contracts for the purchase of such land. Justin D. Wixom managed to get his name on the "blacklist" and the time came when he wanted to make another purchase of land. How did he manage it? He made the contract of purchase in the name of his brother Chancy, without that brother's knowledge. Then when he had a chance to sell the land at a profit he hunted up the brother, explained the transaction, and asked the brother to sign the deed, and the brother readily complied. Then Justin said, "Now, Chancy, what do I owe you for your help in this transaction?" After a little hesitation Chancy smiled twice and said, "I need a pair of dancing pumps (light boots); if you will get them for me, I will call it square." Then each indulged in a hearty laugh. The dancing pumps were delivered. There is another amusing feature to this transaction: the father of those brothers was bitterly opposed to wild speculations in lands, and as bitterly opposed to dancing, and Chancy was then living under parental roof.

Here is a story told to the writer many years ago by the said Chancy: "My brother Justin was once fattening an ox for beef. In those days all the families used tallow candles, and watched their chances to secure tallow for that purpose. Quite a number of neighbors applied to Justin to reserve for them certain amounts of tallow, and the tallow was always promised by Justin. Chancy, knowing that Justin had promised more tallow than he could deliver, and still kept promising more, asked Justin why he had made promises that he could not fulfill. Justin's answer to this question was a good illustration of his character and make-up. He laughingly said, 'Oh, well, I think a man is real mean if he will not even promise.'"

Justin D. Wixom was "a jolly good fellow." He seems to have been a first class mixer and popular with everybody. There was no man within his stamping ground who was too big nor too little for him to mingle with and indulge in a social familiar way.

After Justin's decease his son-in-law, Charles B. McLaughlin, became administrator of the estate and attempted to sell a house and lot in the town of LaSalle that was of record in the name of Justin D. Wixom. That seemed to be the only chance to get something to distribute to the heirs; but soon an unrecorded mortgage bobbed up for a larger sum than the value of the property and the matter was dropped and the administration closed.

Justin D. Wixom was fondly remembered as long as there was any person living who knew him during his lifetime.

156. ABRAHAM WIXOM, son of Reuben Hiram (51), b. Feb. 19, 1816, in Franklin Co., Ohio; d. Aug. 29, 1870, in Bureau Co., Ill.; md. July 9, 1843, in Bureau Co. to Rachel Ann Scott (b. Apr. 14, 1825, in Duboise Co., Indiana; d. March 24, 1897 in Bureau Co.), dau. of Robert and Polly Ann Scott, the latter being the dau. of Edward Hall, a soldier of the American Revolution, said to be the only Revolutionary soldier who is buried in Bureau Co., Illinois.

Abraham Wixom was in his twelfth year when he moved with parents and brothers from Ohio to Springfield, Ill. Later the family moved to a farm in Tazewell County, and in 1835, to a farm in LaSalle County. At that time he was at the age of nineteen.

There he lived with his parents until several years after reaching majority, working on his father's farm, and later farming on his own account. The memorandum book left by his father shows that there were partnership arrangements between the father and son by which the father furnished the ox teams and implements and the son used them in breaking prairie land for other people, father and son dividing profits. In those days there was plenty of work of that kind to be done in the vicinity of their home at a fair profit. Abraham's energies were given to that line of work in his early manhood, and by such means he got his start in life.

About the year 1842 Abraham moved to a place in the adjoining county of Bureau, about twenty miles distant from the home of his parents. There he purchased land, built a home, married, and remained there the rest of his life, a farmer of much energy.

The farming business in Illinois at that time was in its infancy; but Abraham was not. He always had the latest and best improved farm machinery that could be obtained. He was the first man in his vicinity to own a machine corn-planter that he used with a team of horses; and he was the first man there to have a combined reaping and mowing machine. He was strictly a farmer.

It was during his early manhood when assisting other men at raising the heavy framework of a new barn, some of the bark on a beam slipped off and caused the other men with pikes to lose their hold, throwing the weight of the beam on Abraham's pike. He could not hold it alone. His pike gave way and the bench fell, striking him on the knee, destroying his knee-cap. By that injury he lost the use of the knee joint, and ever afterward walked with a labored step. But the energy of the man was not injured.

Abraham Wixom was a large man of powerful frame and of great physical strength. On one occasion while working in his barn, filling and handling sacks of wheat preparatory to hauling to market, his hired man assisting complained that the sacks were too heavy to carry the length of the barn floor, about forty feet. Abraham looked at the man a moment and said, "Why, man, I can carry that sack of wheat the length of the barn floor and back again in my teeth," and he proceeded to do it, just to convince the man that he had no cause to complain of the difficulty of the work. With his powerful frame, Durham neck and a jaw that carried a double row of teeth, Abraham Wixom performed that feat without much difficulty.

He always employed a man, and sometimes two or three, to assist in the work on the farm. He paid them well and expected them to perform the required work. He always made a written contract with the man at the beginning of the employment, and among other requirements, the contract provided that the employer would get up first in the morning and call the man, and the man should answer the call to show that he was awake; then the man would not be called a second time. If the man failed to get out of bed and appear on the scene in record time, his employment ceased and he was given his passport. Abraham Wixom always carried out his part of the contract and insisted that his employees should do the same.

One morning as his twelve-year-old son was about to start for school, Mr. Wixom told the boy to return home immediately after school was dismissed for the day and perform a certain work. That day the teacher at the school directed the boy to remain for a time after the school was dismissed to receive some special instruction in some of his lessons. The boy was in a serious dilemma; he must disobey one of the high authorities. He chose the lesser evil by disobeying the schoolmaster. When he appeared at the seat of learning next morning he was expelled from school. No explanation would do. When he returned home and explained the matter to his father, the parent quietly remarked, "Well, Charley, you know where the ax is." That mean chop wood. The boy's school days were ended. It was an age of discipline.

of his parents, and his son says that Urban's father had the theory that the seventh successive son would become a doctor; he therefore gave Urban the middle name of Doctor.

Urban was nine years of age when he moved with his parents and brothers from Ohio to the village of Springfield, Illinois; it must have been near his twelfth birthday when the family moved to a farm in Tazewell County. There the family lived during the next five years, then moved to a place about fifty miles further north and east in LaSalle Co. There Urban continued to live with his parents until about the year 1841, when he moved to a place near the village of Edwards Station in Peoria Co., about twenty miles west of the old home in Tazewell.

One of his sons writes, "My memory of my father starts from the time when I was about four years old. He started from Peoria Co., Ill., for Missouri about 1857. He had an ox team and drove through, got there all right, bought forty acres of land with a log house on it, worked on the place and in a grist mill.

"In 1860 he became somewhat of a politician, and was a candidate for County Judge on the ticket with Abraham Lincoln, but was defeated by a small majority.

"Father was some hand to joke and hunt and fish, and to go to church and chat with the neighbors. He was about five feet ten inches tall, square build, and weighed about 165 pounds.

"He enlisted in the United States Army in 1861, went south the same fall, was in the 18th Missouri Volunteers under Grant. He was in some of the hardest battles. The men of the 18th Missouri were all killed but twelve or fifteen. My father was taken prisoner, and was confined in the prison at Belle Island, where he was held seven months and starved. His brothers sent him boxes of provisions which were given to him where there was a mob of starving men, and the provisions were taken from him.

"He got home February, 1864 in a very weakened condition from his prison treatment. He was not out of the house much after that, as he was an invalid until he died. On his way home he came through Illinois where he visited his brothers and sister Nancy and their families. He died May 30, 1865, in Putnam Co., Mo., and was buried with military honors, three miles south of Mendota, Missouri, with ordinary marble slab gravestone.

"I met one of father's old comrades after the Civil War, and he told me a joke they had on my father. They were in a battle and had to run; my father being a poor foot-racer had to lighten his load by cutting loose his haversack and dropping it. The haversack was filled with onions, and when the southern soldiers got to the onions they stopped; and that gave the Union boys a chance to get away and save themselves from being captured."

The records show that Urban Wixom, after reaching his regiment from his prison, was sent home on furlough, and later his discharge was sent to his home address. The Discharge Certificate was dated just 50 days after his death.

Feb. 11, 1882, near Mendota, Ill.); dau. of Jacob Lehman Eckert and Caroline Weisner.

Henry W. Wixom was fifteen years of age when he moved with his parents to LaSalle Co., Ill. He was a farmer all his life, except for an absence of about eight years in California and Oregon in the 50's. He married at the age of 21, and a year or two later he bought from his father 80 acres of land near the family home, where he lived until 1850; his wife had died the year before, leaving him two little daughters. After providing proper homes for his children, he sold his farm and made a trip to the gold fields of California.

His daughter gives the following account of Mr. Wixom's experience in the golden west: "He left Illinois in 1852, some time after the death of his first wife, Nancy Tichenor Wixom, with an overland train of several families, to seek gold in California. After the usual experiences of those people, making the long 'trek' across the plains and and mountains, they at last reached the Sacramento Valley and began the search for gold. Like many others, it was a hard and a not very lucrative business, as often they would dig and 'pan' for days without finding much of the 'yellow dust.' Then, for a short time, they would get enough to barely pay for their daily needs. After a year or two of this kind of unsatisfactory mining, my father decided to go up into the southeastern part of Oregon, where the government was offering land for homesteading in the Williamette and Rogue River section. The Indians of this section had been given a large reservation some miles from the Rogue River. My father 'homesteaded' quite a tract of land near Rogue River and started raising stock there. His place was one of the stations for the Overland mail and stagecoach routes and he cared for some of the horses there, where they would make the change. He also served meals to the drivers and what passengers might be with them. He had a helper and, as my father was a good cook, it fell to his lot to provide food for the people, as well as the horses for the stage.

"The land where my father had 'homesteaded' had formerly been a favorite hunting ground for the Indians for fur-bearing animals, whose pelts were sold to the Hudson's Bay Company. Of course the Indians and the Hudson's Bay people were not very well satisfied to have their profitable fur-bearing region taken away from them. And, it is stated by some writers of the early history of Oregon, that the Hudson's Bay Company did all they could to make the Indians dissatisfied over the arrangement the government had made in the matter. At any rate, in 1856, there was an uprising of the Indians of the Rogue River Reservation, and they started to massacre the settlers there, destroying their homesteads and either killing or driving away their stock.

"Men hastened through the settlement, warning the people who were glad to hurry to the nearest fortressed city, where they built a stockade, hastily formed volunteer companies, and went out to quell this uprising, eventually driving the Indians back to their reservation. Of course the settlers lost everything, except the bare land, from which the Indians had burned everything. My father had lost all, with the others, so after working there a short time longer, he worked his way to Portland, got a job on a sailing vessel leaving to sail for New York by way of Cape Horn. Of course it took a good many months to reach New York that way, sailing at the rate vessels did at that time. But eventually he arrived there and then was able to reach his home in Illinois in 1858 by railroad. My father had a very strong Quaker aversion towards the shedding of blood, so when he joined the company to quell the uprising of the Indians, he asked to be admitted to the surgeon's corps, as he had quite an intimate knowledge of medicine and nursing which he had learned from his father, Dr. Reuben Wixom. They were very glad of his assistance in the emergency hospital there. After my father returned to Illinois, he took up farming again and in August, 1859, married my mother, Rebecca E. Eckert. This is about all that I can recall of my father's experience in California and Oregon. He did not like his experiences in gold hunting in California, as it was hard, cold work, because of the washing or 'panning' as they called it. Also, the results were very uncertain. Then, too, he did not like the camp life, with its gambling, its drunken brawls, and the rough shootings, etc. He often said he did not get much gold from his experience, or much of anything else, except a life long rheumatism from having to be in the cold water so much, sluicing or panning."

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

Chancy S. Wixom was five years of age when he reached Illinois with his parents and brothers in 1827 and landed at the village of Springfield. He was then the baby of the family, and seventy-two years later he recalled the accident he met with on that journey when he fell out of the wagon when crossing a slough and became somewhat soiled in the operation.

The family moved to LaSalle County in 1835. Chancy continued to live with his parents until the death of his father in 1848. He was always the chore boy until that time, helping his father in all matters where a boy could make himself useful. A sense of duty was always a strong trait of his character. The account book of his father shows that Chancy was doing some farming on his own account before he reached his majority, and so continued while living with his parents. But from his early boyhood, Chancy was his father's main stay and assistant as well as daily companion.

During those early days of character building Chancy was at all times under the authority of his father, that exact and positive man of discipline; and it is safe to assume that he was always faithful to duty with a regard for the wishes of his parents. All that experience tended to develop more meekness of spirit than independence of character in the boy's makeup; and yet it seems that he was not entirely neglectful of his social duties, for he attended dances and card parties in the neighborhood, and indulged in other social affairs of an innocent nature contrary to the Puritan rules laid down at the parental home.

Chancy Wixom has left an account of his grindstone experiences that illustrates one phase of his character. That grindstone was an important implement on his father's farm, on which was a tract of heavy hardwood timber. There were scythes and sickles to be ground in the summer and axes in the winter. The grindstone was busy six days in the week, and Chancy must furnish the motive power to keep that machine in action all seasons of the year. It was while performing that tedious duty in the days of youth and early manhood that the boy determined to have an easier turning grindstone when he grew to manhood and had a farm of his own. That resolution was faithfully kept; the first grindstone in that neighborhood with the stone hung on an iron shaft and fitted with iron wheels for bearings was owned by Chancy S. Wixom. This incident is given as an exception to his usual methods, for he was not often the first man in the vicinity where he lived to adopt new ways and means.

To those who knew him well, it was evident that Chancy S. Wixom experienced all the hardships and inconveniences incident to childhood and youth without the usual joys and sports that belong to that period of human development, for he had but an incomplete knowledge of the mental workings of a child or boy, because he had never been either. He was always an old man.

After the death of his father in 1848 and proper arrangements had been made with his three older brothers living nearby for the care and comfort of his widowed mother, Chancy experienced his first feeling of relief from responsibility and care. He was twenty-six years of age and had never been anywhere, and he wanted to go somewhere. It so happened that in the spring of 1849, when parties were fitting out for the long overland journey to the newly discovered gold fields of California, Chancy S. Wixom joined the procession.

"My heart is filled with the days of yore, and oft do I repine,
For the days of old and the days of gold, and the days of forty-nine."

Not much is known of that long and toilsome journey two-thirds of the way across the continent, for Chancy Wixom was not much given to relating stories of hardships or other experiences, and never claimed credit for himself in anything he did. While in his home in Illinois, many years after the California journey, someone was reading aloud the description of a trip across the plains in the early days and the writer described buffalo meat "as tough as sole leather." At that moment Mr. Wixom raised his eyes from the newspaper he was reading, and with some emphasis remarked, "That is right; the writer knows what he is talking about!"

But Chancy S. Wixom never caught the "gold fever." The writer has heard him say as much, which he would not have said if it were not true. He said that at the time he started on that journey he wanted to go somewhere, and as that trip would be a long one, it seemed to fit his taste. He had never been away from home before, and he was then, for the first time in his life, free from restraint.

He remained but six weeks in the mining district, where potatoes were sold at a dollar a pound, and other supplies in proportion. He recovered some gold dust, put it into his knapsack and went to Portland, Oregon. He did not like the life and strife of the mining camp. That was in the fall of 1849. It appears that he intended to make his home in Portland, but in the spring of 1851 he changed his mind and started t he long journey back to Illinois. To cross the plains was out of the question, as there were no caravans going eastward and the Indians were fierce along that trail. His return was therefore made by way of the Isthmus of Panama, thence by way of the Gulf of Mexico and the Mississippi River, arriving at his starting point in August 1851 with practically the same amount of money in his pockets as when he started out more than two years before, leaving experience as his only profit and that profit may have been enough, for he never wandered again.

By that time his father's estate had been settled by the administration of his older brothers Jesse and Justin, who lived nearby. Chancy then took over the homestead, buying all the interests of the other heirs. There Chancy lived for the next thirteen years when he sold his farm and bought an adjoining farm, which he owned until the time of his death thirty-seven years later.

The district where he lived in Illinois practically all his life was and is a splendid farming belt, eight miles southwest of Chicago. That city was the market place to which he hauled wheat with ox teams in the days of early manhood, and later all produce for market was shipped to that place by railroad. That farming district is now chiefly a land of waving corn--the best on earth.

The early settlers as well as the newcomers in that district were of a character to correspond with the fertile soil; they were all good people, from Ohio, New York, and the New England States, and here and there was a family from Pennsylvania known as the "Pennsylvania Dutch." Those people of Puritanic severity had many sterling virtues, but they seemed to renounce all pleasure as a sort of sacrilege. They are naturally dulled by unrelieved toil; but let the small children of the brighter specimens of this class mingle with people of more liberal and joyous temper, and they will come out of the kinks, catch the livelier spirit of other people and make of them a splendid combination with their own stern morality.

The term "Pennsylvania Dutch" is a nickname and is misleading; the name "Dutch" carries the idea that these people came originally from Holland. However, they came from Moravia, a state in southern Germany, brought to Pennsylvania by William Wenn and were among the first settlers there. They speak the German language with some slight modifications.

In the spring of 1849 a family of this class arrived from Pennsylvania, bought a farm adjoining the Wixom homestead, moved onto the place, and commenced their new life there. This family consisted of the parents andfour small children, the oldest of which was a girl in her twelfth year. In the journey of the family by stage, canal boat, and steamboat, and daily mingling with strangers, who always talk to little children, that little girl picked up the English language, and by the time the family reached the journey's end, that little girl was able to perform the duty of family interpreter for her parents, who could speak nothing but German. The newly acquired education of the little daughter was a big lift for the family in the new neighborhood where they settled where no other people could speak or understand their language. When a neighbor appeared at their home the children took a beeline for the cellar, for they were all bashful, but the mother would call, "Mary, kum rouse," (come out) and the little girl would appear on the scene as interpreter.

That family did well there and that little girl grew into splendid womanhood, the finest woman I ever knew. She was my mother. It is now nearly a half-century since she went to final rest but the memory of her kind and tender care through the trying days of childhood and youth, with her dying blessing in manhood's morning hour, is still a living force. That mother never trained her children at all--she just loved them!

There was a lack of the spirit of aggressiveness in Chancy S. Wixom which made him the easiest man in the world to get along with, always on friendly terms with everybody. But that same trait of character prevented him from acquiring much more property than he did, in a district where the opportunities for expansion were good. He never boasted, never complained, never gossiped. He always objected to criticism of neighbors by members of his family; he was a kind husband and father, a careful provider. No hungry man was ever refused a meal at the home of Chancy S. Wixom, and the weary traveler without means could always get a night's lodging there.

The following is a letter written by Chancy S. Wixom to his son, Justin H. Wixom in 1921:

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

Justin H. Wixom of Troy, Idaho
Dear Son:

In yours of July 22 you requested me to make a biographical sketch of my life, and of my father and mother and their ancestors. Bion and Clara have both called my attention to this matter during the last few years, and I have excused myself by telling them that I was not in possession of dates and facts so as to feel capable of giving a satisfactory and interesting statement of the life, habits, trials, and some of the difficulties of the family ancestors. And I feel quite sure that I might have been in possession of many interesting facts, had I at the right time got my father to have written the things with which he knew and was familiar during his life. But as I neglected to improve the opportunity to secure the facts and information, which I would now prize so highly, has induced me to make a statement to you and to the rest of my children, of some of the recollections of things and events as told me mostly by my father, with whom I often talked in regard to his brothers and early life. So if I can give any information that I think will be of interest or a source of satisfaction I regard it as a duty, and will try to do what I can with pleasure, although it will be quite a task and am very poorly qualified to do it.

Reuben H. Wixom was born in the State of New York the first of April 1781, at what place I do not know. There were a good many friendly Indians living at that time in the neighborhood where my father spent his boyhood days, and he was often with the Indian boys in their sports and plays such as running foot races, jumping, wrestling, practicing with the bow and arrow and throwing stones at squirrels and different objects, and he was so skillful in nearly all these games that the Indian boys would sometimes get cross and mad and in order to pacify them and get them to feel friendly again, he would manage to let them beat him at their sports, which would make things all right and pleasant again.

It is my impression that my grandfather Wixom's given name was Barnabas, and he had a number of boys, but I cannot give all their names nor in their proper order. Most of them were older than my father. There was Seth, Solomon, Barnabus, Joshua, and Jesse, and one daughter named Dorcas who married a man by the name of Earl. She had a number of boys that joined the Mormons and went to Utah. Uncle Barnabas moved to Texas when that country was under the rule of Spain and got several leagues of land for emigrating and settling there. Uncle Solomon was a cripple and it was very hard for him to walk, caused by rheumatism. He and Uncle Jesse moved from New York to Ohio and from there to Illinois, first to Tazewell County and afterwards to LaSalle County and Uncle Solomon died in Homer.

Clarissa Walker was born November the 25th, 1787, in the State of Vermont somewhere near the line of New York State and when about twelve years of age was at school when the news came that George Washinton was dead. The school was dismissed and all in sorrow went home. Her father was an officer in the English army that came over to subdue the rebels in the time of the revolution, but after he became fully acquainted with the cause and conditions that led to the rebellion, deserted the English and was willing and anxious to join the army of the colonies but was not permitted to do so. He finally settled in Vermont and never ventured to return to England. That was at a time when nails were made by hand, and he carried on that business to some extent but was not able to supply the demand and he sent to England for a number of kegs of nails and they came all right, and when he opened them, one keg was filled with silver dollars, and it was thought that his folks in England adopted this method to send money to him for the sea at that time was infested with pirates. The family consisted of several boys and two girls. Henry was the only one of the boys that I ever saw. Nancy and Clarissa were the two girls.

Grandfather Walker secured a place in New York a hundred miles or so from where they lived in Vermont, and one of the boys went there to build a house and make other improvements, and after getting through with the work, started for home on foot, but before reaching home was taken sick and somewhat deranged, and when he would call at a house the people were afraid and would not take him in, but would send him on, and he was treated in a like manner by others, and he finally went out on one side of the road and laid down, and was there a day or so before being found by someone that was passing by and taken to a house where he recovered so as to tell who he was, but soon after died. His funeral sermon was preached from the text found in Mathew, 25 chapter 43 verse----I was a stranger and ye took me not in.

After the family moved to the State of New York in the course of time Nancy, the oldest of the two girls, married a man by the name of Humphrey Smith, and on November 25, 1803, Reuben H. Wixom and Clarissa Walker were married and lived in Tompkins County near Cayuga Lake where Nathan was born Nov. 22, 1804, and Jesse A. was born Jan. 17, 1807, and Solomon Sq. was born Mar. 26, 1809, and in 1810 the family moved to the State of Ohio and located in Franklin County about ten or twelve miles east of Columbus in a new country with limited means, but there was plenty of game deer, turkeys, wolves, etc., and my father was an expert with the rifle, skillful trapper and a regular Nimrod of a hunter, so the family was provided for with plenty to eat and lived contented and happy. There was born Justin D., July 25, 1811--Reuben H., Jr., Dec. 25, 1813--Abraham Feb. 19, 1816, Urban D., the seventh son, April 5, 1818, Henry W. Sept. 20, 1820, and Chancy S. Aug. 27, 1822. Clarissa Parthena was born Jan. 19, 1826.

During the years that passed since the family moved from New York to Ohio Grandfather Walker died and Grandmother Walker married a man by the name of Houghton and they moved to Ohio, built a log cabin near my father's place, where they lived and where Father Houghton died --and on May the 7th Parthena died and Reuben H. Wixom Jr. died Sept. 3rd, both in the year 1827. I was then five years old and distinctly remember being at the place where they buried the dead and at grandmother's cabin and many other incidents that occurred. Father and Mother both belonged to the Baptist Church and were active and strict members and had preaching and prayer meetings at their house frequently.

My Father was a very strong and active heavy set man, full chest, with lots of hair on his breast and arms and on his head it was fine and silky--face rather round and fair--shaved smooth but generally left a little bunch of hair below each ear, and was bald, and bout five feet eight or nine inches tall and weighed from one hundred and eighty to two hundred pounds, and having always lived in a new country was very skillful in hunting and trapping and I have heard him say that he had often killed four deer by nine or ten o'clock in the morning but was never able to get another deer the same day. And one time having found a bear track in the snow he got a man to go with him and they followed the track for two days through the woods and finally came to where the bear had went up a large ash tree or stump which was forty or fifty feet high, the top of the tree having been broken off. Father had a good dog, an ax and a rifle so they went to work and soon cut the stump down, for it was quite rotten in the middle, and when it fell left the bear in good shape. Father sprang for his rifle and the dog for the bear, but the bear got the dog in its arms and the rifle, an old flintlock, the only kind they had in them days, refused to go off. Some snow having dropped and wet the powder in the pan. So in hopes of saving the dog, which he valued highly, he called to the man to strike the bear with the ax, but instead of doing so he got himself a little further away. Then father dropped the rifle and seized the ax and went for the bear. Bruin saw the new danger and was turning to meet it when the ax struck him in the head, which settled him, but the dog was injured in the back and was no good after that, but the hide and meat of the bear brought him something over twenty dollars.

It was a timbered country where father lived and it was a big job to cut the trees and clear up a farm and when that was done there were lots of stumps in the field with a clayey and rather unproductive land, and was so hard to cultivate, it being necessary to do a good deal of the work with the hoe, but he kept the boys working and he was very ingenious and skillful in making almost anything was needed--wheels for spinning wool and flax--bedsteads, chairs, half bushel measures, drums, looms for weaving, and sometimes shoes and mocassins. Mother was equal to the demands of the times in which she lived, having been while quite young trained to spinning both wool and flax and weaving and making the clothes that were needed in the family.

Father had seen and talked with a preacher and others that had been in Illinois and they had told him about the prairies and the richness of the soil, so he concluded to try to find a better place to get a living than it was on his farm in Ohio. So he disposed of all of his property in Ohio and started by wagon in November, 1827, for Illinois, his objective point being Springfield, and it was very slow and difficult moving that time of the year for they had a good deal of rain and lots of mud. This I well remember as at one place in crossing a very muddy slough I tumbled out of the hind end of the wagon and had a dive in the mud which caused quite a hubbub, but mother was on hand and soon made all right again and the family arrived safely at Springfield, Ill., December the 25th, 1827. Springfield was at that time but a small village, the capital was at Vandalia. Ten years after, or in 1837, the capital was moved to Springfield.

Father bought ten acres in the edge of the village with a small house on it in which we lived and we raised such garden stuff as was needed in the family. And father having received personal instruction from Samuel Tompson commenced the practice of medicine known at that time as a steam doctor, had a good practice and was very successful in curing the sick; and mother was a skillful midwife.

When father left Ohio Grandmother Houghton wanted to go to Illinois with us but for various reasons it was quite out of the question to bring her and make her comfortable so late in the season, and so father promised her that when we got settled in Illinois that he would send for her, so in 1829 he got a light wagon and a horse and sent Solomon to Ohio to bring Grandmother to Illinois, but during this time she was taken sick and died, so we were all grieved and disappointed. It was about this time that I saw the first Indians. While with a lot of boys playing at a brook about a half a mile from home with a tin cup to put fish in, and while very busy and hearing a noise I looked around and there the ground and hillside were covered with Indians mostly on horseback. The other boys had seen them first and had skipped out, and if there ever was a scared boy, I think that I was one at that time. I heard them say afterwards that there were 500 Indians. Anyhow, the cup was left and I have not seen it since. On the 12th of July, 1829, while we lived in Springfield my sister Nancy was born--a welcome and joyful event in the family --as there had been nine boys in succession and then Clarissa Parthenia that died in May before we left Ohio.

The practice of medicine under the Thompsonian system was very trying on my father, so much so, in fact, that he concluded to quit it and in order to do so thought it best to move to a farm and in 1830 moved to Tazewell County where he found a place to suit him which was located five miles east of Pekin on the Illinois river and ten miles from Peoria, or what was known at that time by the name of Fort Clark. On this farm he found plenty of work for the boys breaking prairie and making rails and fencing. The land was rich and very productive so we had large crops of corn, wheat and oats--in fact everything that was planted produced abundantly. And it was while living on that farm that Cynthia Lovinia, my sister, was born on December 28, 1831. This made twelve children born to the family. Ten were living and two passed away and were not. It has always seemed to me that we lived in Tazewell County many years, but the record is that we moved to LaSalle County in 1835. Father sold the farm in Tazewell County and bought quite a lot of land where the village of Troy Grove now is.

They first lived on a farm near Troy Grove, then named Homer.

Later they moved to Mendota and Mr. Foster conducted a farm near that town. In the year 1878 Mr. Foster and wife went to Boston, Mass., where they spent a year with his people.

Mrs. Foster had a very happy disposition naturally, always making the best of things as they come and go, always full of charity and a desire to help lift the load of burden from the shoulders of those whom she knew. She was sympathetic to a fault, and could scatter the clouds that come in life by her cheerful and happy ways. Like her mother she was a skillful midwife and gave much time to the work of that profession. She was a Christian worker in a consistent and practical way, giving much time and energy to the cause of temperance.

In 1880 Mr. and Mrs. Foster moved to Nebraska, where they had a daughter, Mrs. Clara Penfield, and four years later they made a trip to California. After spending a season in the "Golden State" they returned to Nebraska, and that was their last home on earth. Both of them were ardent workers in the Methodist church for many years.

John T. Earl's boyhood days were spent on a farm in his native county attending school in the winter and learning the trade of wheelright from his father in the summer. His father was a Methodist preacher but carried on the trade of wheelright in the interim of preaching and church work.

About the time he reached his majority, John T. Earl went to Morgan County, Illinois, where he was married and there his first child was born. About the year 1831 the family moved to Adams County where they remained until about the year 1856 when they caught the "Kansas fever" and emigrated to the County of Bourbon in that territory. There the father took up land and for two seasons the hot winds burned up the growing crops. The father died there and remaining members of the family returned to Adams County, Illinois. There the mother died in 1871, after which time the children married and scattered to different places and established their respective homes.

Elizabeth Rupart was born in the southern part of Ohio in the vicinity of Cincinnati. She was among the youngest of a family of ten children. She was born about 1794. Those were days when Indians were hostile to the white settlers. When only 11 years old she had the painful experience of witnessing an Indian Massacre. The Indians burst in upon the home when the family were all present. She was holding fast to her little 5-year old brother, hiding behind clothing which hung from pegs driven in the wall of their cabin. From her hiding place she saw her father and mother scalped and eight of her brothers and sisters slain. The Indians set fire to their home, and were driving away their father's livestock, when it became necessary for her to quit the burning building if she expected to live. So, holding tightly to her little brother, she cautiously crept out, hoping not to be seen--but they were seen and captured. They were taken with the Indians who traveled, Elizabeth noticed, north, day after day, always north. Finally they arrived at an Indian settlement near what is now Detroit, Mich. The Indians cared for them, probably expected to raise them, but Elizabeth was very uneasy and planned in her mind to escape. In a short time she took her little brother and struck out, but they were sought and recaptured and for punishment, they put her arm upon a block and cut off her left hand, telling her if she tried to run away again, the next time it would be her head. They lived with the Indians three years, Elizabeth never giving up the idea of escaping.

When she was 14 years old, and her little brother 8, they planned and studied their way of escape. They knew if they were caught again it was certain death. They made their escape in the night when all were asleep. They went quietly down to the creek, waded the creek as far as they could and traveled all night. In the day time they kept hidden in various ways. Sometimes they were tied in the top part of a tree so they could sleep with no fear of falling; sometimes their hiding place was one way and sometimes it was another, but they always traveled south. After a great many days of traveling and hiding they arrived at the fort at St. Marys, Ohio. There they were taken care of.

In a few years Elizabeth Rupart married Basil Day and went to Fayette Co. to live. There Rachel Day was born Dec. 6, 1816. Some time later Basil Day moved to Clark Co., Ohio and it was there Rachel Day met Alanson Earl, who in after years became her husband.

Alanson Earl emigrated with his parents to New York State from Canada the same year he was born, and in 1815 came to Ohio and settled within the borders of Logan County. He received a common school education, worked with his father at the cabinet maker's trade and other work which came his way. He grew to manhood and in 1832 he moved to Allen County, that part which is now Auglaize County.

In the year 1832 Alanson Earl entered 40 acres of land in Sec. 8, Goshen Tp., Auglaize Co., Ohio, erected a log cabin and his mother kept house for him. The following year he married Rachel Day, a native of Fayette Co., Ohio, and by good management, perseverance and industry, he made a home which was their home the rest of their lives.

A great sorrow came into his life in 1853 when the wife and mother died when Leonard was a young babe. Alanson never married again but with the help of his two older daughters, cared for and reared the large family. Another sorrow befell the family when thirteen years later his son, John, was killed by the kick of a horse, he being a lad of 17 years.

Alanson Earl died in 1868. He and his wife were buried in the Walnut Hill Cemetery near New Hampshire, Auglaize Co., Ohio. They were members of the Baptist Church; also all their family who grew to maturity were members of the Baptist Church. Children all b. in Auglaize Co.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

Sylvester H. Earl left a brief autobiography in manuscript form from which some of the following items are taken. He relates how the family of his parents moved from the State of New York to Scioto County, Ohio, where the writer was born. There were several moves by the family to different counties in the state. The father being a preacher accounts for the frequent moves. After the death of the father in 1822 the three oldest sons left home and followed trades.

Sylvester tells us about living in Clark County, and on the day that he was twenty-one years of age (on a Sunday) he, in company with his mother and brother James, took a horseback ride, and at a distance of four miles from their home, they met his brothers, John and Asa, whom they had not seen for nine years. The new arrivals were in carriages with their families. There John and Asa announced that they were Mormons and ministers, and explained their creed. They stated that they were on their way to western Missouri to help build the Mormon Zion there.

On October 1, 1836, Sylvester, and his brother Wilber, joined the two Mormon brothers and went with them to Illinois. Sylvester states that on February 23rd he was baptized in Illinois by Charles C. Rich. He then went with others to Far West, Missouri, where he arrived April, 1837, purchased land and oxen there and opened a farm. Later he went on a mission to Ohio and at another time to Indiana where he met his brother Wilber and ordained him.

It seems that Sylvester did not return to Far West, Missouri, for in the meantime the Mormons were driven out of Missouri and settled at Nauvoo, on the Mississippi River, in Hancock County, Illinois. Sylvester therefore took up his home in that county near Nauvoo.

When troubles broke out between the people of Hancock County and the Mormons at Nauvoo, Sylvester moved into the City of Nauvoo, where he built a home and worked on the Temple that the Mormons were building and performed other services in connection with church affairs.

When the Saints decided to move west, Sylvester H. Earl crossed the Mississippi River on the 10th day of February, 1846, in company with others, and started on the journey to the Rocky Mountains. He secured work in Iowa occasionally to obtain means to live on and passed the next winter on the Missouri River. In the spring of 1847 he commenced the long journey and reached the Salt Lake Valley July 24th, and immediately commenced work with others at building shelters for the people and planting crops.

On the 16th day of August in company with others, he started back to the Missouri River to bring his wife and children to Utah; he returned to Utah with them in the summer of 1848. In 1861 he moved his family to what is now Washington County, Utah, settling in Pine Valley. Later he moved part of his family to Middleton, Utah, where he ended his career.

On August 28, 1852, Mr. Earl was called upon by the General Conference of his church to go to England on a mission. He started Sept. 15, took a ship at New York Dec. 18th for Liverpool, and arrived there Jan. 5, 1853, in poor health. He left Liverpool on his return trip Mar. 31, 1855, with 575 Saints aboard, and landed at Philadelphia. After reaching Atchison with his party, he fitted out to make the journey across the plains to Utah. On that journey nearly one-third of the people died of the cholera. "The greatest scene of sorrow," he says, that he ever witnessed.

Sylvester Henry Earl was about five feet seven inches tall, weighing about 180 pounds, of dark complexion, walked with a quick step, head erect. He was kind and courteous to everybondy and a favorite among young people, as well as among the older ones. He was often chosen to conduct social gatherings and to serve as toastmaster at Banquets; he was full of wit and humor, and was also a fine public speaker. No one slept while he was talking. He crossed the plains several times. He traveled so much on the frontier by wagon, and camped at nights in the open, that he acquired the skill of reading the stars, and he could tell from them the hour of the night with extreme accuracy.

At his home he was always well supplied with the necessities of life for man and beast, and took care of the wayfarers without charge. He was a good mechanic, making all kinds of furniture, and was good at house building, and industrious to the limit. He lived on a farm, and if there were any loose rocks there, he would have his boys gather them up and place them in piles while they were "resting." He was a lover of sports, bu+ was never known to bet on a horse race.

Sylvester henry earl was an outstanding character in his day, and in the early settlement of the West.

"Joseph Wilber Earl was a school teacher for many years," writes B. Y. McMullin in a letter in 1917, in which he further says: "Of his early life I know but little. I went to his school in the sixties when I was quite young. I believe him to be the best school teacher I ever went to. He had an extended experience in that line. As my memory serves me, I heard him say he had taught sixteen years, solid time. Probably this would cover a period of thirty years. He was not only an educated man, but a smart man, and one that I thought very much of."

A copy of the family record contained in that Bible had been given to a distant relative a short time before, and was produced when needed for this book.

187. MATILDA FRANCES WIXOM GIBONS, dau. of Jesse (56), b. Mar. 12, 1841 in Bureau Co., Ill.; d. June 4, 1899 at The Dalles, Oregon; md. Sept. 9, 1855, in Bureau Co. to Rupp Franklin Gibons (b. Oct. 12, 1832, at Allentown, Lehigh Co., Penn.; d. June 3, 1909, at The Dalles, Oregon.).

In 1861, with three small children, the parents left Illinois on their journey across the plains. They went to Nebraska where they spent the following winter, and in the spring of 1862, resumed the journey to Oregon. They joined a train of emigrants as the proper means of safety from the attacks of hostile Indians. It was a long and tedious trip, and a great hardship for the mother with her three little children to care for. But the journey was made without mishap to any one of the party, except one man, who was killed by the Indians.

At Walla Walla Mr. Gibons exchanged his oxen for a span of white horses and proceeded on the journey to The Dalles, Oregon, where the family arrived late in the fall of 1862. About three miles below the little town a log house was found and a portion of it was rented and the family moved in. This was on Chenoweth Creek, and in the spring of 1863 Mr. Gibons built a house at the mouth of that creek, where the mother and three children lived and made a garden, while the father found and did such odd jobs as the community offered. Then in the fall of 1863 the family moved into the town of The Dalles. There the parents and four of the children found their last resting places.

In the fall of 1883 the parents made a journey by railroad back to their old home in Illinois where they visited their people and Mr. Gibons settled the estate of his mother.

Mr. Gibons took active interest in affairs of his town, the Congregational Church, and the Masonic Lodge. He served for a time as High Priest over the Chapter Masons at the Dalles.

Mrs. Gibons became an active member of the Congregational Church at The Dalles and was devoutly religious. She almost died in the church. On the Sunday morning of her death she attended church carrying a beautiful bouquet of flowers. During the religious services she became ill, left the church, and hastened home. A few minutes later she died.

191. RANDALL WIXSON, son of Joseph (57), b. Mar. 7, 1799; d. Nov. 17, 1870; md. Aug. 31, 1826, to Annie Fenton.

In company with his brothers, Townsend and Joseph, Randall Wixson emigrated to Canada about the year 1830. In the year 1837 the Mackenzie Rebellion took place under the leadership of William Lyon Mackenzie, an honest and sane political reformer, and the Wixson brothers became mixed up in the fight in a somewhat prominent way. As a military affair the rebellion was a failure and the authorities proceeded to administer punishment to the men who had taken leading parts in it. Randall Wixson and his brother Townsend were banished to Van Diemen's Land (former name of the Island of Tasmania).

Randall was a practicing lawyer and he took an appeal for himself and brother to the Queen's Privy Counsel at London, and both were released and granted tracts of land in Canada near Kingston, Ontario. This land, however, required occupancy and improvement to perfect title, and the Wixson brothers abandoned their land claims and both left Canada and settled in Sanilac Co., Mich. Randall Wixson was the first Clerk and Registrar of Deeds in Sanilac County. The brothers and sisters, Mary, Sarah, Jessie, Elizabeth, and Lois also settled in Sanilac County about the year 1840. There were so many of the Wixson family in that county in those early days that it was said that a person could not kick a dog there without offending some Wixson or a Wixson kin. Most of them were "hard shell" Baptists and anti-Masons. They had lived in western New York at the time of the Morgan trouble in Masonic circles and had imbibed anti-Masonic views. Randall served in the 2nd Michigan Cavalry in the Civil War.

He went to Canada about 1830 with his brothers Randall and Joseph, the account of which is more fully given in the sketch of Randall Wixson (191). He took active part in politics while in Canada as a Whig in opposition to the Tory party, and joined the Mackenzie Rebellion with his brother Randall, receiving the same sentence of banishment that was set aside by the same authority. After returning to New York he went first to Steuben County, and later to Sanilac Co., Mich. There, in those pioneer days, he taught school, served as Justice of the Peace, County Clerk, and held other offices. In his later years he was a farmer.

Jesse Wixson was a farmer and a Baptist preacher---an exhorter of the "hard-shell" brand. He became blind at about the age of forty, and during the remainder of the half century of his long life he preached regularly every Sunday at the little church at his home town of Davisville, near Croswell, Michigan. He was the Uncle Jesse of all the Wixsons, honored and respected during the eighty-nine years of his career on this earth.

(205). Res. at Claremont, Ontario, Canada, on the shore of Lake Erie; farmer.

Joseph Wixson was the youngest son of Joseph Wixson, Sr., who emigrated from New York State with the Berzee colony in 1797, who settled in the town of York, now Toronto, and helped to chop the Danforth road.

Joseph, Jr., the subject of this sketch, assisted his father in developing a most beautiful farm, "Elm Shade." The Canadian Pacific Railway later built a station on one end of this farm.

Mr. Wixson represented Pickering Township in County Councils for fifteen years; was President of the Age Society, Justice of the Peace, Clerk and Deacon of the Baptist Church, and later licensed to preach.

In politics he was a liberal, and one of the loyal supporters of William Lyon Mackenzie, when it was all it was worth to be a liberal. His three brothers, Randall, Townsend and Jesse settled in Sanilac Co., Mich., leaving Joseph to care for the aged parents and the old farm. Late in life Joseph moved from Claremont to Blenheim and died there.

201. AMOS WIXSON, son of Joshua (58), b. July 17, 1799, in Ontario, Canada; d. Jan. 30, 1882, on a farm in Lexington Township, Sanilac Co., Mich.; m. Mar. 23, 1819, to Elizabeth Long; m. (2) Isabel Ridley; moved from Canada to Sanilac Co., Mich., in 1841. No children by second marriage.

It has been stated that when Amos Wixson emigrated to Michigan in 1841 from Pickering, Ontario, the span of horses driven by him from Port Huron, Mich., along the shore of Lake Huron was the first span of horses driven that distance north into the woods. At that time there was no hay or grain raised with which to feed them. He, of course, brought grain with him. Previous to this time oxen were the principal beasts of burden, as they could exist where horses would starve.

Amos Wixson was a stern adherent to his religious convictions. He preached every Sunday for many years, and it was without remuneration or reward, except for the satisfaction it gave him. That to him was reward enough. He was a great man, physically, morally and intellectually. He measured far beyond his generation. His interpretation of the teachings of the Bible were practical common sense, equal to any of the right-minded thoughts of the present day.

When Elizabeth Long married Amos Wixson in Pickering, Canada, she wore a linen dress, the fabric for which was woven by her own hands.

Upon the marriage of each one of Amos' sons he presented him with 160 acres of land purchased from the Government at the exhorbitant price of $1.25 per acre. Then the father and brothers joined together and erected a house upon each one of the farms and built the necessary shelters for livestock.

It seems that Joel got mixed up in the Mackenzie Rebellion in Canada in 1837 and was banished, but had to leave his property in Canada, and also his wife--probably by her choice. In such cases the wives were granted divorces if they wished, and Joel's wife seems to have wished that way. The oldest daughter decided to remain with her mother in Canada, while the other children went with the father to Sanilac Co., Mich., settling at the town of Amadore.

The Sharrards came from England about the year 1760 and settled on Manhattan Island about fifteen years later. Sylvanus was the son of James Wright Sharrard, who moved to Ontario, Canada, in 1783, and first took up a farm in Markham, later moved to Stouffville, and in 1812 to Pickering. Ruth and Sylvanus Sharrard lived on a farm near Claremont, but in her old age, after his death, she moved to the village of Claremont.

213. GEORGE A. WIXSON, son of Reuben (59), b. Nov. 21, 1809; d. 1873; m. July 1830 to Emily Taylor, dau. of Francis Taylor and ? Sayre. Res. Clarksville, Allegany County, N. Y. Farmer.

There is a story handed down to the second generation that illustrates the spirit of George A. Wixson and the spirit of the times in which he lived. It was a short time before the Civil War, when the "Underground Railroad" was conducting a passenger service between the Ohio River and the Canadian border.

One winter day, as the story goes, George A. Wixson was in the town of Friendship, New York, some three or four miles from his home farm, accompanied by his son Francis. In the afternoon the local tavern keeper called Mr. Wixson aside, and after some earnest conversation between the two, Mr. Wixson unhitched his horses from the sled, put them in the barn and fed them. Then turning to his son, he said, "You better go home, Francis, and do the chores, as I may be delayed." But the boy was curious to learn the cause of his father's unusual behavior. Finally there swept into sight a man driving a team hitched to a light bobsled on which was a triple wagon box, covered at the top. The team in a lather and almost on a run, was whirled into the tavern yard. Then some men who just happened to be there quickly stepped forward and dropped the tugs. Not a word was spoken by anyone; but as the stranger's team stepped off, Mr. Wixson's team stepped on. And as he climbed to the driver's seat while the same friendly hands silently hooked up the tugs, the driver's whip was swung and the team was driven at a rapid speed toward the next village eight miles west where a similar scene was enacted, another fresh team was hitched to the sled, and the cargo proceeded silently but swiftly on toward the Canadian border. But before that border line was reached, the officers of the law seized that cargo of runaway slaves and they were shipped back to their former home in the sunny south.

214. PHOEBE WIXSON COMPTON, dau. of Reuben (59), b. July 20, 1812, Allegany Co., N. Y.; d. 1851; m. May 15, 1838, in Allegany Co., N. Y., to Jesse Miller Compton (b. Nov. 1814 at Tyrone, Schuyler Co., N.Y.). After her death he md. Mary Wixson (233); no children by the second marriage. He was a soldier in the Civil War, and died at Soldiers Home, California.

Jesse Compton was subject to asthma in his youth, and perhaps because of this physical defect, he never grew as most people and was a very short man, but he overcame his handicap and became a competent and active man. He was prominent in local affairs when a young man, and before he married was adjutant of a regiment that held general training days.

He married Phoebe Wixson, dau. of Reuben and Hannah Wixson, who lived then about two miles from his home across the east end of Waneta Lake. The young people lived with his parents a few years and three of their children were born there. About 1846 the pioneering fever started the young people westward. An ox team, a wagon, a few chattels, and the little family traveled over poor roads one hundred miles westward until a home site in the town of Clarksville, Allegany Co., N.Y., was located. There were 300 acres purchased; much of it covered with original forest, but stout hearts and ready hands made a home and prosperity went with them. Lumber from the new farm gave them their home, and a large sugar bush furnished them with the sugar they used. Three more children came to the new home, then a calamity overtook them, for the wife and mother died of consumption when the youngest child was but two years old.

In about a year more a stepmother came to help care for the children. She was Mary Wixson of Kenka, N. Y., dau. of Daniel and Deborah Wixson and first cousin to the children's mother. She proved to be a good mother to them and the children seemed to love her as a mother. It was on the farm at Clarksville that the children grew to adulthood.

Two characteristics seem to stand out prominently in Jesse Compton: one was a natural slowness of movement and the other a propensity to save. We used to say when we saw him going about whistling softly to himself, "Grandpa has received some money or has a scheme for getting some." Yet his tender heart made him lose a little sometimes. At one time he sold a beautiful bay horse and regretting it, went back and paid an extra ten dollars to get him back. He loved his horses and was always kind to them. He was very proud of his children and grandchildren and liked to show them off when opportunity offered.

In early life he was a member of Tyrone Presbyterian Church and later a member of the Friendship Baptist Church. He died at the age of 78 years, and is buried in Mount Hope Cemetery at Friendship, N. Y., and beside him lie his second wife and two of his children.

WIFE OF CUSTER AUTHORITY DEAD

Mrs. Flora B. Carnahan, 71, wife of the telegraph operator who sent out General Custer's dispatches and the general's secret newspaper articles during the years preceding the Custer massacre, died at her home in Orchard Homes Monday morning.

With her husband, pioneer Northern Pacific telegraph operator at Bismarck, N. D., when that was the farthest west station on the construction line, Mrs. Carnahan came to Missoula early in the century and became manager of the Western Union telegraph office here. Of recent years she has been a Christian Science practitioner here, having offices in the Masonic Temple.

Mr. Carnahan, who was intimately acquainted with the virtually unknown circumstances of the calling of Custer back to Washington for a presidential reprimand and shortly afterward of his being sent out on the expedition which resulted in his command being wiped out, considered that his valuable information was the property of his old-time employers and was reticent regarding it. Personal observations, however, enabled him to know that Custer was bitter over the graft and corruption centering in the war department in its handling of Indian affairs.

Mrs. Carnahan, although familiar with her husband's knowledge of historical events, never divulged any of his information.

Services will be held at the Stucky chapel at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon with the Christian Science ritual being carried out. Burial will be in Missoula cemetery.

CUSTER MASSACRE TELEGRAPHER HAS LAST CALL HERE
John M. Carnahan, Who Gave World News of Disaster Passes at Hospital

Sender of one of the world's greatest news flashes--the Custer massacre--John M. Carnahan, 89, passed away at a hospital here early Monday morning after a short illness. Although hearty and active despite his advanced age, a cold which developed in his throat last week brought about his death. He was taken to the hospital last Friday.

A telegraph operator for 53 years before he retired, he had sent many thrilling stories to the newspapers. During the early days of his career he sent much news when he was on the border between North and South during the Civil War.

His only known surviving relative is a niece, Mrs. Mose Garner of Los Angeles.

Carnahan gave his birth date as October 1, 1849, at Blanchester, Ohio. His mother died two months after he was born, and soon after his father was left penniless by the collapse of a Cincinnati bank. At 12 he was a newsboy, and soon after he learned telegraphic work. He spent his time in the Cincinnati telegraph office during the Civil war. From there he was sent to Nashville, then back again. Later he went to Chicago, and in a few months to LaCrosse, Wis. In April 1873, he was sent to Bismarck, N. D., as manager of the Northwestern Telegraph company.

For 17 years Carnahan was at the frontier station of Bismarck and when he left it was to come here in 1890. He remained in the Western Union Office here in Missoula until 1916, when he retired. For many of these years he was manager.

Mr. Carnahan's body is at the Stucky chapel. Funeral services are pending word from Mrs. Garner.

He probably moved in early manhood to some distant place at a time when the name in Dutchess County was written Wixson and never learned the correct name. There are several instances of that kind, full account of which is given in sketch of the life of Solomon Wixson (26). Some of them changed the writing of the name by dropping the letter "s", as here given.

It was in Dutchess Co., N.Y. that the name was for a time written "Wixson", but was afterward corrected by information from the relatives in Massachusetts. A full explanation of this change of name is found in the sketch of Solomon Wixson (26).

John moved to the wilderness from Dutchess County at a time when the name was erroneously written Wixson and clung to that form of the name. He moved to Perry, in Wyoming County, where several of his sons were living some years later.

Sarah Lucinda Shaw (b. Aug. 1, 1791; d. Feb. 25, 1857, at Farmers Mills). He was living in Kent, now Putnam Co., as late as 1827. Some years earlier his older brother had moved to Genessee County, and it is likely that Isaac had also moved to that County, and returned in old age to his native heath to spend the remainder of his life. Isaac Wixom assumed the name of Wixson in Dutchess Co., by mistake, as several others did. (See Solomon Wixson (26)).

Y. to a farm near Prattsburg about the year 1820, where he conducted a large farm and dealt extensively in livestock, and was a prominent man in the district where he lived. He built a comfortable home on a large tract of land, and reared a family of ten children, nine of whom lived to the age of more than 80 years and were highly intelligent. 314. AHIJAH WIXOM, son of Robert (76), b. abt. 1795 in New York State. His last residence was at the village of Wixom in Oakland County, Mich., founded by him.

Ahijah Wixom settled on a farm in 1836 near the present town that bears his name. He owned and operated a sawmill near his home, and had a store there, the first one in that vicinity. There were some tame Indians living nearby at that time, and every year they gathered at the grave of an old Indian chief and held a big pow-wow, and when the first railroad was put through that district and the excavations made for cuts through the hills, many Indian relics were found. That was in 1871, the Holly, Wayne & Monroe Railroad; later the name was changed to Perre Marquette. This railroad crossed Ahijah Wixom's farm, and the town of Wixom was laid out and became a railroad station. In time the Air Line division of the Grand Trunk was built from Pontiac to Jackson and passed through the town of Wixom, making that place an extensive shipping point for farm produce.

358. ELNATHAN ELDREDGE. son of Jane (120), b. June 11, 1810 at Harwich, Mass.; d. Oct. 31, 1871, at Salt Lake City, Utah; md. Sept. 14, 1839, at Harwich to Mrs. Ruth Baker Underwood, dau. of Joseph Baker and Jane Philips, and widow of Joseph Underwood, a sea captain who had been lost at sea. She was b. Mar. 10, 1811, at Harwich; d. 1884, at Salt Lake City. Mr. Eldredge was m. (2) in 1856, at Salt Lake City where he took a polygamous wife, Ann Maria Peck (b. Aug. 16, 1839; d. abt. 1901 at Salt Lake City), dau. of Harrison Peck and Margaret Anger.

Elnathan Eldredge was a sea captain for many years, and his wife, Ruth, was a school teacher at Harwich. They both became converted to the Mormon faith at Harwich in 1846 and, together with their three children, left Boston in April 1847 to join the Mormon camp on the Missouri River at what is now Florence, Nebraska, then called Winter Quarters, located near the then village of Omaha. In their long journey they took with them a cousin of Mr. Eldredge, John Wixom, and an uncle, Isaiah Eldredge, and his wife, Sabra Wixom Eldredge. The party took railroad from Boston, then the Erie Canal and railroad to Pittsburg, Pa. There they took a small river steamboat down the Ohio River and the Mississippi to the mouth of the Missouri River, where they took a steamboat up the Missouri to Winter Quarters, the outfitting point for Utah.

Ruth, the mother, while on board the boat, kept to the deck as much as possible to avoid the close, uncomfortable cabin. While on deck with her three children, she had two of them tied to a rope and the rope around her own body to keep them under control. The youngest child she held on her lap. The captain of the boat asked her where she was going. She answered, "To the Rocky Mountains." He responded, "You are a brave woman, and I believe you will be successful and reach your destination." The uncle, Isaiah Eldredge, fell overboard from the boat and was drowned, but his widow, Sabra, continued to the end of the journey.

In due time the voyagers reached the point of outfitting, and preparations were made for the long overland journey of a thousand miles with ox teams and wagons. Mr. Eldredge, the sea captain, did not know much about oxen and wagons, but he got advice from friends and purchased oxen and two wagons for his own use, each wagon having two yoke of oxen and one yoke of cows. One wagon he loaded with food supplies and the other wagon was used for the family and their belongings. All arrangements being completed, the long journey commenced. There were 500 wagons in the train, placed in companies of 50 wagons each. The companies kept far enough apart to prevent the cattle from getting mixed at camping places, and yet close enough together to be able to aid one another in case of attack by Indians, incident to the perilous journey. Buffalos were visible at all times. Occasionally the train would call a halt and assemble in close order to let a herd of buffalo pass, as they came in herds of hundreds. On the second or third day out on the journey the oldest boy said to his father, "Daddy, that yoke of oxen on the lead is not our oxen," and he kept insisting that they were not. Finally, as the train of wagons moved on, instead of this team following the wagon ahead, the oxen suddenly turned and ran off the trail and broke the wagon tongue. At that moment a man from another company came up and said, "Brother Eldredge, you have got a pair of my oxen, that yoke on the lead of your team."

"Thank the Lord," said Mr. Eldredge, "that those oxen are not mine." It was very amusing. He did not seem to care about the broken wagon tongue, but seemed highly pleased to learn that the unruly oxen were not his property. He said that he did not know much about oxen but knew all about lashing a mast. He proceeded to place a piece of wood alongside the broken place in the wagon tongue, lashed it there with ropes, and the repair lasted to the end of the journey. His oxen were found and brought forth and recognized by the boy, who knew more about oxen than his daddy.

In due time, after a long journey, the caravan reached the Salt Lake Valley. It was a barren desolate scene, isolated and far from civilization and far from relatives and dear friends. But here the emigrants were free from persecution and no fear from enemies, as they were in a desolate country where others could not wish to dwell.

All soon got busy building shelters from the coming winter. Each family built a one-room house, placing the houses against each other in a circular row forming an inclosure. This was their fort to protect the people from attack by Indians. The rooms, or houses, were made of logs, stones, mud, and whatever else that could be found of use to make dwellings. The roofs were made of poles, placed side by side, then willows, brush, rushes and grass, finished with a covering of earth. Each room was occupied by a family. In time of rain the water came through the roof, and when the rain ceased, the occupants would go outside to dry themselves as best they could.

Investigation was soon made to ascertain the amount of provisions in the settlement, and it was discovered that the people would run short unless strict regulations were established, and rations dealt out sparingly. A commisary was established and all provisions were taken charge of and restricted rations were issued. Mr. Eldredge was one of the moving spirits to secure the adoption of this plan, although he had in possession at the time one of the largest supplies of food stuffs of any person in the settlement. He gave up all his supplies and drew his own scant rations like all the rest. This was done that all would be provided for until crops could be raised, and none would suffer want in the meantime.

The weather was mild that winter, and in the spring much land was prepared for planting. A large acreage was planted to corn, wheat and vegetables. The crops came on, looked fine and promising, and the people eagerly looked forward for a harvest to relieve them from the shortage of food. Weeds, thistles and everything that could be made into food was used to tide them over until the growing crops had time to mature. Everybody was hopeful, but suddenly their hopes were blasted. From the mountain districts at the east came swarms of large black crickets. The ground was literally covered with them. They ate everything green in their path. They headed for the growing wheat and corn, and soon swarmed over the fields, devouring everything in their path. Men, women and children turned out to fight the terrible pests but all in vain. Nothing could stop their march. The hopes of a harvest crop vanished. All hope was gone when suddenly, as if by magic, there appeared in the sky untold numbers of beautiful seagulls, and their peculiar cries sounded like music to the ear. Soon the very sun seemed darkened by the clouds of birds. Some feared that a new peril had come, but they soon discovered that the new visitors were on a friendly mission. Down they came by millions and began devouring the crickets. They filled their crops or pouches with crickets, and when filled they would vomit the crushed liquid mass on the ground then return to the living crickets again, filling themselves and discharging as before, thus repeating until all the crickets were destroyed.

All this took place in the presence of the astonished and amazed pioneers. The crickets were destroyed and a large part of the crop was saved. Truly a wonderful miracle had taken place before the eyes of the people. What rejoicing was done! Even the children shouted with joy and gladness. No wonder a grateful people enacted a State Law making it a crime for anyone to destroy a seagull! All looked upon the bird with kindness and affection.

The pioneers had a great harvest festival on the first crop raised in Utah. All men assembled together and enjoyed a real feast, amidst a general rejoicing and praise to God for the great blessings they had received.

That year the people scattered and commenced to build homes in different parts of the valley, and soon branched out to adjoining valleys. Mr. Eldredge remained in the town of Salt Lake and assisted in its development and progress. He held many offices in course of time. He was Assistant Supervisor in Salt Lake City, and was a member of the City Council for sixteen years. He was an officer in the Utah Military Organization, and a member of the Walker Indian Veterans. He was in the great battle fought with the Ute Indians near Utah Lake, about the year 1851, when the Indians were beaten and driven south into the mountains. After that battle there was peace with the Indians for several years.

Mr. Eldredge engaged in the farming business. He soon learned how to farm, and during the great grasshopper season, about 1852-53, crops were quite generally destroyed by grasshoppers but Mr. Eldredge raised a large crop of corn and some wheat.

During the next spring in planting time wheat was five dollars per bushel and flour twenty-five dollars per hundred-weight. People were poor and it was difficult to get money. As time to plant came on Mr. Eldredge had many calls from those who wanted to plant corn and wheat. Here is a typical conversation had by him with those applicants who wanted seed: "Brother Eldredge, I want to plant a couple of acres of wheat. Have you any wheat to sell?" "Yes, I have wheat; how many acres do you want to plant?" "Well, two or three acres." "Why not plant five or ten acres? This year will bring a good harvest." "I have no money to buy, and cannot." "Plant ten acres and I will lend you wheat to plant that much, and you can pay me back in wheat after you harvest it." Why, I will give you two bushels for every one borrowed." "No, you pay me one bushel for one bushel loaned, and no more."

This was done in many cases with those too poor to buy, and the result was that many had plenty of grain at the next harvest and had the wheat returned in due time. Mr. Eldredge was known and loved for his generosity and square dealings. He never had a failure of crops. He was deeply religious and always blessed the seed and land just before planting. On such occasions all present would kneel with him, and in simple words he would ask for a blessing to follow.

He was religious but not pious. He believed in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and showed his faith by his works, by the manner of his everyday life. He was a strong and fearless character, but most kind and gentle in dealing with unfortunate beings. He did not amass riches in this world's goods for he always gave as much as his circumstances would permit to help those in need; many a poor settler was saved by his generosity.

Elnathan Eldredge was ninth in regular descent from William Brewster of the Mayflower, the leader and minister of the Pilgrims. His wife, Ruth E. Baker Eldredge, was ninth in regular descent from William White and ninth from Stephen Hopkins, both of the Mayflower.

406. LEVI MORGAN WICKSON, son of Dyran (141), b. Nov. 4, 1851; d. Mar. 26, 1927; went back to his farm in Texas to spend the remainder of his life as a tiller of the soil and breeder of stock, in a region where the rough species of humanity had permanently deserted on account of sanitary reasons. But his children held a caucus and decided that the parents retire to the neighboring town where a comfortable residence was provided for them, and provisions made for supplies. And the man who could find no rest from the days of childhood was placed on "Easy Street" in his later life. Res. New Braunfals, Texas: m. to Mollie McGowen.

June 23, 1832, in New York City; d. June 24, 1884, at Sault Ste. Marie, Canada). He was a railroad builder and was engaged in that line of work and far from home when he died. His latest place of residence was at San Bernardino, Calif.

Mary Ann Wixom Crandall was just budding into womanhood when she joined a wagon train with her parents, heading toward Utah and California in 1850. She was the belle of the expedition, and, as the train's queen, she was permitted to ride a pony at the head of the train as it moved slowly across the plains---a fair bit of humanity leading rugged and adventurous pioneers into the new West. "Mother Crandall," as everyone called her in later life, kept her youth even to the time of her death. She regularly attended the meetings of the Pioneer Society, held every Saturday afternoon in a log cabin in the Pioneer Park at San Bernardino. She frequently talked to school children, her reminiscences teeming with adventure, romance, kindness, joy, and hardships of the pioneers of the early west.

June 12, 1846, at Sidney, Australia); divorced; m. (2) Sept. 18, 1887, at Salt Lake City, Utah, to Annie Eliza Lee (b. Jan. 11, 1849, in DeWitt Co., Texas; d. May 5, 1908, at San Diego, Calif). She was divorced wife of Henry McGuire and dau. of John P. Lee and Eliza Foscue. She had a son by her former husband named Rupert, who adopted the name of his stepfather.

Willard A. Wixom was an expert axman, and worked much in the forest with his brother, Nathan Jasper (426). In his later life he gave most of his time to mining and prospecting in gold districts of southern California.

The following extract is from a letter by a daughter: "I want to write you something about my father, Willard Ammon Wixom. He has light curly hair and the bluest of blue eyes. In his young days he was quite a musician, playing the violin. He sang nicely also. He was always cheerful and agreeable. He was quite a chemist and assayer and very handy with all sorts of tools. He had a little laboratory fitted up at home for his work. I used to marvel at his delicate scales (his own make, mostly), by means of which he could weigh a fly's wing or a pencil mark. He had stacks of scientific books, which he used to peruse diligently at nights, along with his Bible, of which he was also a great student. He was one of the early pioneers of San Bernardino, Calif. He had a wonderful rose garden there when I was a little girl. He loved to bud his plants and had great success with it. One of his rose bushes had four or

He was so kind to him, in fact, that when the boy's real father came for him he repudiated him for his stepfather."

428. CYNTHIA WIXOM PAYNE, dau. of Nathan (151), born Nov. 28, 1845, at Nauvoo, Ill.; d. Nov. 10, 1923, at San Gabriel, Calif.; m. July 5, 1861, at San Bernardino, Calif., to Joseph Mott Payne (b. Sept. 7, 1825, in Aberdeen, Scotland; d. June 29, 1907 in Chelan Co., Wash.), son of Henry Payne and Mary Gates.

Joseph Mott Payne came to this country with his parents in 1832 by way of Canada. From his days of early manhood he became a "pal of nature." He was ever ready for a scouting trip into the great unknown, of forest, mountain and plain. He crossed the plains twice before the days of the railroad. On one of these trips, in company with his father's family, the party stopped in southern New Mexico, where the buffalo and wild horses were still roaming the plains. There Nature had provided a wonderfully picturesque home site for them in a district that has since become a wonderland for tourists. Many Indians were there who were friendly and helpful until our Civil War broke out, and the soldiers stationed there were called away for more important duties. Then the Indians there, freed from military restraint, drove the white people out of the district, and the Payne family moved on to California. Mr. Payne then joined the first mining rush to the Rogue River mining district in Oregon, to which the only means of transportation was by foot with a pack on the back, aided by friendly Indians hired for the purpose.

After those rugged days in Oregon, Mr. Payne took to the sea and went to the South Sea Islands and Central and South America. Later he returned to the United States and settled down for a few years at San Bernardino, California. There he became annexed to the Wixom family by marriage. In company with his father he was engaged in doing blacksmith work and machinery repairs. But when gold discovery brought Nevada into the limelight, the mining fever again aroused his pioneer spirit and Joseph M. Payne loaded his wagon with his family and supplies and joined the grand rush to Virginia City. There he made a stake, followed by a real "clean-up" at Silver City.

Mr. Payne returned to California, and later went to Chicago by railroad, reaching that city in time of the great fire there in October, 1871. He then made a trip through the Atlantic and southern states, viewing some of the battlefields of the Civil War. Later, while at Shreveport, Louisiana his mechanical skill and genius were discovered by railroad promoters who employed him to help solve some of the early day problems of railroad construction, for which he received large compensation. He afterward followed road construction with one of his patented inventions, the first wheel scraper in use.

About the year 1874 Mr. Payne took up his residence in Dallas, Texas, built a large machine shop, where he manufactured several of his own invented machines, including his sulky plow attachment, which became very popular. In fact, some of the leading features of his inventions are still in common use today. One of his most remarkable achievements was in response to a call from the State of Texas for a plow that would scour in the black, waxey soil found in that state. The state had offered a diploma and one thousand dollars in gold to the first inventor who would produce such a plow. More than twenty types of plows were offered in competition for the test, but Mr. Payne's plow was the only one that would scour perfectly in all degrees of wet or dry soil, and he won the diploma and the money.

Mr. Payne finally settled down in San Diego, California, and engaged in mercantile business in partnership with his son, Lester, who remained his business associate and constant companion. The later years of Mr. Payne's life were spent in the state of Washington, where father, mother and son indulged in the life of "the great outdoors," all being able to see God in the grandeur of nature, and to hear Him in the voices of water, birds, and trees.

In his pioneer days Joseph Payne acquired a love for the horse, dog and gun; and even at the age of seventy-seven years, while hunting in the Cascade Mountains, he would allow the younger men who accompanied him to shoot at the game first. And if the younger men failed to bring the bird to earth, he would take a wing shot, seldom failing to get the game. On one of his hunting trips Mr. Payne's horse stumbled, threw him to the ground, inflicting injuries that resulted in his death. On the third day of intense suffering from his injuries, he suddenly called aloud, "Up, up, up!" And springing to his feet, and turning his face heavenward, and smiling, he breathed his last.

In a letter dated March 17, 1920, Cynthia Payne, daughter of Nathan, writes:

"The first picture in my memory as a child is of Indians, wild buffalo, great mountains and vast plains, and with a sort of fear of the great wild world with never a place to rest. But one bright summer day we landed in beautiful Monterey, California, a little Spanish town built of adobe. The only interesting thing in the place was an old Mission Church, builded by the pioneer priests in 1770, near which they had orchards, vineyards and gardens. These orchards were thrown open every Saturday to the poor and the strangers. They could spend the day there if they choosed and eat all they wanted, but take none away. The church was built in the shape of a cross and named San Juan Bautista.

"Here, to me, was the beginning of life. My father bought land, built a home, planted barley, wheat and corn, raised fine horses and cattle, and was prosperous beyond anything dreamed of in the old days of farming. We lived about two miles from town, so the walk was hard on me, as I was the youngest child. Wild cattle were numerous and vicious. We had many narrow escapes from death going and coming. These cattle were owned by wealthy Spanish dons, who owned land by the mile, instead of by the acre; and most of their cattle had neither brand nor mark.

"But aside from these unpleasant things, it was a land flowing with milk and honey---a lovely country with rolling hills covered with clover. Beautiful wild flowers peeped from every nook and corner. Here and there were groves of live oak and in the distance the wild oats grew so thick and tall that men were often lost as they rode through. But the most beautiful sight of all was the wild mustard. When in bloom it looked like a great sea of gold, waving and gleaming in the summer sun. No wonder these people from the sunny land of Spain felt grieved to see their holdings slipping away into the cold grasping hands of the gringos.

"Our little school house was right across the street from the old church. We could see, as the door stood open nearly every day, many ceremonies of feast days. Holy days, weddings, funerals and christenings were often conducted with great display.*******

"The fathers made fine wine from their vineyards, but never sold any. It was used for the sick and for church ceremonies. No one was neglected on account of nationality or creed. The crucifix, the book, the beads, the prayer, with abundance of herbs for every ailment, saved many a "gringo" from suffering and death. My own father was a witness to this assertion. When on his way to Santa Barbara he became very sick. He was carried into a ranch home and cared for as kindly as if he were of their own people, although he could not understand one word spoken. After a number of days he was able to resume his journey; and as he was taking his leave, he thanked them for their unusual kindness and offered them money. But the Senora answered, 'No, no,' made the sign of the cross and pointed upward. As he rode away from this kindly place he thought of the words of Jesus when he said, 'Other sheep have I that ye know not of.'

"After his return from Santa Barbara my father concluded to trade his home for land in that county, where he thought the people were more up to date. So the transfer was made and we left the land of wonder for a better (?) one. The new place was among the hills of live oak timber, away back from the little town on the coast where mother and the younger children lived. Schools were convenient, and we could see the ships passing, loaded with passengers and freight, and the fishermen in their boats with sails fluttering. It was not the dreamy place we had left a short time before although the fruits and the flowers were the same; and the mission was there, only much larger. The adobe houses and sweet voices with Spanish accent greeted us in the same kind way. Brothers Willard and Jasper and our Indian boy Joe, were on the ranch with father most of the time, caring for the livestock and improving the ranch until one day news came from San Bernardino of the Mormon stampede for Salt Lake. There might be a chance to purchase land there from some one who was preparing to sell and leave for Salt Lake. My father went. He saw and was conquered. He bought land under the shadow of the mountain with the great arrow on its side, pointing to the hot springs just beneath. It was claimed by the first settlers there that God had placed that picture of the arrow on the side of the mountain there as a sign for his chosen people to come from all parts of the world and inhabit this wonderful valley, and drink from the waters placed there for the healing of the nations.

"Leaving Santa Barbara we moved to Los Angeles for a while and bought property there, which was also covered with oak timber. The herds were kept there for a year. We had better schools there. The old fort built by the American soldiers on a bluff overlooking the town was right above our home. Cannon balls were still scattered around over the streets, and the sidewalks were shaded with palms and pepper trees. Here and there huge cacti would almost obstruct the sidewalk. The inhabitants were rubbing their eyes and wondering what next. The Spanish still outnumbered all other nationalities, and they still maintained that kindly spirit, and never forgot to stop, wherever they might be, to lift the hat when the vesper bells rang out, and bless their hearts with the sign of the cross.

"After my father's trip to San Bernardino, and his purchase of land in the valley there, nothing else was thought of or talked about but "The Land of Plenty," as the Indians at that time called it. Considerable time was spent in preparing for the change. Everything that we could possibly need was stowed away in wagons, and with horses more than we could use, we left the beautiful San Gabriel and the City of Angels, with all their unique environments, with a touch of sadness in the heart. It was only moving from one county to another but California, unlike any other country, is so constructed that one has only to step over the fence, as it were, to be in a foreign land. We took our time and moved slowly. At the end of the third day the seventy-five mile trip was finished; and all our paraphanalia, including children, were being unpacked on a two acre town lot. Then came the building of a house, and like all other houses in southern California at that time, it was made of adobe. Father and brothers Willard and Jasper and our Indian boy Joe made a thick mud plaster from black sticky soil which was poured into wooden boxes the size of four or five ordinary bricks, turned the mud out on smooth ground, where it was turned over every day or two and left to dry in the sun. Two tiers of these adobe bricks made a thick wall which will last many years if properly roofed.

"The house when finished had four rooms, a fire place, and a wide porch across the front. It made a very comfortable home. A barn was built further out of town, made of lumber and large enough to store all grain that might be raised, such as corn, wheat and barley. Then was built a stable or shed for a few of the fine horses father was raising. Some of the horses were from Lucky Baldwin's ranch. I remember one dapple gray of perchon stock for which father paid fifteen hundred dollars. But most of the horses were of Kentucky breed, dark bay in color, with small intelligent heads and graceful necks. All were gentle and easy to handle. No one was allowed to strike or abuse them.

"Gardening was started right away, which grew rapidly; and in time we had corn, water melons and all the good things for the table. Life took on a rosy hue as we went back and forth to school, where we spent most of our time in play. The older children were in school when not too busy planting, cultivating, or harvesting, herding cattle or breaking colts for work. Ours was a busy family for a few years and happy in their successful endeavors.

"But the time came when live stock of both kinds were increasing and sales were decreasing, and there were no railroads to ship them to a market. Looking in every direction for a place to dispose of surplus stock father decided that Utah was the place. He would drive a band over there where the country was settling up rapidly and horses were in great demand. Mother was opposed to the boys going on such a hard, and, as she thought, dangerous trip with so few in number, as the Indians might stampede the stock; so mother insisted that all the family should go.

"This plan being decided upon preparations were made for the trip. Two big wagons were loaded with provisions and all things necessary, with plenty of grain for the horses. Then there was another wagon which we called the kitchen, containing a small cook stove fastened in the center of the wagon, filled with cooking utensils, dishes, and cooked food for the noonday lunch or for a snack between meals. This was mother's wagon, as she drove the team. The children, riding during the day perched on the boxes, could look out at the mountainous and wild country. Mother always took the lead in the morning, the other wagons following after. Brother Reuben was with us on that trip with his own wagon and team. His good little wife and baby with him added much pleasure to the journey. Two cows driven along gave all the milk we could use. All surplus milk was put into a wooden churn before starting out in the morning, where was found at night plenty of butter for the next day. Thus we lived and moved like the princes of old in their ancient caravans. We traveled slowly, giving the band of horses every opportunity to keep in good condition, as there was abundance of food for them on every side. The only difficulty was in finding plenty of water at proper intervals.

"After leaving the Mohave River the Indians came into our camp every evening while we were cooking, asking for food. The night we camped at the Colorado River crowds of them came. Men, women and children, rubbing their stomachs and saying, 'Very hungry, very hungry, very hungry,' and kept it up until father gave them a sack of corn meal and an iron kettle, and told them to go down by the river, start a fire, and cook mush, which they did. The kettle was filled again and again until the meal was all gone. After their feast they were happy. Joe, our Indian boy, who could understand a little of their lingo, asked them to dance. They gathered brush and made a big blazing fire, then danced around, jumped over the fire, snapped the strings of their bows, which they carried in their hands and sang queer songs; and as they grew tired they one by one slipped away in the darkness. It was there for the first time, that our boys realized that they were in the heart of the Indian country. From that time on every one was on guard with an eye to the horses. They rode around with hand on gun. Saddle horses were always ready for quick mount at the least warning.

"When nearing the summit of the Rockies we found the road rough and up-grade, worse than we had yet encountered. Then suddenly we were at the top, and surprised to see how the top seemed to sag down in the shape of a great shallow basin. There were no trees there, nor shrubs of any kind. All was a beautiful green meadow with little springs of water trinkling down from the ground above, making in some places little marshes.*******

"Not many days later we were getting where we had to camp a mile or so out of town so the horses could find feed. At every new place the question was asked, 'Are you Mormons or are you Americans?' and our every step was watched with suspicion. Of course we were Mormons. We couldn't be anything else under the circumstances. Reuben and father were pushing sales as fast as possible so we could retreat to safer ground; for the rumbling of war clouds could be heard issuing from the eastern part of the territory where the United States army was approaching. The inhabitants were restless and uneasy, trying to persuade themselves that God would fight their battles and that they would win. The Indians were also restless and hanging around in great numbers, asking, 'You Melicat? (American)." When the answer would be 'Mormon,' they would jump around and sing songs which had been taught them by the whites. This is one among them:

"'Old squaw-killer Harney's on the way, du dah, du dah,
The Mormon people all to slay, du dah, du dah day;
Then let us be on hand, by Brigham Young to stand,
And if our enemies do appear, we'll sweep them from the land.'

"At last we reached the City of Ogden, the terminal of our journey, where everything was sold, down to just enough horses to take us on our return trip home. Here church officials cornered father, as he was a good member of the church he must live up to the law, make his confession and pay his tithing. Finally he and mother thought best to comply with the requirements. The valuation of the property was settled and the one tenth tithing was paid. But in the shuffle father wisely forgot his pocketbook and its contents, of which they never learned. Reuben was also held for his "ten per" on his wagon and four horses. Every one insisted that we get a home there; but no, the place we just left was better.

"At length one glad morning the wagons rolled out on the homeward journey, and kept rolling as fast as possible. Some days later we stopped near a little stream of water a mile from a small village, where the wagons were being overhauled and repaired in good shape for faster movements. Suddenly three men came up and asked for food. They were dressed in soldier's uniforms and proved to be deserters from the front. Tired, dusty and almost starved they begged to stay with us. To make their escape from the ranks they had borrowed (?) U. S. horses and rode away in the night. They had traveled fast and furiously among the hills, rocks and mountains, until the horses were exhausted and had to be abandoned among the wilds. Leaving their horses they started on foot without food, and for twenty-four hours had tramped over rough roads of rocks and hills when by chance they struck the lucky trail which led them to our resting place. All were glad to receive the unexpected addition to our traveling crew. They were fed sumptiously and they stowed away in wagons among sacks of grain and stacks of bedding where they would be safe from observation, while some one went to the village for rough farmer clothing to replace their uniforms.

"Our folks were very busy with their work when four or five men rode up to inquire if we had seen three men on horses of certain description which they gave, and cautiously commented that they were deserters on stolen horses, and that they were after them. No, we were certain that no men on horses had been in that locality since our arrival. Then one of our boys said that he had seen at a distance men riding toward the north and traveling pretty fast. (That was some time before.) After a few more questions they put spurs to their horses and rode away toward the north.

"Next day we left the nice little camp, with all its thrills and fears, and happy in the thought that our reinforcements were safe. After this occurrence we drove right along, avoiding towns and strangers until we pitched tent once more in the little town of Parowan, considered the most unsafe place on all the journey. After consulting together all agreed that the last leap for final success should be taken at four o'clock that afternoon, and drive all night to avoid trouble on the road from those who were perhaps planning to follow.

"Before the horses were harnessed for the journey Indians were passing in surprising numbers, striped apparently for a long journey, and well supplied with fine bows and arrows. They were traveling in a swinging trot, going out on the same road we would travel. They passed in groups of four or five together, but they all kept up that trot. This was a strange maneuver; but just the same we left camp at four o'clock, and before dark we were out and away toward the setting sun. Driving along at a lively gain until along about ten o'clock we suddenly came to the place where the Indians were assembled by the roadside in a large circle. All of our men jumped to the ground and walked by the side of the wagons, with gun on shoulder, while we passed them and still drove on. In a short time it was discovered that the Indians were following us, coming in that swinging trot. As they drew near they separated, half going on one side of us and half on the other; our men keeping the same position beside the wagons walked, walked along with guns ready. When some one clicked a trigger the Indians moved faster and never looked back. Soon the darkness hid them from our sight and we never saw them again. Their manner that night is still a mystery. For this to occur just at that place, and when we were living under great apprehension, it proved trying to the nerves.

"We had water in kegs so we could camp where morning found us, until we reached the Colorado River. From that time on we were safe to travel as we pleased. In places the roads were bad; but the day we approached the Mohave River the roads were fine and down grade; and long before we reached its beautiful waters we could look away over the friendly desert and see trees and vegetation growing along its banks, like a green serpent winding its way through the parched sand, relieving the scene of its weirdness. The very horses partook of the spirit of home and almost danced as they traveled along on their way to the evening camp. At last we forded the stream and pitched camp under great spreading cottonwood trees. Near by were wild grapes in abundance, climbing and clustering over willow bushes and often forming beautiful arbors.

"While every one was at work preparing for the night and evening meal, some one called 'Howdy-do, howdy-do!' It proved to be mission Indians crossing the river with loads on their backs, steadying themselves as best they could in the swift running water. Their baskets were filled with manna, which they were gathering for food. They would spend days stripping it from the leaves of tulies and barks of willows which grow along the water's edge. When gathered it looks like coarse brown sugar, but has a queer taste. We bought some for curiosity. We stayed there several days, where the Indians came and taught the boys the art of making bows and arrows, and showed their skill at hitting the target tacked on a tree at fifty yards.

"Willard and Jasper were delighted and enjoyed the few days visit with these strange friends of the desert. For a few trinkets they secured a large Indian bow, made by the chief himself, which was a fine piece of art. It was made of wood grown only on the desert, and completely covered with long sinews taken from the carcass of antelope. One by one they had been carefully preserved to strengthen this weapon of defense.

"With an 'Adios' and a wave of the hand, we started again for the home beyond the Sierra Madres, which appeared, as we looked across the intervening plains, to float in purple mist as we slowly approached the still distant West. Two days drive brought us to the summit of the Cahone Pass, from which point we could view the broad green valley of the San Bernardino, and anon could catch a glint of the Santa Ana River as it rushed on its way to the great Pacific. Beyond this river lay clover clad hills and rocks where the pioneer padres placed the cross on the highest eminence, and where it is still maintained by the new race that has builded the famous city of Riverside, God's storehouse, which nestles today beneath its shadow. San Bernardino was at that time an immense county, but has since been divided into three counties. Many wonderful improvements have been made since then; but with all the skill of man and money, with all the devices of art and science, man has failed to enhance the beauty of the natural landscape.

"At last we reached the little town of perhaps three thousand inhabitants, glad and happy. In a very short time father purchased our permanent home, between D and E streets, facing Third Street, where he lived many years until death called him away.

"After moving into this new home, we all went to work with a will to improve and build house after house to rent, as the location was very desirable for business of all kinds. In a few years father had quite an income from rents, and was the owner of much land in and around the city. My young brothers can be thankful for their faithfulness and loyalty to my father, which made his endeavors a success. During these years they were improving the Lytle Creek ranch, eighteen miles out among the mountains, where they were raising a few fine horses and improving the place generally."

429. DAVID HADLOCK WIXOM, son of Nathan (151), b. Feb. 7, 1848, at Keg Creek, near Council Bluffs, Iowa while his parents were on their journey from Nauvoo, Illinois, to Utah; d. Jan. 4, 1923, at San Bernardino, California. He was two years old when his parents moved on to the west and took up residence at Springville, Utah. A year later they moved on to Monterey, Calif., and later to San Bernardino, Calif., arriving there in 1855. That place became the final home of the family and the final home of David H. Wixom. He lived there the remainder of his days, with a few short intervals of temporary absence.

David H. Wixom and Mary Ann Stuchberry were married December 25, 1866, by Judge D. H. Rogers. Mary Ann Stuchberry was born July 7, 1851, in Australia; d. June 29, 1938, at San Bernardino, dau. of John Stuchberry and Emma Cadd, came to the United States in a sailboat and landed at San Pedro, Calif., with her parents November 1857.

At the request of the writer David H. Wixom wrote the following sketch of his life, under date of July 22, 1921:

"We moved to our new home in January, 1867. I worked for a short time at day labor, but after a few weeks I commenced driving a team on shares for Lucian D. Crandall. After a few months I gave up the team work and rented a small farm near San Bernardino; two years later I went to work in the blacksmith shop in San Bernardino. A few months later I was taken sick with chills and fever and had to quit work in the shop as I could not get rid of those ailments. Then my brother Willard and I, with four small horses and wagon, started on a camping trip, and after about four weeks on the desert the chills left me. We arrived at Florence, a small town in Inyo County, and I went to work there for Joseph Payne at blacksmithing. After about four months I returned to San Bernardino and bought a team and commenced teaming and hauling lumber from the mountains and freight to the mining camps on the desert as far as Prescott, Arizona.

"In 1869 I bought a small farm of thirty acres and farmed and teamed. In 1876 I bought one-third interest in a threshing machine, worked on it two years and sold out. In 1879 I went to Prescott, Ariz., with a load of freight. I then worked at a mining camp at Prescott for five months when I sold my team and returned home to San Bernardino Co.

"In 1880 I sold my home in the country and moved to San Bernardino and took charge of my mother's business for two years.

"In 1882 I was elected City Marshall and City Tax Collector for two terms. In 1884 I was nominated for the office of Sheriff of the County by the Democratic Party but was defeated by forty-nine votes. In 1886 I was appointed Deputy County Assessor by F. M. Johnson, which appointment I held for four years. In 1890 I was appointed Chief of Fire Department by the City Council, which position I held for four years. I resigned from that position and bought twenty acres of land and three hundred colonies of bees, rented our residence, and moved to the bee ranch. The first year there my wife and I extracted twenty-eight tons of honey, between May 1 and July 10. We resided on that place two years, then gave the property to our younger son and returned to the city.

"In 1901 I was elected a member of the City Council from the Fourth Ward, which position I held for four years. In 1902 I, in company with Dr. C. D. Dickey, M. Kramer and H. Dorsey, organized a stock company and built a new steam laundry. Two years later I sold my interest. In 1907 I was elected City Councilman from the First Ward. In 1913 I took up a homestead in the mountains where my wife and I spent the summer. We have about four hundred apple trees there just coming into bearing, have a trout pond there where we raise all the trout we want for our own use and some to sell." Here his narrative ends; but there is much more to tell about David H. Wixom, who was one of the most widely known figures in San Bernardino County, California.

David H. Wixom landed in San Bernardino in 1855 in company with his parents, brothers and sisters. He was then seven years of age. He was a pioneer in every sense of the word. He was born in the unsettled part of western Iowa, all of his childhood days were spent in the work he could give in helping to transform that wilderness to civilization and prosperous condition. And he performed his part. There were battles to be fought with unruly gangs of redmen and white men in those early days, and David H. Wixom was a fighter, a typical, ideal pioneer. It seems that he never picked a quarrel and never shirked from one. Tall in stature, muscular and well proportioned, he was a splendid specimen of perfect manhood, mentally and physically. To the writer of these lines he once said, "I was never whipped by any man unless he was a better man than I was;" then he indulged in one of his pleasant smiles. And he seems to exemplify the words of the poet:

"The bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring."

For in all of his social dealings with wife, children, friends, and people in general he was the kindest, gentlest and most loving of men. It is truly a wonderful achievement to live in a community a lifetime and hold the love and esteem of all as did David H. Wixom. He was always successful in his undertakings, and he held many offices of public trust in his county. The word "success" will explain his whole career. He was never afraid to tackle the big things of life, and many times his metal was severely tested; but he always made good.

Such a man always holds warm friends in growing attachment, and he gets out of life just what he puts into it--namely, kindness, good will, loyalty to home and friends, and the esteem of the community.

David Wixom knew his California, and many were the tales he could tell of the stirring events of early days of Indian fighting and pioneer methods of handling business and general affairs, public and private. He performed his part in bringing about the marvelous changes from the sagebrush and greasewood of the deserts to the ease and luxury of life of the district where he made his home.

The final summary of his remarkable career may be stated in the words of the immortal Shakespeare: "He only, in generous honest thought and common good to all, made one of them. His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, this was a man." Her res. 1078 D Street, San Bernardino, Calif.

William P. Wixom was reared by the kindest of parents and given the advantage of good schools. It was while he was attending the Lutheran College at Mendota, Illinois just after his sixteenth birthday, May 31, 1864, that he enlisted in Co. A, 132nd Ill. Infantry, recruited on President Lincoln's call for a hundred days' service. On account of his youth his father opposed his going into the army, but the boy ran away from home and joined the army. The regiment in which he served was sent south to do guard duty and relieve veteran troops which were joined to Sherman's Army in the campaign from Atlanta to the sea. And the recruits saw some guerrilla warfare. He was discharged from service at Camp Fry, Chicago, Oct. 7, 1864.

After returning from military service Mr. Wixom married and engaged in farming at Troy Grove until 1874, when he moved to Wenona, Marshall Co., Ill., where he conducted a railroad eating house and restaurant. Many years ago an old timer, who traveled much, told the writer that that railroad eating house had the best reputation of any on the Ill. Central Railroad between Cairo and Gallena, the two extremes of the state.

But in 1878 Mr. Wixom sold his interests at Wenona, returned to Troy Grove, and again took up farming. Later he moved to the village of Troy Grove, purchased the store formerly conducted by his father-in-law, and entered into the mercantile business. He continued in that business for sixteen years, when he sold and moved to Mendota, Illinois, where he opened an ice cream parlor and confectionery store. After remaining in that business for a few years, he turned the business to his son Edwin and moved back to his old home at Troy Grove, where he continued to live the remainder of his life.

During his residence in Troy Grove, Mr. Wixom served at different times as Clerk and Treasurer of the Village Board, and was prominent in local social and public affairs. He was a member of Seth C. Earl Post, G.A.R., Shiloh Lodge No. 28, A.F. & A.M. Royal Arch Masons No. 79, Mendota, Ill., and Bethany Commandry No. 28, Mendota, Ill. In politics he was an ardent Republican and a prominent local political leader.

Peter Andrew Gerlach came to America with his parents in 1853 and was educated in the public schools in this country. When a young man he served an apprenticeship and learned the trade of machinist.

In 1874 he established himself in business in Mendota, Ill., where he opened a machine shop and agency for Domestic Sewing Machines. In 1875 he moved his family to that place and established himself there. He continued in business in Mendota till 1889, when he retired and moved with his family to Los Gatos, California.

Mr. Gerlach was a man of considerable genius in mechanics, and during the years he was connected with the Domestic Sewing Machine Company he was responsible for certain improvements in the mechanism of those machines. He also constructed much of the delicate machinery for manufacturing vegetable ivory buttons, made in a factory established for this industry at Mendota during the time he lived there.

After moving to Los Gatos he led a quiet life, devoting most of his time and energies to beautifying his estate. He was an expert horticulturist, and his grounds abounded with a variety of wonderful flowers, shrubs and fruit trees indigenous to the San Juan Valley district where he lived.

In politics Mr. Gerlach was a Republican, in religion an independent. It was while on a visit to his daughter at the old home in Illinois, and in the hopes of recovering his health, that he passed away.

441. JUSTIN CHAUNCEY WIXOM, son of Solomon (153), b. Dec. 5, 1838, in Caldwell Co., Mo., at a place called Log Creek; d. Nov. 29, 1912 at Brigham City, Utah; m. Oct. 13, 1886 at the Endowment House, Salt Lake City, Utah, to Ann Jackson (b. Oct. 10, 1846, at Shirdington, Gloucestershire, England; d. Dec. 22, 1907 at Brigham City, Utah); dau. of George Jackson and Louisa Nichols.

Justin C. Wixom was born at a time and place where bitter hostilities were being carried on between the Mormon people who had recently settled there and the older settlers of western Missouri. The Mormon men had been driven out of the state and the women and children were under the care and protection of the Missouri State officials. Soon afterward teams and wagons were sent from Illinois to convey the Mormon women and children to that state. Then Justin C. Wixom met his father for the first time and they became acquainted.

Justin was about ten years of age when his mother died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the stopping place of the Mormon people on their westward journey from Illinois. In the spring of 1849 Justin and his three-year-old brother, Solomon, were taken by their father to Utah. It must have been a hard trip for such young boys, and no doubt they suffered many hardships and privations on the long journey. The father married again in Salt Lake City, and Justin lived with his father and stepmother until he was nineteen years of age, when his father moved to a place called Lehi. Justin then left his father's home and started out to find employment. He walked from Lehi north to Brigham City, a distance of ninety miles, where he found employment by a man named Nichols. He worked for this man for about three years for very low wages. Then he went to work for Lorenzo Snow, who later became President of the Mormon Church. He worked in the summer and attended school during the winter months.

In the spring of 1863 he was called as a teamster to make trips to the Missouri River to bring people and supplies to Utah. But while making preparations to go on that journey, he received a call from the Church to go as a missionary to Europe, to preach and teach the gospel as understood by the Latter Day Saints. He cheerfully responded to that call, hoping to do much good in bringing souls to the knowledge of what he deemed the true religion. He sold three head of sheep and a yoke of oxen for ninety dollars to pay the expenses of his journey, bade his relatives and friends goodbye and went to Salt Lake City, where he received all instructions for the trip. He made his way to the Missouri River by ox team, then to railroad by stage coach, and to New York City by railroad, and from there on the English steamer "City of Cork" to Liverpool, where he arrived July 17, 1863.

Justin C. Wixom began his missionary work in England shortly after his arrival there, traveling "without purse or script," preaching and teaching without remuneration, entirely dependent on the Lord for place to eat and sleep. January 5, 1865, he was made District President, which embraced several conferences. That position he held until he received his honorable release to return home. He made many converts to the church and baptized many. On May 1, 1866 he was appointed President of the company of 450 emigrants going to the United States aboard the ship "Arkwright," which sailed to New York in July and reached Salt Lake City October 10, 1866. Three days later he married his wife, who was one of the emigrants whom he had conducted from England.

In December 1866, Justin C. Wixom returned to Brigham City, Utah, accompanied by his wife, where they resided the rest of their lives. There both husband and wife took leading parts in public affairs, social, political and religious. On May 26, 1868, Justin C. Wixom was appointed Assistant Supt. of Sunday Schools of Brigham City. On August 5, 1867, he was elected Councilman for Brigham City by a majority of 216 votes. In 1873 he was made Supt. of all the Sunday Schools of his County of Box Elder, a position that he continued to hold for eighteen years. During that period he traveled thousands of miles visiting and organizing and encouraging Sunday School work. In 1891 he resigned from that position on account of impaired hearing, rendering him unable to perform that class of work. He never recovered from that affliction. He was appointed Stake President of the Seventies of Box Elder Stake on January 31, 1881, a position he held for several years. He also served as City Treasurer and Collector for one year. He was a born leader and seemed to possess the faculty of enthusing people to work their best.

Ann Jackson Wixom, wife of Justin, was a member of the church choir at Brigham City for forty years, also President of the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association for several years and Stake Secretary of the Relief Society of Brigham City for ten years. She was also a Sunday School worker, and, like her husband, her work was not confined to church work. She served as Secretary of the Women's Suffrage Association of Brigham City as long as that organization continued to exist. She also served as City Treasurer of Brigham City for four years.

She was a good, loving and self-sacrificing mother and did all of her household work without assistance. She inspired in the minds of her children high ideals of life in this world and in the hereafter.

445. SOLOMON AVERY WIXOM, son of Solomon (153), b. Aug. 6, 1846 at Farmington, Van Buren Co., Iowa; d. July 11, 1899, at Brigham City, Utah. He was a member of the Mormon Church and a polygamist, and was married three times: m. (1) Oct. 8, 1869, at Salt Lake City to Penelope Bishop (b. Sept. 16, 1850; d. June 17, 1871, at Panaca, Lincoln Co., Nev.), dau. of William Henry Bishop and Eliza Pratt; m. (2) June 24, 1872, at Salt Lake City to Amanda Caroline Despain (b. Dec. 6, 1853, at Pecan Point, Miss. Co., Ark.; d. Jan. 23, 1928, near Burley, Cassia Co., Idaho), dau. of Solomon Despain and Ruth Newell; m. (3) Oct. 11, 1875, at Salt Lake City to Lois Orenia Earl (547) (b. Oct. 26, 1850, at Salt Lake City; d. Feb. 23, 1894, at Liberty, Bear Lake Co., Idaho) dau. of Sylvester Henry Earl and Caroline Owen. This last marriage was a matrimonial union between a grandson of Reuben Hiram Wixom and a granddaughter of his sister, Dorcas Tabitha Wixom Earl.

At the time of the birth of Solomon Avery Wixom, his parents were on their way to the West with their Mormon associates from Nauvoo, Ill., to Council Bluffs, Iowa. That was the first stopping place of the Mormons on their way to Utah. The mother at that time was stopping with friends at Farmington, while the father had gone to Council Bluffs to help prepare shelter for the Mormon people who were soon to follow on their trail in their westward journey. Some time later the mother and son joined the husband and father at Council Bluffs, where the mother died Jan. 3, 1849.

As soon as the spring weather would permit little Solomon and his older brother, Justin Chauncey, were packed into the wagon of a caravan headed for Salt Lake Valley, while his father walked behind the wagon. They settled at a place called Cottonwood, where the father married again. It was a wild country. The settlers were engaged in raising sheep. Solomon became a sheep herder at an early age.

It was at about the age of nineteen that Solomon joined a party of men who were on their way to the gold fields of California, lured by the mystery of the unknown and the certainty of adventure. On that journey the party stopped at St. George, in the southwest corner of Utah, where Solomon met a man named Sylvester Henry Earl. In a conversation with this man they discovered a relationship with each other. Solomon was a grandson of Reuben Hiram Wixom, and this man Earl was a son of Dorcas Tabitha Wixom Earl, a sister of Reuben Hiram. That discovery of relationship seems to have fostered a special friendship on the part of Mr. Earl for young Solomon, and he persuaded him to abandon the journey to California and take up his residence at the Earl home. The invitation was accepted and Solomon Wixom went home with Mr. Earl.

A daughter of Mr. Earl has left a description of the behavior of Solomon Wixom during the first evening he spent under her father's roof. She says, "When I was of the age of fifteen years I came home from a neighbor's house one evening after dark, and as I neared the door of our home there came to my ears the sounds of the finest singing I had ever heard, mingled with the imitation of songs of birds. I went into the house and was introduced to the singer, my future husband. It was a happy year for me when Solomon lived at our house."

It seems that from the time Solomon Wixom and Lois Orenia Earl, a daughter in the household, first met they formed a strong attachment for each other. In due time Lois' father took notice of it, and about a year after Solomon's arrival at the Earl home, there was a call made by the Mormon officials for young men to volunteer to journey across the plains to Winter Quarters, near what is now Omaha, Nebraska and bring emigrants from the east to Utah. Then it was that Sylvester H. Earl told Solomon Wixom to go on that mission, and Solomon went and made good at the work assigned him.

His work on the road was to drive ox teams back and forth between the Salt Lake Valley and the Missouri River. He devoted three years of his early manhood to that service for his people. His remuneration for this service was the satisfaction of having contributed to the common welfare of his people. During all this time Solomon Wixom devoted his leisure hours to reading and study. We find him in 1869 teaching school at Round Valley, Utah, now called Scipio, where he was a telegraph operator, with home at Fillmore. During his school teaching days he studied telegraphy and shorthand writing. Later he moved to Panaca, Nevada, where he was engaged in a wood contract. There his first wife died, leaving him with his little son, Solomon Don Carlos, then nine months of age.

Solomon Wixom's next move was to Alta, Utah, a mining camp, where he was employed as telegraph operator. He then went to Fillmore, Utah, where he taught school and served as telegraph operator. Then he went to Cove, Utah, and later to Beaver, where he remained twelve years. At Beaver he served successively as clerk in a woolen mill, school teacher, County Attorney, telegraph operator, Justice of the Peace, and stenographer in the District Court. In the last named position he took the evidence in the trial of John D. Lee, convicted on the charge of conducting the massacre of a caravan at Mountain Meadow. He then went to Silver Reef, where he was editor of a new newspaper established there. He went to Paragonah, Utah, in 1884, where he taught school for two years. He taught at Granite in 1886, and at Black Rock in 1887 he was again telegraph operator. Then he went back to Granite, and later to Liberty, Idaho, and finally to Basin, Idaho, his last home.

Solomon Avery Wixom was six feet in height, and weighed about 180 pounds. He had medium brown hair and hazel brown eyes. He was gifted with a cheerful disposition. During the later part of his life his health was poor from a nervous breakdown, which necessitated his remaining indoors most of the time. This was quite a punishment for him as he was a great lover of nature, and took delight in observing all the beauties of nature while driving across the country.

The writer has met all the living children of Solomon Avery Wixom, conversed with them and received many letters from them. And all of their words, written and spoken, tell of the happy days of childhood and youth passed under the home roof, with the joys of the home circle, the firm and just and loving conduct of parents. The younger ones seem to delight in relating the tender and loving conduct of the oldest brother, whom they call Don, who kindly and almost fatherly took care of them during the days when the actual father was absent from home performing some special work.

446. SETH JAMES WIXOM, later named JAMES MONROE SESSIONS, son of Solomon (153), b. Jan. 15, 1847, at Council Bluffs, Pottawattamie Co., Iowa during the time when the Mormon people were making their journey from Nauvoo, Ill., to Utah (see biog. of Solomon (153)); d. Sept. 11, 1931. His parents separated at Winter Quarters by special arrangement when Seth was one year of age. His mother, in company with her parents, took him and proceeded on the journey to Utah while the father remained at Winter Quarters to care for his former wife, then an invalid. A year later the invalid wife died at Winter Quarters and the father proceeded to Utah. In the meantime the mother of James, after securing some form of divorce from her husband, married another man named David Sessions. The boy, Seth James Wixom, was then renamed James Monroe Sessions, in conformity with the name of his stepfather, and has ever since gone by that name.

James Monroe Sessions was md. Jan. 24, 1875, at Eden, Utah to Alice F. Boyington (b. Jan. 13, 1860, at Ogden, Utah), dau. of Hyrum N. Boyington and Julia F. Ferris.

James Monroe Sessions, whom we will so name hereafter, leaves us the following narrative:

"From my mother I learned that she started from Winter Quarters, Nebr., in the spring of 1848 with me, then one year of age. We were going by ox team in company with many others to Salt Lake. At nights the caravan would arrange the wagons in a circle, and place someone on guard to watch for the approach of Indians, who were hostile in those places.

Often herds of buffalo would pass us and some were killed for meat. In that way we were many times saved from starving.

"We arrived in Salt Lake Valley September 27, 1848. We lived in Salt Lake City two years, then in the summer of 1850 we moved to Bountiful. In the fall of 1851 we moved back to Salt Lake. In the spring of 1852 we moved to Provo, Utah. We had much trouble with the Indians who were continually killing our people. It was a hard struggle to live there, as it was almost impossible to get what we needed to eat. We would go out on the Provo benchland and dig sego bulbs and gather thistles to eat. We planted a little corn and garden truck. We had to guard the growing plants from grasshoppers and crickets. When the corn got ripe we took coffee mills and ground it, and would make what we called "Johnny-cake." That was our bread. We had a hard time in the spring of 1858. Then we moved to Ogden, started to raise crops and got along pretty well. Next spring the Ogden and Weber rivers were very high and many logs were washed down. I took an ox team and log chain, hitched the chain around the logs and drew them out on the bank where they dried. I got enough logs in this way to build my mother a house. I took some of the logs five miles to a sawmill and had enough lumber sawed for the door, windows and floor.

"In the spring of 1869 we moved to Eden, Utah. There we had a hard time on account of frosts, but we kept on until we made a success of our crops. On January 24, 1875, I married Alice F. Boyington. We had eight children born to us while in Eden. Two boys died there. August 27, 1888, I moved with my family to Star valley, Wyoming. We arrived in Afton September 2 of that year. Four children were born to us while we lived there. We buried one there.

"Star Valley was a new country at that time, just being settled. The next spring after moving there I planted some apple trees. A neighbor came over and watched me plant the trees and said, 'I can put all the apples in my eye that you ever raise in Wyoming, as it is such a frosty country.' But I raised some apples there. I was the first man to raise apples in that valley. June 5, 1898, I moved to the Snake River Valley, Idaho, and landed at Goshen, where I still live." Res. Shelley, Idaho.

448. MARY MATILDA WIXOM SLEIGHT, dau. of Solomon (153), b. Apr. 7, 1853, at Little Cottonwood, Utah; d. July 27, 1936, at Paris, Idaho; m. July 13, 1867, at Salt Lake City, Utah, to Thomas Sleight (b. Sept. 25, 1833, at Swineshead, Lincolnshire, England; d. Mar. 17, 1918, at Paris, Idaho), son of Richard Sleight and Ann Lamb.

Thomas Sleight was the second son and third child in a family of six sons and two daughters. A friend and schoolmate of his early life has left an account of his youthful days in England, telling how industrious he was, how he always stood at the head of his classes in school, how he always tried to help his companions in their work and play and studies and how he was always loved by all who knew him.

Thomas was about seventeen years of age when he came to this country. While still in England he became associated with missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly called Mormons. He was always of a studious nature and religiously inclined and had made considerable study of religion before adopting the creed of the Latter Day Saints. He became firmly converted to the doctrines of that church, tied his faith to it, and ever afterward was active in teaching and expounding its gospel. In course of time he became a recognized authority among his fellow churchmen on religion and on all matters concerning his church.

Soon after coming to this country Mr. Sleight located at St. Louis, Missouri, where he lived for some time; but in 1857 he left that city and went to Florence, Nebraska. In those days the place was called "Winter Quarters." Soon after his arrival in Nebraska Mr. Sleight was called upon by the authorities of his church to help form a party to make a settlement at Genoa, Nance Co., about seventy miles farther west. It was to that place he then went; and there, in the year 1858, he was married to Miss Marianne Reynolds.

From Genoa Mr. Sleight and his companions moved toward the West. In 1861 they were settled at Hyde Park, Cache Valley, Utah. There Mr. Sleight lived for the next two years, when he was selected by the church authorities to help form a party under the leadership of Apostle Charles C. Rich to explore the Bear Lake Valley in the southeastern corner of Idaho, then supposed to be in the territory of Utah.

Bear Lake Valley was then a wild district, inhabited by wild animals and wild men. But it was a beautiful country, and the land seemed to be hungry for the plow. A favorable report was made to the church authorities and quite a number of families were induced to move into the valley and build their homes there. Mr. Sleight was among those who first responded to the call. He took up land there, helped lay out the town of Paris, and built his home there, and there his heavy labors as a pioneer commenced anew. And there is his final resting place.

The first step taken by the people in the new settlement was in the direction of safety. There must be protection against the ravages of the Indians. Mr. Sleight had been First Lieutenant and afterward Captain of the Militia in the Cache Valley settlement for the same purpose, and had been through the school of experience in that line of work. He was therefore commissioned Major, and authorized to organize a militia to protect the new settlement. This he did at once, and so thoroughly and completely were his duties performed in this work, that the new settlement was safe from Indian depredations from the beginning.

Mr. Sleight was always of studious habits. He became a man of culture and an authority on all matters among his people. He took an active and leading part in not only educational matters, but in all public affairs, such as roadbuilding, and other public improvements in the community. His quiet and unobtrusive leadership continued until fifty-four years later, when he was mustered out of service by an authority higher than any earthly power.

An old timer of the Paris district says of him: "I first met Major Sleight in 1865. He was then thirty-two years old, in prime of early manhood, a little above average height, brown hair, hazel eyes, and a complexion that any woman would be excused for envying. He stood very erect and moved with a poise and dignity that suggested a reserve strength of mind and body. And to me, a boy of twelve, he appeared a model of splendid manhood, clean in person and mind. He always appeared to have perfect mastery of himself in every way, and one was ever impressed with his sincerity."

It appears that the only contention that Thomas Sleight ever had with a neighbor was when he went to pay that neighbor twenty dollars that he had borrowed from him some time before with which to pay his taxes. The neighbor contended that Mr. Sleight had already paid the debt, and cited the time and place of payment. But Mr. Sleight insisted that he had not paid it and demanded that the neighbor take the money. The neighbor could not see it that way and refused to take the money. They could not agree. But the controversy was finally settled, like all disputes must be settled between men and nations where there is no chance to reach an agreement, by some kind of compromise. They divided the money, each taking half, and ever afterward each one contended that he was ten dollars ahead of the game.

In 1865 Mr. Sleight's wife died at Salt Lake City, while there on a visit. On the 13th day of July, 1867, in the Endowment House at Salt Lake City, he was united in marriage with Mary Matilda Wixom (448). From this union nine children were born, four sons and five daughters. Mrs. Sleight once said to the writer with motherly pride, "I have raised nine children, and they are all living, healthy, honorable, and respected by all who know them."

Any person who may become skeptical about the practical workings of the Golden Rule will be able to learn much by a careful study of the life and conduct of Thomas Sleight. He seems to have carried its practice to the limit. If he failed to get full return in kind he appeared to be amply rewarded by the inward satisfaction of having helped others. More frugal and energetic than many of his associates, he put himself in better position than others to indulge in the pleasant pastime of dispensing charity.

One of his sons tells this story: "I remember as a boy my first trip to the woods with team and sled to get a load of wood. I got a fine big load, carefully loaded, and was proud of it. I was anxious for my mother and sisters to see how well I had done. But before reaching home with the load, I met father, who complimented me real nicely on my load, then told me to take the wood over to Widow B__, as she was more in need of fuel than we were. So I did not get a chance to show off."

Another son said: "We boys were always overworked when the butchering day was over, and when the wagon came home from the mill with the grist, it was 'George, take this meat over to Widow A__' or 'Richard, take this meat over to Widow B__,' and 'Joe, take this sack of flour over to Mr. C__,' and 'Orson, take this sack of flour over to Widow D__.' Father sent us out on these errands before supper."

Mr. Sleight continued to reside at Paris, Idaho, from 1863 until the time of his death, except that in 1884 he was called to go on a mission to England, in the interest of his church, where he labored for two years with much success. His splendid physique and temperate habits enabled him to live to a ripe old age and he remained active to almost the last day. Only a short time before his death he stated, with pardonable pride, that he had just walked a mile in fifteen minutes.

The writer interviewed old time residents at Paris, Idaho, who were well acquainted with Thomas Sleight during his lifetime, and they all had the same story to tell of Mr. Sleight's ability and prominence in the community where he lived so many years, of his generosity and kindness to all, and of his public spirit in all laudable undertakings for the benefit of the community. Then they would tell about Mrs. Sleight and how she always gave hearty support to her husband in all his work, a worthy helpmate to a most remarkable man, raising and caring for a large family and always lending a helping hand to the sick and needy.

The compiler of this book will add that Mrs. Mary Wixom Sleight is largely to blame for the writing of this book, for it was her urgent requests for information concerning her ancestors that started the movement that produced it. (See more about Mrs. Sleight in the front of this book)

Her life has been spent in caring first for her mother, who was a widow for eighteen years, and after her death she lived with her sister, Alice, and cared for her during an extensive illness until her death. She has always been a favorite of her nieces and nephews for her kindnesses to them. She was a great storyteller, and they all loved her. She always had a great love for children. She now resides in Paris, and still spends her time in helping care for the sick & aged.

451. JOSEPH MORGAN WIXOM, son of Solomon (153), b. Nov. 10, 1856, at Lehi, Utah; d. May 17, 1917, at Montpelier, Idaho; m. July 1, 1880, at Salt Lake City, Utah, to Elvira Sarah Ricks (b. Dec. 5, 1860, at Logan, Utah; d. Mar. 26, 1932), dau. of Lewis Ricks and Amorette Allen.

Joseph M. Wixom was the sportsman of his father's family. He began the art at a youthful age, and he had to begin young in order to acquire the wonderful proficiency he reached in later life. As a fisher boy he was a marvel. Whenever a high Mormon official visited Paris, Ida. and called on Solomon Wixom, Solomon would call his son Joe and direct him to go down to the brook and catch a mess of trout for dinner. Then Joe would start on a trot with his rod and line for the brook and return in a remarkably short time with a supply of trout. The trout seemed to be hungry at all times to grab the hook that Joe Wixom cast to them, for it seems that he always caught many of them in a short time.

When he grew to manhood he was gifted with enormous energy. During one winter he made a contract with a sawmill company to saw all the logs that he would bring to the mill. And in that contract it was provided that Joe would keep the mill supplied with all the logs that the mill could saw. That contract provided a penalty that in the event Joe failed to supply enough logs to keep the mill busy all the time, Joe must pay the wages of the mill hands during the time they should be idle for want of logs to saw. Joe had quite a number of men felling trees and cutting them into logs, and others with ox teams hauling the logs to the mill. It happened on a Friday that several of the teamsters broke their ox yokes, and a delay in the hauling of logs to the mill seemed inevitable. The making of new yokes would take time and it appeared that the mill must stand idle Saturday. The mill men were rejoicing over the prospect of a holiday at Joe's expense.

The joke seemed to be on Joe, but he was equal to the emergency. He put his men to work at cutting an enormous tree, and placed on the skids at the mill the butt-cut of that tree. It was too large for the mill to handle without loss of time and profit, but it complied with the contract. This scheme on Joe's part gave him time to make new yokes for the Monday morning rush.

Joseph M. Wixom was a farmer in Bear Lake County, Idaho, and he always kept some fine horses. When driving on the public roads it was always a losing game for any other driver of a team when he attempted to pass Joe Wixom on the road.

Joseph M. Wixom was always generous in spirit, kindly and generous toward all who met him, always pushing his work with more than ordinary

This house was built in Sharon, Idaho, Bear Lake County, by Mr. and Mrs. Jos. M. Wixom. It was built in 1890. It still stands, and holds many fond memories for all who lived there, as well as the many friends and relatives who visited there and enjoyed Elvira's chicken dinners and huckleberry pies.

energy, and was generally successful in his undertakings. He would sometimes drive a sharp bargain but always honorable in his dealings and always full of fun.

His residence was at the head of Emigration Canyon which extended from Bear Lake Valley, Idaho, to Cache Valley, Utah. He had a large barn with plenty of feed and extra stalls for the horses of travelers who happened along the road in need of rest and shelter. Those people were always taken care of, fed and sheltered in the house, and their horses received the same generous treatment in the barn. For such accommodation Joe Wixom would never take a cent in payment.

Joseph M. Wixom did everything in his power to secure for his children liberal educations.

Elvira Sarah Ricks Wixom was born at Logan, Utah, a daughter of Lewis and Amorette Allen Ricks. Lewis Ricks was one of the three men called to explore Bear Lake for the purpose of a pioneer settlement. When Elvira was three years old, she went to Bear Lake with her parents. When she was thirteen years old her mother died leaving a baby four days old. Elvira, being the oldest one in the family, had to work very hard helping her father raise the other six children.

On July 1, 1880 she was married to Joseph Morgan Wixom in the old Endowment House in Salt Lake City. Four years later this couple moved close to Emigration Canyon and took up a homestead of 320 acres. They built a house there that was considered a very nice home for that time.

Other settlers soon followed the Wixoms, and the town was given the name of Sharon, after the birthplace of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Her son Lewis was the first child born in Sharon. She was the first Sunday School teacher and the first Relief Society Secretary in the Ward, and a first counselor in the Primary. Elvira always helped with the sick and gave freely to the poor, as she was blessed with more worldly goods than were most of her neighbors.

She was the mother of thirteen children, six of whom passed away before her own death. On March 26, 1932, she died and was survived by seven children, forty grandchildren and six great grandchildren. She is buried in the Preston, Idaho, cemetery.

He was a pioneer of the Bear Lake Valley, coming to the new town of Paris with his parents when a lad. He later moved to Liberty, where he met and married his wife. They spent the greater part of their lives in Liberty and Sharon, where he assisted in pioneering in those early days, such as farming, logging and working at lumber mills.

In later years Mr. Wixom became crippled and blind and the family moved to the town of Montpelier about 1922, to improve their financial condition. There the wife and mother engaged in regular laundry work for neighbors, and the sons who remained under the home roof secured employment and did their part. The family soon had a new home in Montpelier, bought and paid for. The kind and gentle leadership of the wife and mother shows how a woman can be great even in humble life.

456. LORENZO WIXOM, son of Solomon (153), b. June 28, 1868, at Paris, Idaho; d. May 20, 1924, at Burley, Idaho; md. July 2, 1894, at Bloomington, Idaho, to Lorena Maria Thompson (b. Aug. 8, 1875, in Denmark; d. Jan. 23, 1924, at Heyburn, Idaho), dau. of Peter Thompson and Anna Johannah Martinson. He was a farmer and lived at Heyburn, Idaho.

Lorenzo was raised in Liberty, Idaho. His father pursued the occupation of farming, cattle raising and sheep running. He was born of goodly parents and was taught faith in God. To all these fine virtues he added dignity, talent and the marks of hard labor. When he was a mere child he was taught by his mother to make straw hats, and he knitted his own socks. This talent he displayed all the rest of his life.

He was a farmer in Liberty and Sharon, Idaho, for some years. In 1917 he sold his home in Sharon and bought a farm in Heyburn, Minidoka County, Idaho.

He continued farming and in the early spring of 1919 the whole family experienced that terrible epidemic of flu. His son Clifford was so very ill and his heart being weak, passed away on the 8th of April, 1919, and was buried two days later. It was indeed a difficult time for the family as they were all very ill, but Lorenzo kept going and did for them the best he could. He was deeply grieved at the passing of his oldest son. During this time his wife was so ill that no one expected her to live. She gave birth to a daughter on the 30th day of March, 1919, who only lived three months.

Lorenzo carried on in the general routine of farm life until the early spring of 1923, at which time he and his wife decided that he should go to California and spend the summer. Some of the time he worked and a part of the time he visited with his relatives. He came home in the late fall of 1923, when he and his wife became stricken with the flu in December. On January 23, 1924, his wife passed away. He recovered some but never fully regained his health.

After this his boys went away to work and the small children were taken into the home of their sister, Hannah Prescott, where they lived the rest of their days until they were of a marrying age. Lorenzo tried to plant his crops and go forward, but all was in vain. His health was gone, he was weak and sick and lonely for his companion. Hannah and her husband, James, tried very hard to persuade him to come and live with them where she could care for him, but he would not consent to that. On Sunday, May 18th, 1924, he consented to come. They had a nice room for him. There he lived for only two days, and Tuesday morning Hannah went into the room to give him his breakfast and he was dead. His family remember him as a wonderful man, and a kind loving father.

Lorena Maria Christensen Thompson Wixom was born August 8, 1875, in Jelstrup, Hjorring County, Denmark, the daughter of Joseph Christensen and Hannah Johanna Mortensen.

Her father was the son of rich people. He himself had much but he was not a good man. He was a drunkard and would not support his family, wife and child. This was the cause of their separation.

Her mother, Hannah Johanna Mortensen, was a very small lady. She was ambitious and proud. She was born of poor people, but they were the honest in heart.

Her mother was compelled to take daily work and thus she was forced to find a place to put her daughter, Lorena Maria, during the hours that she labored. It was very hard to get anyone to care for a small child at the price grandmother could pay. She went to many places to seek aid. Some of these homes were good and some of them were bad.

One place, especially, stands out in the mind of my mother. This lady was very mean and unjust. She had a granddaughter who was older than my mother. She would do mischievous things and then lie to her grandmother. At all times, the grandmother would believe her granddaughter and mother was whipped according to the misdemeanor.

One day the granddaughter broke the eye glasses of her grandmother and told her that mother had done it. A terrible whipping followed. The grandmother sat down and began to question my mother regarding the matter. Mother told her she had not broken the glasses. This denial only enraged the grandmother, and she proceeded to whip my mother again. The whipping became more intense and all the while the lady was asking, "Did you break my glasses?" At last mother was so terrorized and bruised that she admitted to the act. This was the wrong thing for my mother to do, for the woman increased the lashes until mother was almost beat to death and the strength of the other was exhausted.

My grandmother never did know the cruelty that was inflicted upon my mother. There was an elderly couple that wanted mother to come and live with them. Mother went, and they were very kind to her. Then one day their own daughter died and left a small family. The aged couple were compelled to leave their home and care for their grandchildren. There was no place left for mother to go, so she had to return to the home where she had spent so many days of suffering and misery.

In a few months the old couple returned to their home. When mother heard they were back she made up her mind to run away and go back to this wonderful old couple who had shown her so much love and understanding.

She had to pass by the home of one of her Uncles, and knew well that if he saw her he would stop her and make her return to the place that she then occupied. She stood and gazed in the direction of her Uncle's home and there he was out in the yard chopping wood. She sat down and taking off her wooden shoes, she placed them carefully in each hand and then she commenced running. She ran with all the might and speed that her little body could muster. Right past the home of her Uncle. He called to her, but mother heard him not, for she did not want to. The old couple were overjoyed at seeing her. Then the couple made legal application by law and got her back to live with them.

Mother told me the old couple had a little patch of wheat near their house. When the wheat was getting ripe she would go and break off a wheat head and eat the grain. The old man told her not do that but she still kept on. One day the old man saw her. He took his cane and hit her a couple of times. Mother said it did not hurt, but she started to cry. The old lady saw what had happened. She called mother in and had mother show her where her husband had struck her. Mother showed the dear old lady, and she took some ink and made a couple of black spots where the man had hit her. When the man came in the house she showed him what he had done. This truly grieved the old man, but mother never got into the wheat again.

Mother said she only remembers of seeing her mother three times before she came to America. Grandmother came to the United States and met and married Peter Thompson; then they sent money back to Denmark and had mother come to this country. Mother came to the states when she was ten years old.

When mother arrived in Logan, there was no one to meet her. She had arrived here a few days earlier than her mother had expected. Being a little girl of only ten years, she was frightened and she stood on the side of the walk and cried of fear and loneliness. She could not speak a word of the English language and could not tell a soul she was lost. A lady came by, seing the child crying, she tried to understand what was the matter. Recognizing the fact that neither she nor the child could understand each other, she took mother by the hands and led her to her home. It was three days before mother and her parents were reunited.

Mother and grandmother had a home in Bloomington, Idaho, provided by grandfather Peter Thompson. I would like to stop here and say a word about my grandfather. He was born August 6, 1825, in Lendum, Hjorring, Denmark. His first wife was Mary Jensen. They were the parents of seven children. Peter was a very noble man, kind and gentle, religious, a faithful tithepayer. He loved all mankind and was respected in like manner. He loved mother with all his heart, and treated her as though she were his own flesh and blood.

My grandmother, Hannah Johanna Mortensen, was Peter's second wife. And by adoption, and by the sealing ordinances of the Temple, mother became his daughter. From this second marriage of Peter Thompson and Hannah Johanna Mortensen, my half-Uncle, Abraham Martin Thompson, was born Dec. 18, 1891, in Bloomington, Idaho.

Mother worked out for other families at a very tender age. When she was thirteen years old she was doing washings on the board for a family of nine, the lady being sick in bed with a tiny baby. This life continued for about seven years, or until she was married to my father, Lorenzo Wixom.

Mother was a very delicate, frail and ambitious person. She was kind and considerate of everyone. She sacrificed far too much for her own good. As I look back over her beautiful life, I can hardly keep the tears back. Her body was weak and her burdens were so great. She was the mother of thirteen children. Mother had no conveniences all her life. She scrubbed wooden floors, washed on the board, carried the water in buckets, cooked on a wood stove, ironed with sad irons, used coal oil lamps, and made the clothing for thirteen children, made her own soap, bread and all the family eats.

Mother died Jan. 23, 1924, in Heyburn, Idaho, a wonderful wife, companion, mother and church leader. (Written by her daughter, Hannah)

Bion H. Wixom was raised on a farm in Troy Grove Township, LaSalle Co., Ill., attended district school and later graduated from the Commercial department of Northwestern College at Naperville, Ill. That year he sold his Illinois farm and purchased land in Union County, Iowa, near the village of Kent. There he remained until the year 1905, when he sold his Iowa farm and purchased land near the town of Hagerman in Chaves County, New Mexico.

For a number of years Mr. Wixom was a member of the Board of County Commissioners of Chaves County and was Vice-President of the First National Bank of Hagerman for twelve or fifteen years. Reuben G. Wixom was born and raised on a farm and has always been a farmer. In boyhood days he attended the district school and later the high school in Mendota. He seemed to love the farm from the days of boyhood, and was gifted with an unusual amount of energy. He went with his older brother to Union County, Iowa, in 1885, where they worked together for a few seasons when Reuben rented a farm nearby, and later purchased the same. In the year 1904 he sold his farm in Iowa and purchased land in Buffalo County, Nebraska, near the city of Kearney. WRITING THE FAMILY HISTORY

491. JUSTIN HUMBOLDT WIXOM, son of Chancy (159), b. Aug. 5, 1863 (twin to Reuben Grant); d. Jan. 16, 1934, at National Military Home, Calif.; never married; enlisted in Company G, 51st Iowa Volunteer Infantry at Creston, Iowa, April 26, 1898, for War with Spain; discharged Dec. 31, 1898, at Field Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco. He was a lawyer.

J. H. Wixom is the compiler and author of most of this history. Following is an account he has left us, written June 1st, 1928, for the Utah Genealogical and Historical Society:

MY EXPERIENCES IN GENEALOGICAL WORK
By Justin H. Wixom

It was on the 8th day of April, 1919, that Mrs. Mae B. Findlay, then Miss Mae Broomhead, acting as corresponding secretary for Mrs. Mary Wixom Sleight of Paris, Idaho, wrote me a letter stating that she had learned of my name and address, and that I had some ancient records of the Wixom family, and asked for all information that I could furnish about that family. But who was Mrs. Mary Wixom Sleight? That was the first question that came to my mind. I had never heard of her before.

But further reading of the letter gave the answer, saying that she was "a daughter of Solomon Wixom, who was a son of Reuben Hiram Wixom." Then I got my bearings. I knew that Reuben Hiram Wixom was born in the wilderness of central New York in the year 1781. That was the year that Washington fought his last battle, a long time ago.

And this woman who was writing to me was a daughter of my Uncle Solomon--my father's brother! I knew that Uncle Solomon had become a convert to the Mormon faith in Illinois, at the age of 22, and had journeyed across the plains from Nauvoo to the Salt Lake Valley in the late 40's with his chosen people, sharing with them all hardships and privations; but that was all I knew about him. And here was a letter from his daughter, my cousin Mary! Well, I got busy. A brisk correspondence followed. I devoted evenings to writing letters to Cousin Mary. Then and there began my work in genealogy.

It may be well, at this place, to explain how I happened to be in possession of those old family records that Cousin Mary was inquiring about for my possession of those records at that time is the key to this story. It all happened in this way:

In the family of my grandfather, Reuben Hiram Wixom, there were nine sons in succession. My father was son No. 9, while Uncle Solomon was son No. 3. My father, the youngest son, remained under the home roof until the death of his father, while all of the others had married, departed and made nests of their own. Then my father took care of his widowed mother until the time of her death. And then it very naturally happened that the family Bible and the old record books of Reuben Hiram Wixom drifted into my father's possession by force of gravity.

I was a wanderer on the face of the earth, but always kept up a correspondence with my father. And it was in the summer of 1901, when a thousand miles from the old Illinois home, that I was writing a letter to my father on a Sunday morning; and I was bothered at the moment as to what to say that might interest him. Then the thought popped into my head to ask him to write a history of the Wixom family, so far as he could do so from his eighty years of memory of events and ov the stories told by his father. I finished the letter with an earnest appeal for him to comply with this request, posted the letter, and forgot about it. I did not care a snap about the history of the family, but I wanted to jolly up my father in his old age. And he wrote the story. Without several facts related in that story, I would have never been able to do so; for my father was the last of the tribe and the only one who had the necessary information.

It was but a momentary impulse that prompted me to ask for the history of the family; for I had never felt that desire before nor afterward, until aroused to it by Cousin Mary. How did I happen to have that thought at that time, and how did Cousin Mary ever learn of my name and address, and that I was in possession of old family records? Was it destiny that made those moves? I do not know, do you?

A year later my father, on his deathbed at the old home in Illinois, gave directions for the disposal of some household treasures, and told my sister to send me all of the old family records and books written by his father, and it was so done. Why did my father give that direction? Did he think that I was the one among his six children who would make the most of them? Why did he say that I, an old bachelor, without a home, and with no prospects of having one, should have those old family records? I do not know. But I do know that when I received those treasures I felt a profound conviction that while they would to me no particular good, yet some day, in some way, some distant relatives would be delighted to see them and then I would take delight in showing my family records to those relatives, and in that way, perhaps contribute to their pleasure and to mine.

I decided to enlarge this collection of family history. When I started out on this work, I soon realized that it was a big undertaking; and that my success would depend on a lavish expenditure of postage stamps, stationery and labor. I had a letterhead with appropriate heading, and on the back was printed an explanation of the work I was trying to do and its purpose. I had envelopes printed with return address thereon, and other envelopes with printed address to myself, properly stamped, to enclose in every letter I sent out, to be used for return answer. I have always paid the freight both ways.

In the vicinity of our old ancestral home in Illinois, there are a number of descendants of my grandfather, Reuben Hiram Wixom. For more than a quarter of a century those people have held annual family reunions At their meeting in 1919 I requested them to appoint a Family Historian, which they did. Those people and the descendants of Uncle Solomon in Utah and Idaho, and a few others, have contributed money for the expense of this work, amounting to about $400. Later, by the act of Fates, I became physically and financially bankrupt; and I took up residence in a Soldier's Home, conducted by the United States Government, as a veteran of the war with Spain. Since that time I have been allowed a pension, which has been gradually increased until it has reached the limit; and I have been using my own funds in carrying on the expense of this work. I have squandered something like $800 of my own money on this funny task, and the cost still goes on, and so does the pension.

Some of my expenditures have been more in the spirit of gambling than investment. For instance, I have hired experts to make extensive searches of public records at distant places, such as the Bureau of the Census at Washington City; and the State records at Albany, New York, at Columbus, Ohio; and the records at the State Land Office at Austin, Tex. In those gambling excursions I have squandered only my own money and not the money contributed by others.

I had gambler's luck in such plunging. Sometimes I won and sometimes I lost; and like all kinds of gambling the game was always fascinating. I enjoyed it all. I am pleased with the general results, for by this means of wild plunging I have secured some valuable information that could not have been obtained in any other way. The law of averages will bring that.

To obtain detailed information of each family I used the printed blank forms issued by the Genealogical Society of Utah, entitled "Family Record," to be filled out and returned with the desired information. I have purchased, at various times, 3,400 of these printed blanks, and now have about 200 in stock. All this printed matter was necessary in order to make progress and save time; for I soon realized that I must hasten the work or I would eventually find myself encroaching on eternity.

Tracing the descendants of my grandfather was more laborious than difficult, for the records I had told me where to find most of them. I frequently wrote questions on the backs of the Family Record sheets, to be answered thereon and returned. Much information was obtained in that way.

In tracing the ancestry of my grandfather the task was more difficult. All the knowledge I had of him was that he was born and raised in the wilderness of central New York, and that his father's Christian name was Barnabas. I therefore proceeded to make a search over the district of central New York. I learned that all early records of births, deaths and marriages in New York were kept by the Township Clerks. Applying to the County Clerk of each of five or six counties I secured the names and addresses of all township clerks in those counties and wrote to them. I received many answers with no definite information. Finally one answer read, "No township records preserved of that early day; but I have shown your letter to a Wixom family here which has old family records but none showing the name of Reuben Hiram Wixom." That was my first big thrill. I had found a Wixom family with old records. I soon got in communication with the lady who had gathered those records at an expense, as she afterward informed me, of twelve years of labor and a small fortune in money. I secured from her copies of all her records, which proved to be a mint of information on ancestry. Her papers were copies of the official records in the towns of Massachusetts where each family record was kept for more than a hundred years.

Here was the account of our ancestor, Robert Wixom, who came from England in 1630 and settled in Massachusetts; and the further account of his descendants for several generations. Here my grandfather's line of descent from the common ancestor was clearly shown. Now I felt that I was making progress.

When appointed Family Historian my instructions were to "trace the ancestry and list the descendants of my grandfather, Reuben Hiram Wixom and his wife, Clarissa Walker." That work was practically finished five years ago. To be sure I was highly elated to be able to trace the ancestry of my grandfather, but had little hope of being able to trace the ancestry of my grandmother. Her maiden name was Walker, and that was all the clue I had at the start. By rare fortune I later learned that her mother's maiden name was Abigail Atwater. Then I found a book on the Atwater Genealogy, and later had a personal interview with the author of that book. From him I secured the marriage record of the parents of my grandmother that he had obtained too late for publication in his book. He presented me with a copy of the Atwater Genealogy, and pointed out the record of ancestors of my grandmother, traced through the probate courts of England back to Thomas Atwater, who died in Kent County, England, in the year 1484. That was just eight years before old man Columbus crossed the Atlantic to discover Salt Lake City. Well, well! The English language is too tame to describe the thrill I experienced on receiving that information, and I cannot write Greek.

I had finished tracing the ancestry of both grandparents back to early times, and I had the lists of all of their descendants. My work was now complete according to the original plan and it was my plain duty to pass the manuscripts up to the printer. But at that time a temptation presented itself that was difficult to resist and was finally yielded to.

I had partial lists of other branches of the Wixom family that I had stumbled onto in the general search for family information, and I conceived the plan of enlarging the scope of the future book by including therein the names of all persons concerning whom information could be obtained, whose ancestry could be traced back to Robert Wixom, the common ancestor. This change of plan called for several years of extra labor on my part; but it would make the book more complete, and of value to many more people. All this was my own plan and contrary to the original instructions received from my people. I disobeyed orders, just what a soldier should never do. And I am now paying the penalty for that offense. I am "serving time," working on the later plan. And the distant cousins are responding fairly well to the calls for family information.

There are two irregular methods of writing our surname, and the sound of the name is changed in both; but both of these irregular methods have become regular by long and continued use.

A century and a half ago a Wixom family was living in the eastern part of the State of New York, who erroneously wrote the name Wixson. Later the other members of the family discovered the mistake and the spelling of the name was corrected. In the meantime, however, one of the sons, Solomon, moved to the wilderness in the western part of the state, and never again met any of his people, and never corrected the name. He was always Wixson. I had the pleasure of presenting conclusive proofs of their ancestry to many members of that family and they have all accepted the proofs that Solomon Wixson was a brother of my great grandfather, Barnabas Wixom. Many of the Wixsons emigrated in an early day to Sanilac County, Michigan; and one old timer writes me that there were so many of them there that a man could not kick a dog without insulting some member of that family.

The other case of change of name was that of Barnabas Wixom, a brother of my grandfather. He moved from Ohio to Texas in 1827, and received a grant of land, as a new settler. It seems that he could not write his name, and a Mexican land agent wrote his name for him on the application for the land, and wrote it Wickson. It is presumed that his descendants referred to the old man's patent to the land in order to learn how to spell the name, for that spelling has been faithfully followed by all of his descendants.

Those Texas Wicksons performed their part in the war against Mexico for Texas independence in 1835, and later served with distinction in the Confederate army.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

In the search for scattered relatives I have written to every place where I had the slightest clue of a member of the family being. I have written to the public libraries of big cities for names and addresses of persons of any of the three forms of the name to be found in the city directories, and always received prompt and complete answers. And I have been rewarded for these efforts.

My system is to arrange the names by generations and give to each name an individual number. This necessitates an index card system, with a special card properly numbered for each person, with name thereon, followed by the name of parents then the name of grandparents on each card. Under this arrangement I can find, within a minute, the proper place to insert every report I receive. With a system of loose leaf books a leaf can easily be removed and replaced by another, or a number of leaves may be inserted at any place as occasion may require. Without this card system I would be lost all of the time; for the reports are coming to me in scattered order.

As biographical matter is received, it is recorded on separate sheets, with proper numbers, to be inserted in the proper places when the work of re-writing is done; for there must be a final re-writing of everything. I now have more than 7,000 names, which will approach the 10,000 mark when the work is completed, a year or two hence.

Our people are not eminent. We are common people; but the investigations thus far fail to show that any member of the big family has ever been in a penitentiary, in an asylum, or in Congress.

The following are excerpts from letters written by J. H. Wixom to various relatives regarding his work on this book. These give us an insight as to the tremendous undertaking compiling this history was, and the great sacrifice of time and money made by J. H. in doing this. also the great joy and satisfaction he received from this work.

There is not much more to report except good weather, a fair appetite, and a conscience not giving much more trouble than usual. Have managed to keep quite busy all of the time. You may remember May Broomhead who urged me to visit the genealogical society here, and to call upon a Mr. Nephi Anderson. Well, I went to the office of the society, had a talk with a young lady who informed me that Mr. Anderson had just stepped out but would probably return soon. She invited me to look over the library. I proceeded to do so, and was busily reading a book when a man came over to the table where I was reading, informed me that he was Mr. Anderson, and stated my name and told me that May Broomhead had written him that I was coming. Well, I had to leave soon to keep a date with Frank Wixom, who returns to Burley this evening. Mr. Anderson, however, invited me to return and make myself at home in using the library. I will, therefore, make another trip to the place in the morning to read up on the subject of origin of surnames. They have some good books on the subject.

There is nothing here that is disagreeable or distasteful to me in any way except my personal circumstances. I am not situated as I would like to be, simply because I have no "den." I must have a den to be contented. If I can get a den exactly to my liking I will be not only contented, but mighty happy. Such a den need not be fancy, nor even decently furnished, but it must be clean (I can fix that part of it) and it must be private part of the time. Just now I am in the hospital service, on night duty, what they call an orderly. I remain in the ward from 5 P.M. to 5 A.M. next morning. It is the first opening I found, and I took it as a makeshift. The pay is $40.00 per month. The work is easy, nothing specially disagreeable about it, and I find it easy to sleep in the day time as much as I wish. But this work gives me but little time for my own affairs. Would much prefer a job surroundings of half as many hours with half as much pay. I can get along for a while without the special den, as the library building is near by, where there are tables for writing. But I have on hand that Family History to be completed, and that work has laid dormant since August 1st, two and a half months. I must get busy and finish the job. I deeply feel the obligation I have assumed, and all the difficulties that are ahead, to get it finished and published. To be sure I would like at this time to be back at the old job at the Home near Milwaukee, with the situation I had there, for I could then crowd the work to early completion. But things here are not discouraging. I have been here just a week and have got in six shifts. **********

And now a word of explanation. You say my letters do not seem like they did, and I appear to be somewhat changed. I know I am. I feel different from what I did at the times when I was touching elbows with the members of the House of Solomon. Happiness and pleasantry are contagious. I never had so much of those commodities as when I was visiting you and your people.

Friday morning I started on a trip, and went first to Los Angeles, fifteen miles east and there spent the day till 11 P.M., making the last visit to a Mrs. Hidden and her daughter Belle. Had an excellent time. Mrs. Hidden is a granddaughter of Uncle Nathan, as you are of my Uncle Solomon. Came home Friday night and rolled in late. Saturday morning I went again to Los Angeles and spent the day calling on some other second cousins whom I had never met before. There is just one more to see in order to get my record complete, being one who never responded to the call for family record. I will get them Saturday of this week.

Saturday at 4 P.M., I took train for San Bernardino, and reached that place at 7:30 P.M., and took a room at a lodging house. Next morning, Sunday, I called up a second cousin, Lester Purceil, with whom I had been corresponding, and who was looking for me. He came around with his auto, and I spent the day with him and his family at their home, and in riding over the country, and making a few calls. That evening I spent at Purceil's house, making up the record of his mother's descendants.

I spent Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in San Bernardino, and would like to have spent another day there and looked over the old records that concern Uncle Nathan. I examined part of them, and got much interesting and valuable information. Will make another trip in the course of a month or so. And it will be better to go then, for I can then make calls on those who fail to order books, and perhaps get them lined up; for I have been very successful in arousing the interest to a high degree in those I had occasion to talk with.

San Bernardino is a beautiful city of about thirty thousand people. But all of the cities and towns in this region are beautiful, with palm trees and other varieties, all green, and the orange trees, of some varieties have commenced their second blooming. I send inclosed a leaf with a tiny blossom just commencing to bud.

My visit to San Bernardino this time was, perhaps, a little more enjoyable than the time I was there in September; for I am now a little better acquainted, and there is a more lively interest among them now in the work I am trying to do. I spent one night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reeves, and their daughter Maud. Maud is thirty-five years old, a little slender girl, the oldest of the children, and the only one left at home, unmarried. I had an extra fine time there with Mr., Mrs. and Miss. Maud is teaching school, and has been for several years. They have an extra fine house, and all were so pleasant, easy and congenial.

Yesterday afternoon I "fought my last battle." I made my last call, as I think, for information on the family lists. I went to the home of Mr. Nelson Crandall in the northeast part of Los Angeles, to get data on his family and the families of his three married sons. It must have been four o'clock by the time I had found the place. The man of the house was at home. This was good luck. It was after nine o'clock before I got away. That, too, was good luck, for I now know that his wife is a good cook. I was treated fine at that place. But there is nothing surprising about that. I get that everywhere.

Mr. Crandall is the oldest child of Mary Ann Wixom, daughter of Nathan, your mother's uncle and mine. She is 88 years old, and she can still dance, and did actually dance a week ago last Friday, when The Pioneers gave an exhibition of their dancing skill before the assembled crowd of thousands at the Orange Show at San Bernardino. I was not there that day, but all of them told me about it. Well this Nelson Crandall was the last one I had to call on for information. I now have about a full day's work to do in re-writing some of the pages of my book, fixing up some of the pages that are filled up with a mix-up of pencil corrections, then I will have that part of the work done. I have let this little matter drift along for quite a while knowing that the information could be obtained any day that I would go after it. Maybe Sunday I will get a notion to go through the book and count noses. Will tell you before long just how many noses there are.

Now I will tell you what I am doing. I am back again in the hospital, serving as night orderly. I work from 6 P.M. to 5 A.M., then go to bed at 5. Sometimes I get up at 11:30 for dinner, but generally not. I am off duty every Thursday night. Yesterday I took the afternoon and made a trip to Pasadena, a city of about 55,000 people. Find it on your little circular map. It is a beautiful place, and covers much ground, for there are gardens and orchards scattered all over the place and they all take up room.

I went there to visit an old lady who is a daughter of Jesse F. Wixom, who was a brother of Reuben Hiram Wixom. She gave me much desired information concerning her immediate family, but I was in position to give her more information about her own tribe than she could give me. What do you think of that?

You see I want all of the Wixoms who belong to other branches of the family than our own, just to make a list of them for the second part of the book. This list of the Tribe of Jesse F. Wixom was secured by Dr. Coltrin some twenty-five years ago, and I have a copy. It comes in good play just now.

The contributions are about ceased to come in, and I have only about one-third as many as is needed to pass the work "over the top." But that is not specially discouraging. I think I will get them after a while.

But I got tired. And having a chance to get into the hospital work, I went in. Most of the dunning letters I have now to write I am going to hire written by a lady here that does such work. Most of those letters will be all alike, and I will give her the form to follow, and a list of variations to be used in special cases. With a list of names and addresses she can do the burden of the work. I will therefore take a little rest. And the hospital work is real nice and pleasant. I will give you a detailed description of it in another letter. Just now I have been running short on sleep. But from now on I will sleep plenty.

Oh, say, Alice, I want to tell you of a new "find" I have made. You will recall the account I gave of the way I happened to find Mrs. Bagley, of Minneapolis, who had been gathering old records of the Wixom family for twelve years, and how she gave me a copy of her work. Well, a short time ago I had a sort of feeling that she might be spending the winter in these parts, and I found an excuse to write her a letter. Sure enough, she is near here, and informed me that next week she would be at a certain hotel in Los Angeles, and invited me to call on her. I answered that I would call on her on the P.M. of April 5th. I expect much information and inspiration will come to me from that visit. Oh, I am a lucky cuss! Don't you think so?

I now have things pretty well in hand, with only a few odds and ends to look up, and all of the biographical matter, except a few little items that will soon come in. Am now going to have my lady assistant do most of my writing, while I take it more easy and make some money at the same time. This family book business will take all summer to finish. Sure. It is the best that can be done. While I am taking things more at ease, I will give attention to the preparation of a lecture I have had in view for about twenty years. Gee whiz! Wouldn't I like to give you good people a two hours talk in that tabernacle in Paris!

(Written to Alice Sleight, Paris, Idaho, April 6th, 1923)

Two or three weeks ago I had occasion to write a letter to Mrs. Bagley at her home in Minneapolis, Minnesota and a week ago I received a letter from her, from Coronado Beach, not far from this place, where she is spending the winter. Do you know who she is? Well, she is the woman, a Wixom descendant, whom I discovered three years ago, and learned that she had dug up records of the early Wixom ancestry, that had cost her twelve years of hard work and a small fortune in money, and she gave me a copy of all of her records. That is Mrs. Bagley of Minnesota. I wanted to meet her and have a talk. She informed me that she would be at the Alexandra Hotel in Los Angeles today, and would be able to receive a call.

But my day off was Thursday. But the next news I got was that I must take Friday night for my time off, and that meant all day Friday as well as the night. Here was luck again. I met Mrs. Bagley this afternoon at her hotel and had a talk of three hours with her. She is apparently about sixty-five years old. This visit was a big event for me. This was my "red letter day." I took with me all of my records, including those she had sent me a year ago. Say, Coz, I got lots of good out of today's adventure, and I will give the Cousins a better book on account of it. But (and do not tell them this secret) it will take a little longer for me to do the work. But I have a helper now, a regular stenographer and typist. And that is another secret, for as I will pay her from my own pocket no one need be the wiser on that score. But the book is increasing in both size and importance, in my "mind's eye," as Shakespeare says. It is growing quite rapidly of late. But after I get it finished and off my hands, I will stop talking about it and stop writing to you about it. But just now, Alice, I cannot get it off my mind long enough to write you a real social letter, and while the rig-a-marole I am now sending you may not be justified, still the crazy features can be explained.

(Written to Alice Sleight, Paris, Idaho, October 28, 1923)

Say, Pal, I have finished footing up all of my accounts of Receipts and Expenditures of money in the Family History work and have all statements arranged and written out in full. In this statement I have added several names to the list of contributors who made no payments. It was a plan I had when I sent you that receipt for your payment of five dollars. I will always feel happy whenever I think of the sending that receipt to you and what the result of it was. Everything came out all right in that play. Good.

Well, to get back to the subject. I will send you a copy of my Report some of these fine days when I have time to strike off some more copies. It is this way: I have spent considerable more money in that work that I have received. This is a secret between you and me. Now that money has been spent, and the account is closed. It is better, I think, to give credit for payments made by some of the cousins, payments that they did not make, rather than to show up in my report that I have paid the money out of my own pocket. Don't you think so? If I were to show that I am money out, it would look as if I claimed that the Cousins still owe me money; and some of the Cousins like Don C. Wixom, and a dozen others, would urge a contribution to me. Now, Dear Pal, I could never stand that. Some of my expenditures were too liberal, and could have been made less. But I was a plunger, and I plunged.

Some of the cousins like your Uncles John and Lorenzo were not able to put up the money at that time, and would like to do so. I have credited them and some others with payments, and doing so has not cost me an extra cent. Do you understand my position and my feelings in this matter? I like to tell you all about my little schemes and plans. You are the only Pal I have to tell little things to in confidence.

A few evenings ago I spent two or three hours in trying to figure out a problem. I wanted to add some payments to members of the Tribe of Solomon, so that the result would show that my own tribe (Solomon) had contributed just half of all the money paid in. The statements of all of the others are correct. Well, I got it figured out all right. Here is the summary:

Total Contributions by Tribes

Nathan.....	$ 35.50
Jesse	20.00
Solomon.....	190.50
Justin.....	35.00
Abraham.....	5.00
Urban.....	5.00
Henry.....	35.00
Chancy.....	45.00
Nancy.....	5.00
Robert II.....	5.00
Total.....	$381.00

What do you think of the scheme? I had to add but $42 to the Tribe of Solomon to make this come out the way I wanted it. And even then I had a margin left of $9.50 excess payments to be accounted for; so I give the itemized statements of expenditures correctly, and in footing up the column of accounts, I make the result just $9.50 less than it would be if correctly figured. If anyone ever notices it he will say, "Old J. H. did not know enough to add a column of figures correctly." But say, Pal, the figures are all correct but the adding. And every fellow has a right to cheat himself a little.

Here is a copy of the column referred to:

Total receipts.....		$323.05
Postage stamps.....	$117.00
Stationery.....	102.25
Supplies.....	31.40
Fees paid for searching and making copies of records.....	18.50
Preparing photographic copies for printing.....	38.40
Typewriting work by employee.....	25.00	323.05
Before I took the job there was expended.....		57.95
This makes the total received and spent.....		$381.00

I feel real good over getting the figures to come out this way, and not having to tell any lies about it except the few extra credits to my own people. And I like all of them. What do you think, Pal?

Ever your Confidential Admirer, J. H.

I have a strong suspicion that many of your people do not care a snap for the coming Family History; and neither do I. Why should I? There is no reason on earth why I should care for such a book when completed. I, a dilapidated old bachelor, with one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel--an old bachelor of the strictest sect, to whom the word "posterity" is a mere figure of speech---why should I care for anything of the kind? The only answer I can give to this is that I am having lots of fun at the task of making the book, and I have nothing else on earth to do.

(Written to Alice Sleight, Paris, Idaho--no date)

I have just finished a busy week, and the results of my work have been fairly satisfactory. I have been giving some time to a little side job for my associate in the adjoining office, by running around town and hunting up witnesses who could give evidence that he wanted, and then going back to my own office room and writing up the statements from my notes, and then hunt up the party again, and getting him to swear to the writings I had prepared. There is some nice work in that proceeding, in the manner of getting the statements in a concise form, and in getting the witness to say what is wanted to prove the fact that is to be established. Such work is more in my line than in that of my employer, and that is why I was put on the job. Matters of that kind are coming up now and then; and taken all in all they promise a fair revenue. But still they interfere with my regular work on the Family History, that I would rather work at than to do anything else. The reports from my letters are coming in daily, and the progress is fairly good. But here is something that I do not want you to breathe to any one else, most especially to Sir Richard. I am much handicapped for want of money for postage and stationery.

Here is my situation. You will observe from the book I sent you that I give the family record of each couple, with dates of births, deaths and marriage of parents, then the list of children. In the list of children there should be only the number, then the full name, with date of birth, and date of death, if the person is deceased. That is all that should be said of that child at that place. In my working copy I have special notes as to the place of residence of that child, and if a girl, the name of the man she married. Now as I come to the book of the next generation, I must write to each of those children and get the family record of that child, and write out that record of that child's family, with a list of children, as I did of that child's parents in the last generation. And so it is that I always have a big list of persons to write to for family records. And as the new ones send in their family records they give names of their own children who are married with their addresses. This gives me from none to five or six new names to write letters to for family records from each sheet I receive by mail. Sometimes I get six or seven a day of reports of family records. Well, I then direct the envelopes to each one whose family record I want, and on the inside flap of the envelope (that part that is hidden when the letter is sealed), there I write the number of the person to whom I am writing for family record. All of those envelopes that are so directed and so marked with a number on the inside of the flap are stacked within easy reach. Then after the sun goes down at night, and all is still in the house, I take those envelopes and stack them on the table. Then I make another stack of return envelopes directed to myself (you have used them), then I make another stack of my printed letter calling for Family Records and a stack of my "Report on Family History," and another stack of the printed form of Family Record, which is a questionnaire, and on the top margin of the last named paper I write the number that I made on the flap of the envelope. For that is the paper which I will get back from the cousin I am writing to, with his family record thereon. That is what I am after, and that is the way I do it.

With this plan of operation, and using all printed matter, including my letter of request and explanation, I can send out fifty letters each night, if I have the stationery and the postage stamps for the purpose. Well, I have the printed matter all on hand, with a pretty good supply of each article; and from my side work, doing a little writing now and then, and my fees as Notary Public, I take in about a dollar a day, and that will pay for my postage stamps. Twice I have borrowed money of Arthur Wixom at Garland, and I have just written him for a loan of $40, telling him that I can pay him back at the rate of ten dollars a month, which I can do, as I have $8 per month left from my pension money after paying rent, and can easily dig up the balance by cutting corners a little. If Arthur has not gone into some business that absorbs all of his ready funds, I feel sure that he will come across as per my request. Then I will be in a condition where "I can read my title clear," as the old song goes, and can get along all right. Of course there will come a time when I must dig up more for stationery and printed matter; but I have prospects ahead, from some side-lines of work that I feel able to take care of those troubles when they appear on the scene. What I want to do at this time is to pay up what I owe friends here for printing matter and borrowed money for that I used when I sent out that big bunch of mail. The stamps had to be a cash deal.

I do not want Richard to know about my situation here, for he would be inclined to get busy with the cousins and raise the money for me; for he would not be inclined to keep the matter a secret. With you the matter is different. When I say that this matter is to be a profound secret, I firmly believe that you will treat it as such, although the heavens may fall and the earth cave in on account of your loyalty. I depend on you, dear Pal, to be true as the steel in your heart and as firm as the brass in my face. Ho, ho! Here we can both smile, but with the smile of determination and not of levity.*******

I think I sent you a copy of the typewritten letter that I sent to the members of the Tribe of Solomon, with a gentle statement that I had changed my mind and would now accept such contributions as the members might desire to make toward defraying the expenses of my work. Well, that is all the pressure I want to be brought to bear on them, and they must not be urged to do more than they feel like doing. I appreciate the positions they are in. And no more money must come to me from Paris. Si, Meda, Hon, Richard, Don, your brother Orson, Claude (brother of the triplets), Nellie Dayley have sent in their contributions, and I have received four dollar subscriptions from others. And I just received a letter from a member of the Tribe of Wixson, in north Michigan, saying that he would contribute financially if I need money. Of course I wrote him that the money would be "received." None of those people have contributed anything; and I do not want to urge them at this stage of the game to do so. I want to keep that tribe in reserve for some big money when the time comes to print the book. I do not think that any amount worth while could be raised from the Tribe of Wixson until the book is finished, and the contract is made with the printer; for then those monied men can look up the standing of the printing company by inquiry through their banks, and learn that the printing company is in first class financial condition, and they will contribute a good stiff amount of money, and place it in a bank to be paid to the printer when the book is printed. That would be the business method in a case like ours, by people who are far away and do not care much what the book will cost but do not want to risk money on an uncertainty.

That branch of the big family that writes the name WIXSON is the strongest branch both intellectually and financially of all the branches of the big family. They have in the past kept pretty close track of their people, and have made several attempts to write up their family history, but never got to an advanced state of the process. They are welcoming the work I am doing, and a large number are responding with enthusiasm.

My "Report on Family History" and the printed letter I am sending out for Family Records seem to take with nearly all of them and I am getting letters back that give a good thrill at this end of the line. Some of the women folks who write the letters express sympathy for my "crippled condition." Ho, ho, ho! They do not know that I can make an awful kick with that crippled foot, as it is not very bad. I have thought that I ought to have written in that description of myself in that Report on Family, something like this: "When he has worn a hole in his sock he takes it to the Quartermaster and exchanges it for a new one; and the Secretary of War smiles and says nothing." Such statement might intimate only one foot, without saying so. Ho, ho, ho! But I do not want to appeal for sympathy in any way. You see I had to say something about being crippled to avoid the necessity of telling all of the truth, which was real reason for being in the Soldiers Home was because of a "crippled life" more than a crippled body. But I did, and still do, want them to understand that I am not working for any money profit, and do not intend to take any money profit in this work; for I do not need any money for my own use, and never will.

I think I will bring this message to a close, after telling you that I am in first class health and spirits, and that my new shoes work fine, do not hurt my feet, and they move about as rapidly as I wish them to, and that I am now, at this moment wearing a fine shirt that was presented to me in Paris, and a necktie that came from Paris, and that my most pleasant thoughts every day are directed to Paris; and that some fine day I hope to make a journey to Paris, and do not intend to go to either London or Berlin.

Your affectionate pal, J. H.

(Written to Elnathan P. Wixom, Trumansburg, New York)
Sawtelle, California.

My situation here is ideal, from my point of view. I am living here at the National Soldiers Home, with everything furnished that is desired by any old duffer of simple tastes, and all in plenty; and I prefer to live in an institution rather than in a private residence. I have a little room rented in an office building within easy walking distance, and that is my workshop, where all of my "old maid" notions are indulged in to the full limit, "with no one to molest or make me afraid."

But I must explain where my fun comes in on all of this work. I have found the different branches of large families who had lost track of their own people; and after I had found all of the members of each branch of the family, I informed each branch of the locations of the other branches of their own family. Then I would receive many warm letters of thanks from the people of all of the branches, seeming to boil over with joy they felt on finding their own people. It was something like the story of Evangeline without its sadness. I get some kick out of that.

I get many thrills from new information of new members, or rather, newly found members. Some that I stumble onto do not know to what branch of the family they belong and it is quite a task to dig up the necessary information to make the connection; and when that information comes in it is the cause of another big thrill at the den where I put in my time and get my enjoyment.

I am going to make a book, and I am going to give it all the time that is needed for its completion; and I am playing a lone hand. My pension was recently raised to $40 per month, which is enough to keep me supplied with postage and stationery, however long this work may last. To carry out this work I do not need to call on any one for financial assistance, nor will I accept anything of the kind even if tendered. This is my job.

Fame? No. Glory? Not a bit of it. I accept the definition of those words as given by Shakespeare's Fallstaf, when he said that "it is nothing but breath, and the man who has it is he who died yesterday." Quoting from Whittier, "The past and the time to be are one and both are now." I am getting my fun every day. My only big wish is that some deeply interested cousin would drop in on me once in a while at my hermitage and join me in a big laugh over some things wherein I need a good laugher to help me out.

I have lots more that I would like to tell you, but I do not want to act a selfish part. I will not try to tell everything in one letter. I will some time tell you about the great Soldiers Home here, and tell you about my experience at working in the hospital, while I helped the old soldiers when they were fighting their last battles, and eased down their sufferings to let them die as kindly as possible, and helped the undertaker take them to the morgue. I like that work; for many times I can cheer them up and get them in the habit of keeping up a brave smile, until the final minute comes. You fellers would not like that job, eh? But I do. And after I had made their acquaintance they all smiled every time I came into their ward. I never wore a long face in the sick room. I never scolded a sick man for soiling his bed. I told him that he had a right to do so, and the more he did it the better I would like him. Then he had to laugh. I have gone to old cripples who never soiled the bed, and told them in a real serious way that they had a right to soil their beds once a week, and that the hospital rules gave them that right. Then they would commence to laugh, and give me certain instructions where to go when I died, and then they would laugh again. No, there was no long-faced sadness in the ward where I worked. And the nurse told me that I saved medicine by keeping the old fellows cheered up. But I must stop bragging and bring this long message to a close and give you good people a rest. With loving greetings to all, I remain, J. H.

(Written to members of his family in Illinois, April 15, 1927)

I attach a clipping from one of the Salt Lake papers published at the close of the Reunion of the family in August, 1924. I did most of the framing of the article, and the last paragraph is all mine. (Here is the last paragraph referred to: "No special merits for ourselves or our ancestors are claimed," the historian stated. "However, the records show that no member of the family has ever been in a penitentiary, an asylum, or in congress. We belong to the great mass of common peoples and most of us are farmers.") This article is a copy of a more elaborate one that I had published in another paper. And let me tell you that the pretended modesty in the quotation took very nicely with the public. The very lack of boasting that is so common with most writers on genealogy made a happy hit with the public.

Some of these fine days I will send to each one of you a copy of the Preface I have written for the coming book, and ask for your criticism and suggestions. And I will give full consideration to all that any of you may say. But here is a principle that must not be lost sight of. And that is that the absence of boasting in places where boasts can easily be made is an attractive feature to the best critics. It is the substitution of a little piece of gold for a big chunk of brass. There is nothing improper in signing your name to a letter "Your obedient servant," even when writing to a man whom you would not take orders from on a bet. And sometimes there is great emphasis on a subject that you do not mention at all, and just because you do not mention it. Every once in a while I meet a fellow that I feel I am superior to; but I do not stop and tell him so. Of course it pays to advertise, and some methods of advertising are better than others. My notion is to hire someone else to brag me up and then try to look a little modest and bashful while the process is going on.

Just across the hall from my room is the office of a Pension Agent. He makes up papers for old soldiers who wish to apply for pensions and increase of pensions. Those fellows must swear to the papers they sign but the Pension Agent cannot act as Notary Public to swear his own clients. So I do that trick. I am a Notary Public, and I swear the men who come in to me for that purpose. So I have a sign over one of my windows, that is seen as soon as a person looks into my door. And the sign reads like this: "No Swearing Allowed Outside of This Room." And so all of the fellows who want to swear must come into my room to do it. That helps some. Oh, I take in about a dollar a day on that line of work. And that revenue keeps me in postage stamps. Oh yes, sometimes some fellows call on me to write letters for them, and that helps some. But none of this work takes much time from my regular employment of Family Historian. There is where I get most of my fun and put in most of my time.

In making up my Family History I give a number to each name. In that way I can keep all of my work straight. And I have a set of index cards, with a separate card for each name. These cards are kept in trays, and arranged alphabetically. I now have a total of almost 7,000 cards. Will have about 10,000 on the finish, I think. And still the work goes on. I use much printed matter. My letterheads have the genealogy printed on the back, and I have a printed letter that explains what I want, and I have a big sheet that I send with each letter to be filled out with the statement of the family; and in many cases I write questions on the back of the sheet to be answered, relating to the addresses I may want of the brothers and sisters of the parties I write to. My system is pretty near perfect in completeness and arrangement.

Our Mormon cousins, the descendants of our Uncle Solomon, mostly in Utah and southeastern Idaho, make a big thing of family genealogy. For they have themselves baptized for ancestors who have died, and do this trick with great ceremony in their temples. This trick is to give the deceased people who died before getting the True Faith, an opportunity to still get it while they are on the wing, waiting for the Judgment Day. Those people carry this practice to the limit. And as they learn of the big work that I am doing, they call me a very great man, with a close tie to God. And I have got into the habit of telling them that I believe they are right on their judgment of me. Ho, ho! I really like this kind of greatness, for I do not see how in _____ I can ever get any other kind of greatness and so I might as well accept this bunch that is being handed to me and call it good.*******

Yes, I am the bachelor of the family. But let me tell all of you good people that I have a bigger family than any of you. In my family there are seven thousand people, and the number is still growing. Those people are all mine. You just ought to take a squint at some of the letters I get from these people, and the kindly words of interest in my work, and the cheerful encouragement. Say, people, Ihave children in seventeen different states.

(Written to Alice Sleight, Paris, Idaho, February 25, 1931)

I am dictating this to a lady who will type it and send it to you.

I am bedfast at the Soldiers Home Hospital and I am practically helpless with a kind of paralysis. My main affliction is the lower limbs below the knees and cannot move my feet about the bed. My hands are also so afflicted that I have to be fed by one of the nurses. I suppose I will be in the hospital two or three months.

My family history work is so near completion that with the directions given to the lady who is writing this letter, she can check up and practically finish the work. So that this work is not being delayed on account of my illness. While my affliction is quite serious I have no pain. It is just a case of awkward inconvenience.

I am unable at present condition to send you the magazine each week as formerly. I regret this very much but I cannot do it. If you can see Miss Ruth, I wish you would inform her that I am unable to send her the Sunday funny papers.

This letter will be short because I have not much to say.

I would certainly liked to have attended that meeting of the old folks that you speak of in your letter.

Please preserve for me all new material of family record until I am well again, then I will want all of them to insert in the book.

Best regards to you and all the others. As ever your pal. J. H.

(Ed. Note: This is the last letter written by J. H. Wixom of which we have a copy. He passed away Jan. 16, 1934, after dedicating the last fifteen years of his life to the compiling and writing of this history. He did not recover from the effects of the paralysis referred to in this letter and completed his work on the book with the help of his secretary. It is hoped that the excerpts from these letters will help us appreciate a little how much he loved doing this work, as well as the sacrifices he made to accomplish it.)

The following was written by Justin H. Wixom, giving an account of "The Mormon Empire" as he saw it. While he is not entirely correct in his interpretation of this subject, it is interesting to read of it from his point of view:

THE MORMON EMPIRE

by Justin H. Wixom

The Mormon Empire is a wonderful institution, and the word wonderful is here used in the sense of something to excite wonder. The early history of the Mormon Church, like the early history of all other great churches, has two versions: one of which is written by its friends and the other by its enemies, and both are wrong. Both accounts are biased, as well as incomplete, and here is the difficulty encountered by the historian in his attempt to be fair and impartial.

WIXOM FAMILY HISTORY

In taking a view of the conduct of powerful churches, ancient or modern, a distinction must be made between religion and theology, to determine whether the man has the church or the church has the man.

Wherever the Mormons went, in the early stages of their activities, they succeeded in cultivating unpleasant relations among their neighbors. In their settlements in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois their neighbors saw in the Mormons only something bad; but in the Mormons in recent years all their neighbors know about them is something good. Whence came this change of views? From both.

Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, claimed to have been visited by anangel, who directed him to a place near Manchester, New York, where he found golden plates, from which he translated a Gospel that was said to have been lost many centuries before. He claimed to have received revelations from on High, directing him to form a new and true creed. Frequently he claimed to have received additional revelations.

The church was organized at Fayette, New York, in 1830, but soon afterward, in obedience to a special revelation, it was moved to Kirtland, Ohio. That was in the days of "wild cat" banks, and the Mormons started a bank of that character which soon failed; and the neighbors who had accepted the bank notes became incensed and hostile toward the Mormon leaders who failed to redeem the bank notes they had issued; and in the heat of the controversy the Mormon leaders slipped out of the town between two days and emigrated to western Missouri.

Another and more important event occurred in Mormon circles at Kirtland, and of far reaching result, which was the conversion of Brigham Young to Mormonism. He became an early convert, and from the very first was a tower of strength, furnishing the hard sense, shrewd judgment, and administrative ability that the Prophet lacked. It was Brigham Young who first saw the necessity of evangelization and it was largely through his powerful, compelling personality that English, Scotch, Dutch and Scandinavian people were induced to turn their possessions into money and sail for America to live under the rule of the Prophet, Seer and Revelator. He was the ranking member of the Apostles at the time of Joseph Smith's death, and he succeeded to the leadership when he displayed the deep-lying, long hidden instincts of mastery--a great man judged by the standard of any time or race.

There had been a previous revelation to the effect that Kirtland was to be only a "stake," and that the permanent Zion was to be in the western part of Missouri, then the center of the country and the center of the continent. It was also near the jumping-off place of civilization. The revelation also stated that the Mormons were to eventually own all of that part of the country; and when they reached the place they loudly proclaimed this doctrine to the settlers in that vicinity and were quite active in denouncing slavery that existed there. To put it mildly the Mormons were somewhat indiscreet in their claims, and thus irritated the coarse-grained inhabitants of the district in which they settled. The Mormons had friction with their neighbors there almost from the start.

The Mormon people were intensely sincere and devoted to the doctrines and revelations set forth by their leaders, confident that the heavenly authorities had directed them to take possession of that part of the country as their proper inheritance against the claims of anybody and everybody. And that was the issue between the Mormons and the Missourians by which the former were "persecuted" on account of their religion there. The Missourians in that vicinity were a wicked bunch, rude and vicious. And it is a mystery to the writer how the Almighty happened to make the mistake in directing the Mormon people to go to that place to establish their Zion.

The Missourians soon displayed hostility in the most vicious manner. They made raids on the Mormon settlements and plundered the Mormons' property. Then the Mormons made a mistake. They retaliated in kind. They made raids on the property of the Missourians and plundered the property of non-Mormons. That meant war to a finish. In their religious intensity and religious fervor, backed by their revelations, they were deeply convinced that they were in the right, and they practically challenged the State of Missouri to a contest over the title of the Mormons to their "Promised Land." The challenge was accepted, with the result that the Mormons moved out of Missouri under fire.

Mr. B. H. Roberts, one of the ablest and most independent reasoners of the Mormon Church, some years ago gave a frank expression, in a conference address, to his belief that the Mormon people had not always been blameless; that their conduct had not always been defensible; that on the part of some individuals narrowness and fanaticism and bigotry and unwisdom had been exhibited; that the disasters that overtook the followers of the Prophet in Missouri were due in part at least to boastfulness, overzeal, fanaticism and unwisdom on the part of the people and that, "In his early experiences even the prophet, Joseph Smith, made his mistakes and was several times reproved of the Lord because of them." (See "The Thatcher Episode," 1896, p. 35; Smoot Investigation, 1904, Vol. I, pp. 723, 1012) It is only fair to note in this connection that Elder Roberts was reprimanded for this remark by high authorities of the Mormon Church for "spilling the beans."

On leaving Missouri, the Mormons congregated at Quincy, Illinois, for a temporary resting place. But they soon took notice of the dilapidated village of Commerce, on the Mississippi river about forty miles north of Quincy. They bought most of the property, renamed the place Nauvoo, and settled there.

At the time of the settlement of the Mormons at Nauvoo the political conditions in Illinois were peculiar. The Whig and Democratic political parties in the state were nearly evenly balanced in strength, and each party was contending for political mastery of the state. The leaders of both political parties extended an ardent welcome to the newcomers and went to extremes in courting their political friendship; and the Mormon people were thus given a cordial welcome to Illinois. It was under this state of public sentiment that the Mormon leaders applied to the Legislature for a special charter for their City of Nauvoo.

The charter the Mormons asked for and received gave to the City of Nauvoo almost absolute power in lawmaking, subject only to the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Illinois. It gave to the City of Nauvoo the power to keep up a standing army and the power to make laws in defiance of the laws of the State of Illinois. It gave power to the authorities of the City of Nauvoo to appoint a judge of their own City Court with authority to issue Writs of Habeas Corpus. That power of a court means this: If a man be arrested under any pretense whatever, charged with the commission of a crime of any kind, he can apply to any judge who has the power to issue a Writ of Habeas Corpus, and that judge must issue the Writ. That Writ commands the officer who holds the prisoner in custody to bring the prisoner before the judge to investigate the question of the legality of the arrest and the holding of the prisoner. The merits of the charges against the prisoner cannot be examined at such hearing, but only the legality of the arrest and detention. That judge can decide that the prisoner was legally arrested and order him held for trial. Or the judge can decide that the prisoner is illegally held and order his immediate release and such order must be obeyed. Of course the man can be arrested again for the same offence; but he can secure another Writ of Habeas Corpus from the same judge, who can release him again. This play can be kept up to the end of time without bringing the defendant to a trial of the case on its merits, if the judge be under the "influence" of the prisoner or his friends. This Habeas Corpus proceeding is a necessary power for the judges of the higher courts to protect the innocent and prevent illegal arrests in a free country; but this Writ is liable to abuse by a judge who is prejudiced, partisan or dishonest. And that power was often abused by the little Justice of the Peace, appointed by the Mormon leader at Nauvoo, and the abuses of that power brought the City of Nauvoo into conflict with the State of Illinois, fed the fires of hatred and opposition to the Mormon Church in the adjacent districts and furnished the pretext for mob action.

On the banks of the Mississippi near Nauvoo were nests of thieves and pirates and counterfeiters who took refuge in the city, where they would be safe from legal convictions for their crimes, by Habeas Corpus. Horses, cattle and other property were occasionally stolen from the surrounding country and traced to Nauvoo. But the owners could not recover their property nor cause the punishment of the offenders. Of these offences the Mormons may not have been guilty but they were very naturally blamed for them. There was surely a lack of proper government at Nauvoo. Then it was learned that the Mormons were practicing polygamy, by virtue of a special revelation commanding them to do so. This was a great shock to the religious sentiments of the neighboring people, and increased their bitterness toward the Mormon people. Then the Mormon Prophet, Joseph Smith, announced himself a candidate for President of the United States and sent his Apostles to eastern states to work up his boom for the nomination. Then a newspaper in opposition was started in Nauvoo and published one issue. The Prophet, then Mayor of Nauvoo, called the City Council in special session, secured an order to declare that newspaper a public nuisance, and ordered its destruction. That order was promptly carried out. That act of the Prophet was a tragic blunder. The people of the neighboring counties were aroused to a white heat of bitterness toward the Mormons. Mobs gathered from all directions. Governor Ford appeared on the scene, called out the state militia to preserve order, and sent a letter to Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum to appear at court for trial at Carthage, the county seat, and promised them protection from all bodily harm; and the Smiths responded to the call.

A few days later, and before trial could be had, the Governor made a trip to Nauvoo to talk to the people there and quiet them. He took with him a part of the State Militia and left the remainder to guard the jail in which the Smiths were held as prisoners. The guards at the jail were not only to prevent the escape of the prisoners but also to protect them from all harm. But in the absence of the Governor, either by the guards left there to protect the prisoners, or through the connivance of those guards, men entered the jail and basely assassinated the two Mormon leaders. It was a most dastardly crime; but the result put the Mormon people on their feet, placed Brigham Young at their head, gave the Mormons genuine martyrs to preach about, consolidated the people and thus insured the building of the Mormon Empire.

There was much cruelty and oppression inflicted on the people of Nauvoo by their non-Mormon neighbors, to force the Mormons to leave the State of Illinois, which the Mormons agreed to do by a certain date. And yet they were often harrassed and annoyed. The Mormons, in their religious fervor, hastened the completion of their temple, by great exertion and sacrifice before they left, knowing that the same would fall into hostile hands. We must bow with respect to such sacred devotion.

As rapidly as preparations could be completed the various caravans crossed the Mississippi River and began their long journey westward, with its hardships, trials and suffering.

Everything on the long journey was under the watchful eye of the great leader. He selected the places for camps, pitched them, gave his orders and every person obeyed him. As they proceeded on their long journey over prairie and mountain and sand and sage brush, not Moses himself was more an autocrat than this newly installed Mormon leader. He always took care of his people. From the outset he taught them the importance of bodily health as a part of their religion, which has become so fixed in the Mormon mind that it is still a leading tenet, and has made them the healthiest people in the world today. He introduced dancing and theatricals while on the journey westward, to lighten the hearts of his people, and these practices are important features in Mormon life today. Social gatherings among them are frequent and well attended. Most occasions of that nature are opened with prayer and closed with a dance. And the moral standard is always high, and it is a single standard.

Under Brigham's leadership the Mormons held together. He was the brains as well as the heart and soul of the expedition to the West, and the guiding spirit there. Far sighted, cool headed, a born leader of men and a past master of organization, he held his people together and led them to the promised land; and there by his energy and wise leadership, irrigation, cultivation, cooperation in buying and selling and building and planning, solidarity in religion and government--these were his guiding principles. Under the cry of religious persecution there was built up a unity of feeling, a unity of thought, and a thoroughly organized Empire that was more complete and absolute in its workings than anything else that has existed on this continent since Montezuma was Emperor of ancient Mexico.

And here, victims of former religious persecution turned persecutors on their own account. It was always that way. Every great religious movement has been cradled in persecution. Puritans emigrated from England to Massachusetts for freedom to worship according to the dictates of the conscience; and when in power in the new settlement they oppressed those who dissented from them. This has been the religious practice ever since Socrates corrupted the youth of Athens with the religion of Intelligence. "Persecution" is the explanation the Mormons give for the troubles with their neighbors in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, and there is some truth in the claim; but it is also true that the enmity of their neighbors in those places was much increased by the conduct of the Mormons themselves, who seemed at times to invite persecution. But inasmuch as religious persecution has ceased in Ohio, Missouri, Illinois and in the Puritan State of Massachusetts, and the Mormon State of Utah as well, it is only fair to "let the dead past bury its dead." As there is no controversy over the social conditions in the other states named, a few comments may be proper concerning the Utah of today.

The Mormon people claim, and prove their claim by U. S. Census statistics, that of all the states, Utah has the highest birth rate, the lowest death rate, and the least sickness among babies.

In the National Geographical Magazine, June 1920, Hon. Franklin K. Lane, a member of President Wilson's cabinet, is quoted as saying: "Never speak disrespectfully of the Mormon Church. It has as law abiding, hard working, kindly a group of people as will be found anywhere this wide world over."

Statistics also show that in recent years Utah has made the greatest gains educationally of any state in the Union, and seven-eighths of all the farms in that state are operated by its owners. And in morality the people of the Bee Hive State are at the head of the list.

The following is a clipping from Lippencot's Magazine, written by W. T. Larned, which gives a clear analysis of the religious character of the Mormon people:

> "Liberal as you may be in considering the Mormon as a citizen, you cannot escape the curious interest aroused by his religion. I select religion from all the expressions of his life because you cannot treat him intelligently apart from it. I doubt if there be any other class of people speaking English whose every action is so intimately bound up with its belief in spiritual things. The Bible or the Book of Mormon, or the "Doctrine and Covenants" is at the bottom of all he does. In body he belongs to the 19th century; in spirit he holds close communion with the Israelites of old. No shrine, no relic is needed to excite his devotion. He walks among miracles. Cures of the flesh are affected by prayer, instantly; obstacles are removed, dangers averted, foes disarmed, material assistance rendered through divine interposition. It is the faith that would move mountains and marvel not. Some men find comfort in philosophy; misfortune fills others with a fierce pride that is their strength. But the children of Nephi seek analogy and example in the things which befell their ancestors in Egypt and Arabia. The alkali pools of the American desert are yet less bitter than the waters of Mirah. When the gushing fountain slacks their thirst no visible Moses, no actual rod, is needed to confirm the divine source of the relief. The buffalos which satisfy a desperate hunger took no accidental trail in their passage over the plains. It was the Lord that put them in the path of the Saints. Is this sincere or bred affectation? Ask some one who reads the hearts of men. I see only the signs that I see."

Here will follow an account of the missionary system that has been in active operation from the beginning of the Mormon church resulting in a large increase in membership by conversions. There will also be given an account of the social work of the church, with its care of the sick and needy, and the uniform kindness and affection that prevail among its members, who never shirk from the duties they are called upon to perform. I deem it unnecessary to submit these matters to the Mormon cousins for criticism, for I believe that I can describe them satisfactorily.

I am endeavoring to give an impartial description of Mormonism that neither Mormon nor non-Mormon can seriously object. It is the non-Mormon who needs information on the Mormonism of today and I am endeavoring to give them that education, from a non-Mormon point of view.

POEM ON THE WAR
by J. H. Wixom

Come all ye sons of Britain, of Allied Nations, too,
And listen to the story John Bull will now tell you:
"We allied with France and Russia," is how the story ran.
"Besides these two great powers, we allied with Japan.

"We will say to the mighty Germans, 'You are clever, we must confess,
Your foreign trade keeps growing while ours is getting less.
Now you must cut it out, I say, and leave that trade to me;
At once curtail your commerce---I'm the bully of the sea.'"

Then spoke the German people, with colors all unfurled:
"To rob us of our commerce you must ally with the world."
Then said the German Kaiser, "Just put your minds at ease.
We must insist on justice and freedom of the seas."

On the fourth of August, 'fourteen, bold England sang her song,
"By the power of our great navy the war will not last long."
They said to the German sailors, "Don't claim we break the law
If from our gallant heroes you feel the Lion's paw."

She said to France and Russia, "Get busy as two bees;
You hold the Germans on the land, we will lick them on the seas."
Then to the German army, likewise the Kaiser Bill,
"We only need three months or less to make you cry your fill."

Says England: "We are ready and the deadly war is on.
For years we have been waiting for the sounding of the gong;
Now forward all your forces, our Allied Nations, do,
While we blockade their country and starve their people too."

When the war was fully six months old, no victory at all in sight,
Then England called on others and begged with all her might.
Of every nation in the world, of states both great and small,
"Come to our aid and victory---we can't whip Bill at all.

"I know you long have heard us boast of great things we can do,
But now we see our error---bit off more than we can chew.
We allied with other nations to whip the Germans bold.
Although we far outnumber them, they equal us fourfold.

"To save us from a sure defeat we call on Uncle Sam,
Not only for the food we eat but every help we can."
Then John Bull said to Wilson: "Come save our battering ram,
For we are sure to lose the fight without you, Uncle Sam.

"You have done your best to help us in money, food and guns,
But we will have to give it up unless your army comes.
We forced poor little Greece to fight for us against her will;
We need the forces of the States to lick the Kaiser Bill."

Then Woodrow said to the Germans, "You will feel the Eagle's bill.
If Europe's armies can't succeed, I tell you, ours will.
Though you have been a friend, the best in a hundred years,
I am of English origin and want to scothe their fears.

"I had a true American in Secretary Bryan,
And when I found his views on this, I asked him to resign.
I chose a German-hater who sanctions all I say,
And now I find it easier for us to pave the way.

"You sank the vessels of your foe for which your U-boat strives,
We'll say we have a good excuse--Americans lost their lives.
We'll not depend on volunteers, conscription with iron claws,
For fear they may object to war without a better cause."

Then Woodrow said to Holland, "We want your ships right now.
Consent and we will pay you--we will have them anyhow.
You need our flour and corn, you know; we are great and you are small,
And if you fail to divvy up, you cannot eat at all."

Then the Kaiser said to Wilson, "We knew not why you came Until you told the story that you are of English strain.
Now don't take sides with Britain for fear we set a trap
And give your States to others--The Greezer and the Jap.

"The Lion says we are wicked and guilty of every vice In breaking the laws of nations--to our once they did it twice."
Then the Kaiser said to the powers, of nations laws he spoke,
"It's true we wronged poor Belgium--few others laws we broke."

At last the Kaiser says, "I'll quit; four years we fought the Ram.
We whaled the hosts of Europe, but we can't whip Uncle Sam."
And then he said to the Allies, "You have no room for boast.
It has taken nearly all the world to whip our little host.

"At the time we lassoed Russia, had the Allies in our grip,
Wilson forced his army on us, and of course we had to quit.
They say we want to rule the world---search press and mortal man---
Such stuff they manufactured after the war began."

(Other sections to follow after the peace conference.)

J. H. Wixom once wrote that gathering genealogy "is like trying to pump the water out of a cistern at a time when there is a pipeline running into the cistern on the other side, letting in a stream of water as large as the pump is throwing out. Now what is the solution to my difficulty? I must not stop the inlet pipe, for all that water is needed, and the more that can be obtained the better. My remedy is to keep pumping, and, if possible, increase the speed of the pump."

Emma Nevada is the most famous person who ever lived and carried the Wixom name. She was a little girl when her mother married Dr. William W. Wixom, at Nevada City, California, and she took the name of her stepfather. She may never have known the name of her natural father, and one authority states that probably her mother did not know his name. And yet, the world-renowned singer, who received bouquets from monarchs in Europe, could not possibly have wished her ancestry different from what it was, as from them she inherited wonderful musical genius.

Astrology is the name of the so-called art that shapes a man's life by the character of the star under which he was born. They say, born under a lucky star, or an unlucky star, etc. I believe I was born under the moon. While I do not keep up the old time practice of getting "full" every month, still sometime every month I get to my last quarter. Then pension day comes and the tide changes.

William E. Wixom was raised on his father's farm in LaSalle Co., Ill., attended the local district school and the high school at Mendota. He conducted his father's farm for several years, and at another time conducted a rented farm nearby. Later he moved into the City of Mendota and worked at the carpenter trade. He always had a genius for carpentering, and the change fitted him very nicely. About the year 1900 he moved to Wichita, Kans., and continued work at his trade. He bought vacant city property there, built houses thereon and sold them. He is generally engaged in carpentering and contract work in building. Res. 1234 Bitting Ave., Wichita, Kansas.

Irus C. Wixom worked on a farm all his life and he is still at it. He received his schooling in the district school nearby. After reaching his majority he worked for a time for his brother-in-law, Montford A. Crandall. Later he conducted a rented farm near the old home. Then he was invited by his father to conduct the home farm. There he took up his home and continued farming, and there he still remains. At the death of his father in 1902 he was in charge of the home farm, and bought the place at the settlement of the father's estate.

There is not much to describe or relate about a man who has lived in one vicinity all his life, and during all that time has engaged in no line of business except farming. This brief account will be closed with this summary--that Irus Chancy Wixom is the best man the writer ever knew.

At the request of the compiler of this book Mr. Earl has furnished the following autobiography:

"My father was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and was called by the Church authorities to go on a mission to England. He started on the 15th day of September, 1852, when I was just nine days old. He was gone on that mission three years, lacking five days, arriving home September 10, 1855.

"The earliest matter of importance that I can remember occurred in the fall of 1857, when it was reported that 2500 soldiers under the command of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnson were on the road to Utah. Father and my brother, Wilber B. Earl, spent most of the winter of 1857-58 in Echo Canyon, fortifying the mountain passes to prevent the army from coming into the valley. The result was that the army remained at Fort Bridger during the winter, but came into the valley with many others to help in the latter part of November.

St. George Temple, 29 October 1941

"With the help of his three sons, father engaged in sawmilling, stockraising and some farming. Father was a carpenter and spent most of his time making furniture, such as chairs, bedsteads, spinning wheels, looms, and other things necessary for making cloth to clothe the people. Cotton was raised near the Virgin River, thirty miles south of Pine Valley, and most of the people had some sheep, and they made clothes from wool.

"In the summer of 1862 father took up a ranch five or six miles west of Pine Valley, where he spent several years. In 1866 the Navajo Indians came in small groups into southern Utah, and joining with some renegade Piute Indians, gave much trouble to the settlers by killing people and running off horses and cattle. I was engaged with all the young men of the district of my age and older in guarding the settlements from the depredations of Indians. This continued for several years, when peace was restored.

"On the 23rd of July, 1873, my father died, just twenty-six years after the time he arrived in Utah with Brigham Young and the pioneers. I had learned the carpenter trade from my father so I was able to continue the business he had built up. During the summer of 1875 I worked on the Temple at St. George as an inspector of scaffolding, to see that there were no defective timbers or plank that was defective that might give way and result in injuries or accidents to the masons and attendants. My work was under the direction of Brothers Perry and Atkins.

"In the fall of 1879 my brother, Wilber B. Earl, and I, with his family, and my mother and two sisters, moved from Pine Valley to Bunkerville in what is now Clark County, Nevada. We took up land there, cleared and cultivated it. My brother looked after the farming while I was engaged in the erection of a flour mill. Later we put up a blacksmith shop and carpenter shop that I worked in for about twenty years. There I was married to my first wife.

"Soon after this I was appointed Superintendent of the Sunday School and was made second counselor to Bishop Edward Bunker of the Bunkerville Ward.

"On the 29th of June, 1901, my first wife, Calista, died. She was a talented woman, refined and educated, a good wife, tenderhearted and sympathetic with her children, and beloved by all who knew her.

"On the 16th of September following I was chosen as the first counselor to Bishop Edward Bunker, and on the 9th of January, 1908, I was sustained as the Bishop of Bunkerville Ward, with Nephi J. Hunt as first and Henry D. Leavitt as second counselors. I continued in this service until the organization of the Moapa Stake of Zion, when, on the 9th day of June, 1912, I was ordained a Patriarch and set apart as the senior member of the High Council. I continued in the above named offices; then in addition to those mentioned, I was chosen President of the High Priests Quorum of the Stake on March 8, 1925.

"In addition to the Church services I have performed, I have engaged in civil, educational and political activities. I am a Democrat and have been ever since 1880. While I lived in Bunkerville, I served sixteen years on the Board of Education, superintended the erection of two school houses, attended as a delegate from Lincoln and Clark Counties three state conventions held at Reno, Nevada; have been chairman of the County Central Committee a number of years, and am at this date a member of that committee.

"I was elected one of the presidential electors in 1916, and went to Carson City and cast my vote for Woodrow Wilson. I have done some traveling about the state, speaking at political gatherings in the interest of the Democratic party. Have served on many grand juries; was chairman of the first Grand Jury in Clark County, Nevada."

In 1867-69 Mr. Earl was a member of the Utah State Militia for two years. There was an Indian war on at that time, and he rendered valuable services in guarding the settlements and the U. S. Mail routes and Scout Duty. The government is paying him a pension for these services.

He says: "This is a good world to live in, but it will be better when we all learn to treat every man as a brother and a friend, no matter what political party or church he belongs to. As the world is full of good men and women, most of them will treat you right if you treat them right. There is mighty good religion in the Golden Rule." Res. Overton, Nevada.

Following is a poem written in 1924 by Chauncey Fitch Wixom, who is a grandson of Jesse F. Wixom (56):

TO THE COUSINS IN REUNION AT SALT LAKE CITY

Hello! all our dearest kinsmen,
Gathered in one company sweet;
From all cardinal points assembled,
Men, women, and children meet.
Wixan, Wixon, Wickson, Wixom,
In one body met at last;
In a great tribal relation,
All the kinsfolks of the past.

'Tis but sad that in such gathering,
That we cannot all be there.
What a grand old jabber smathering
Of the ugly and the fair.
Each one of their places telling
Of all those they've seen and known;
And their different names and spelling,
Each one telling of his own.

Oh how much we'd like to see you,
As you meet in old Salt Lake;
'Tis not now that we can do so,
But would love your hands to shake.
Maybe so that in the future
We can meet you, one and all;

Circumstances rule the creature,
As we meet each beck and call.

Wife and I are left to chuckle,
Or to meet just any fate;
And to pull the tongue and buckle,
Till we make the old things meet.
Old sticks hardly gather mosses;
And the new ones run away;
But we gather up the losses,
And keep them for a rainy day.

Father's dad a Methodist preacher;
Mother's dad a circus clown,
Thus are wrapped in this old creature,
Things that are in every gown;
For their mantles fell upon me,
One for weal and one for woe;
For the preacher's clothes are on me,
But the clown he does not know.

Stillman L. Wixson of Petoskey, Mich., was for many years a member of the Petoskey City Council, and for as many more a member of the Emmet County Board of Supervisors from his ward in Petoskey, and several years a deputy sheriff of his county. He says that he was born poor, and has held his own ever since. From early manhood he became an expert deer hunter, in a district where the deer were plentiful and venison was an important item of food in every family.

From a newspaper, published Jan. 5, 1924, we quote the following: "Seventy-six years old, the Petoskey veteran has just completed his 67th annual deer hunt in Michigan. Not only does he hunt deer himself, but he plays 'teacher' for many young men who annually accompany the Wixson party to Hulbert, Mich., for the hunt. Far back through the deep woods and slashing from the northern Michigan town, the veteran hunter leads his party to the best 'hunting grounds' of the state.

"Not only the oldest Petoskey hunter in point of years and in point of seasons as a hunter, Mr. Wixson also leads for the sureness of his shots. He brought down a 200-pound buck within an hour after the opening of the 1923 season. 'Sureshot'Wixson is a nickname that has been given him because of his deadly aim."

The early life and schooling of Francis Wixson was such as the ordinary farmer's boy received at that time. He worked at whatever he could turn his hand, but in the harvest season of his early manhood it was his pride and profit to swing the cradle. In company with his brother, Marvin, he worked in the harvest fields for neighbors, Francis handling the cradle and Marvin raking and binding the grain into bundles. Together they would frequently cut and bind six acres in a day, working from sun to sun. For this work they were paid one dollar per acre, which was princely wages in those days.

In the fall of 1861 Francis enlisted in Co. D, 85th New York Inft., for the Civil War, and served until the month of February, 1865. He participated in many battles and minor engagements, including the Peninsula Campaign, South Mountain and Antietam. He has left the story of serving in garrison at Plymouth, N. C. when the fort was captured by a much larger force of Confederates, after a brisk fight in which the attacking party lost more men than the number in the garrison at that time. But the garrison was captured and the Federal soldiers were made prisoners and marched to Andersonville Prison. On the march to Andersonville the prisoners were halted a few hours at Wilmington, N. C.

Wilmington at that time was the one port in the South where blockade runners could run the blockade and ship cotton to Europe; and cotton from all parts of the South had been gathered there for export. Acres and acres of bales of cotton were piled high in rows, with alley-ways here and there. It seems that the Confederate guards who had charge of the prisoners were careless enough to permit the prisoners to wander about those bales of cotton.

Francis Wixson was one of the prisoners there, and he strolled down a cotton alley and chanced to find there one of the prisoners known as "the wild Irishman." Pat was an unruly soldier and had done most of his military service in the guard house for punishment. But Pat had formerly worked in a cotton mill and knew what cotton was like. Mr. Wixson found Pat there, smoking a pipe, and busily digging a hole in a bale of cotton with his hands. When discovered, Pat remarked: "I was going to do some damage here but you have caught me at it." Mr. Wixson replied, "Go ahead, I am mum. I was wishing that I had a match myself." Then Pat emptied the contents of his lighted pipe into the hole he had made in the bale of cotton and pressed the loose cotton into place. "Now, my bye," said Pat, "anywhere from twenty-four to forty-eight hours you'll hear of the damnedest fire that ever burned outside of hell. That may smoulder away until the whole center of the bale is eaten out, but when it does break out, all the water in the river can't put it out." And Pat was a true prophet; the Wilmington fire was a hard blow to the Confederacy at that time.

Francis Wixson had been a small trader while at Plymouth and when he entered prison at Andersonville, he had fifteen hundred dollars in "greenbacks" concealed about his person. This money was used in bribing the Confederate guards to smuggle into prison some extra rations. He bunked with three comrades and divided his grub with them. All four lived to get out but none of his comrades ever repaid Mr. Wixson for the aid he had furnished them.

Part of the time in prison Mr. Wixson was known as the "curly-headed sergeant," as he acted as sergeant of a squad in drawing rations. One time he drew rations for 150 men when there were but 50 men in his squad. The benefit of that play went to those fifty men, but the risk was all his.

In 1865 Mr. Wixson was paroled from the prison and went back to Union lines. His health was impaired the remainder of his life after the prison experience.

After the war, Mr. Wixson was engaged for a time in the mercantile business near Oil City, Pennsylvania. There he met and married Catherine Black. Later he moved to Bolivar, New York, where he conducted a grocery store for seven years, but failed through misplaced confidence where he had reason to look for loyalty. But he refused to take advantage of the Bankruptcy Law, and after several years of struggle he accumulated wealth and paid all of his old obligations in full.

About the year 1885 he commenced farming near the town of Wirt in Allegheny County, but some years later he moved to Oregon and settled near Brockway, in Douglas County. Eight years later he moved to Myrtle Creek in the same state. In 1914 he went to Montana and proved up on a homestead near Wendell in Valley County. After spending two or three years there he spent the rest of his life traveling around, and part of the time he lived at the Soldiers Home, near Sawtelle, California. He died at Ottowa, Kansas, in May 1923.

Francis Wixson was always an ardent Republican in politics and a strong advocate of temperance and prohibition. He did his bit in the World War by working in a canning factory after he was eighty years old.

He enlisted in 1861 for two years in Co. B, 23rd N. Y. Vol. Inft. He took part in twelve important battles, among which were Second Battle of Bull Run, Antietam and Fredericksburg. Marvin, as the story goes, had done some private foraging, and had been over much of the ground where the Battle of Fredericksburg was afterward fought. This information coming to the ears of some of his officers, he was ordered to report to certain officers, and was detailed to act as guide and was assigned to that duty. He afterward stated that some of the needless slaughter there would have been avoided if a bull-headed general had given proper attention to the report of his guide. That battle was one of the greatest blunders of the Union army during that war.

During the actual battle Marvin Wixson acted as bearer of orders and orderly to General Tuttle, who became wounded and sent Marvin down the lines with this message: "The General is wounded, but he says 'give 'em hell.'" After the battle Marvin took an inventory of himself and discovered bullet holes in his coat, but found himself unhurt.

Marvin Wixson lived in Clay County, Kansas, most of his married life, a preacher, farmer and hotel keeper. He was an invalid during his last fourteen years and needed constant care by an attendant. He finally went to the Old Folks Home at East Aurora, N. Y., where his boyhood days were spent.

He reached his home just as his mother was preparing the noon-day meal, and as she looked up and saw him in the doorway, she exclaimed, "Jonathan, what are you doing here?" Then Jonathan explained and his mother realized that he was not a deserter from the army, which pacified the intense shock of the patriotic mother.

Mr. Wixson was an ardent reader of the newspapers and took a deep interest in politics. One evening his son said to him, "Pa, if you will go and milk the cow, I will paste the newspaper on the cow's side so you can read while milking." Maybe the boy was trying to shirk his own chores onto his daddy.

Mr. Wixson loved to sing. During those days singing schools were often held in the neighborhood, and frequently at Mr. Wixson's home. His love of politics led him into singing at political meetings during presidential campaigns.

Nelson Wixson ran away from the home of his parents when he was a boy of twelve or thirteen years of age and never again saw any member of his own people. The boy made good in his lone struggle. He clung to the name "Wixson" as all of his paople had done, by mistake, in their earlier days in Dutchess County, but they afterward corrected the name to "Wixom." But the boy never learned of the mistake. (For full explanation see biographical sketch of Solomon Wixom (26).

Nelson Wixson worked his way through school, and later worked his way through medical college and became a physician.

Amanda Train, his wife, was born at Tinmouth, near Montpelier, Vermont. She and her husband were married by Rev. R. L. Waite, M.E. Church.

She was also descended from the family of "Bonnie Dundee" and Montrose, of Scottish history. Res. Italy, N. Y.; lawyer.

Bradford S. Wixom was one of the oldest and most influential citizens of Italy, Yates County, New York. He was highly gifted by nature, endowed with remarkably clear reasoning powers, a prodigious memory, and a taste for literature; he acquired and retained a vast storehouse of literary knowledge that must have contributed much to his success as a public speaker. He had a natural gift of Oratory.

Many years of his life were spent in teaching. At the age of twenty-one he was nominated a candidate for the office of School Commissioner of Steuben County, but was defeated at the election by a small margin.

He moved to the town of Italy in Yates County, where he spent the last fifty years of his life. There he identified himself with the political and educational affairs, holding the offices of Supervisor, School Commissioner, Justice of Sessions and was later Justice of the Peace for 33 consecutive years. He was an ardent Republican. He had a wide and interesting circle of friends. He was also teacher and superintendent of the M. E. Sunday School.

Dec. 17 in Novi Twp, Oakland Co.; died Mar. 17, 1916, at the home of her daughter in Pontiac, Mich.), dau. of Abel Peck and Margaret Sanford.

Willard C. Wixom's farm was about a mile from the village of Wixom. It was sufficiently near the station on the Flint and Pere Marquette R. R. to give excellent shipping facilities. Mr. Wixom lived in the village where, as a member of the firm of Wixom & Sibley, he was interested in the produce business. The farm was under the management of an experienced man and there was kept the finest line of Durham cattle.

He was born on the same farm that he owned at the time of his death. His father, one of the earliest pioneers of the district, died when Willard was seventeen years of age, and from that time the business of the farm and the care of his crippled mother fell on him. He had previously attended the private school conducted by Henderson Crawford at Millford. Willard entered upon the task before him well equipped by natural ability and training. He was essentially a man of staunch integrity and worth and commanded the respect of a wide acquaintance. He was identified with the village of Wixom, which was named for him from its beginning. From 1871 to 1898 he was associated with J. L. Sibley in produce and lumber business at Wixom, which brought him in touch with the farmers for miles around. He was always extensively interested in Durham cattle, and this gave him a reputation among cattle breeders that extended into distant states. His stock sales for a number of years drew patronage for a long distance.

On the 21st day of December 1901, while driving a horse and wagon across the railroad at the regular crossing, a mile south of the village of Wixom, he was struck by a passenger train, killing man and horse. No one knew how it happened. How did he miss seeing the train?

Politically Mr. Wixom was a Republican and was a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Elnathan Wixom at the age of four years went with his parents to the vicinity of Trumansburg, New York. In early manhood he purchased a tract of land there from which he cut and burned the fine pine timber, which had no market value, plowed around the stumps and planted the clearing to wheat. That one crop of wheat brought him more money than he paid for the land. He always had large fields of wheat and corn, and soon became the wealthiest farmer in his county. He acquired the habit of loading his sled in the wintertime and taking his surplus produce and distributing it among the poor and needy people of his county. He was a Quaker of the old school.

Cornelia E. Mead lived in Putnam County, New York, until she was twelve years of age. Her home was about fifty miles north of New York City, in Croton River Valley. She attended Miss Lizzie Benedict's School for Girls for four years, then left with her parents for the West. That was in 1867. The family went to Sheboygan County, Wisconsin, to join other members of the Mead family who had settled there in 1848.

While Cornelia was attending the senior year in the high school in Wisconsin, she received a certificate for teaching school, at the age of fifteen years. She afterward attended Normal School at Whitewater, Wisconsin, and later took a special course at the Normal School at Oshkosh.

During the second year of the writer's work on this book, he received from Mrs. Bagley copies of all the early records of the Wixom family taken from the town records of Massachusetts where they had been officially recorded from the time of the earliest settlements. The copies of records furnished gave the writer the necessary information concerning early ancestry of the family and many of the side-lines, and thus made the writing of this book a practical task. Mrs. Bagley, we thank you!

George Colt Bagley was a grain buyer at Minneapolis. From the best authority it is learned that the family name of Bagley had its origin from the town of Baguley, which is situated about seven miles south of Manchester, in Chester, England, on low grounds on the banks of the Mersey River. His records show that William Bagley was Mayor of Stockpoint, Chester, England, from 1882 to 1884. The family was early established in England. The birth of Samuel Bagley was at Weymouth, Mass., Sept. 7, 1658. The line comes down in successive generations through James, John, Samuel, Samuel the Second, Benjamin, and Dudley Seldon Bagley, who was born Sept. 10, 1818, in Brookfield, Vermont. He was a farmer and represented his district in the New Hampshire legislature for two years, beginning 1850. In March 1856 he moved to Wisconsin, settling near Milwaukee, where he operated flour mills. Later he purchased elevators on the C. M. & St. P. Ry. and the C. & N. W. Ry. His two sons, Harmon and George C., were partners in this business. Later the business was sold in Wisconsin and George Colt Bagley started a grain business in Minneapolis, building elevators on the C. M. & St. P. Ry. in South Dakota, incorporating the business under the name of George C. Bagley & Co. He also bought large interests in the Atlantic Elevator Co., and assumed the management. In 1895 he organized the Royal Elevator Co., which built elevators along the Soo Line in South Dakota. He was president of the corporation. In 1905 he organized the Homestead Elevator Co., purchasing 29 elevators on the Soo Line in Minnesota, to which he added 15 more, so that his name became known throughout the great grain belt in the Northwest.

Another notable business activity on his part was the formation of a brokerage and loan business, when he purchased a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. In 1902 he bought an interest in the Sabine Canal Co., where they irrigated 22,000 acres of rice. He also purchased five sections of land in the Calcasieu Parish, Louisiana, for rice production and raising livestock, and the cultivation of pecan and orange groves.

In addition to his other interests, Mr. Bagley was a director of the Minneapolis Fire and Marine Insurance Co., and also President of the Kellogg Commission Co., the Calcasieu Land & Rice Co., the Sabine Land Co., and one of the Directors of the First National Bank of Minneapolis. He was a member of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce and the Duluth Board of Trade. He was also Regent of the Longfellow Memorial Association, member of the Society of Colonial Wars, and member of the Minneapolis Minikalda, LaFayette and Automobile Clubs. He was among the contributors of the growth, the prosperity and the greatness of the Northwest.

The constant growth and expansion of a business which he established in a small way, made George Colt Bagley, in the course of years, one of the most extensive and prominent grain merchants of the entire Northwest. His contributions to the growth and development of the country were therefore real and valuable, and many an enterprising town in that section of the country has been built up about the grain elevators which he established. He thus contributed in valuable measure to the world's work until his life and labors ended in death on August 20, 1918. Her res. 2645 Park Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

EIGHTH GENERATION

1126. ELNATHAN ELDREDGE, son of Elnathan (358), born Sept. 12, 1841, at Dennis, Mass.; m. Rebecca Derr (d. 1869); m. (2) Nov. 7, 1870, at Ogden, Utah, to Malvina Pratt (born April 15, 1850) at Salt Lake City; dau. of Parley P. Pratt and Agarta A. Walker; d. October 14, 1913, at Salt Lake City; m. (3) Feb. 10, 1879 at Salt Lake City to Mary Elizabeth Dunster.

Elnathan Eldredge left Massachusetts with his parents at the age of six years on the journey to Utah, and reached that destination in September, 1847. He was educated in the common schools of Salt Lake City. Like all new communities those schools were crude and simple. In 1861 he drove an ox team of four yokes from Salt Lake City to the Missouri River at Winter Quarters and return, for the purpose of taking Mormon converts to Utah. In 1863 he went on a mission to England for the Mormon Church, remaining there three years, returning to New York in 1866. He was appointed to take charge of the Mormon emigrants from New York to the Missouri River points, there to be met by ox teams to take them to Utah; then he returned to Salt Lake City by mule teams.

He taught school in Coalville, Utah, about two years, then moved to Bear Lake, at a new settlement at Meadowville, Utah. He and his brothers, Joseph and Joshua, entered into a contract with the U. S. Government to carry a tri-weekly mail between Evanston, Wyoming, and Paris, Idaho, in 1869. It was the first U. S. mail on that route. In 1874 the three brothers also engaged in buying, raising and selling cattle. Elnathan moved to Sugarhouse, Utah, and engaged in farming in Salt Lake County. He was appointed to the bishopric of Sugarhouse Ward. There on Feb. 10, 1879, he married Mary Elizabeth Dunster, his polygamous wife, then went on another mission for the church to Indiana. In 1890 he moved to Ogden, Utah, and went into the musical and sewing machine business. Later he moved to Salt Lake City.

Elnathan Eldredge was an earnest member of the Mormon Church and took a prominent part in its activities. He devoted much of his time to development and forward movement, and was always ready to assist in promoting its interests.

At the request of the compiler of this book Mr. Eldredge has furnished the following autobiography:

"My father, Elnathan Eldredge, was a sea-captain and sailed the Atlantic Ocean for many years. My mother was a school teacher at Harwich, Mass. In company with my older brother, Elnathan, and younger brother, Frederick, I moved with them from Massachusetts to the wilderness of Utah in the year 1847 (which journey is described in the account of my father (358) in this book). I remember that at the end of our long and tiresome journey, my mother dropped on her knees and said, 'This is the place--our journey is ended,' and offered a prayer to God in gratitude that we had all been spared in the long and hazardous journey.

"There in the home of their selection the Mormon people felt secure in the thought that they were in a place where no other people would desire to live except the Indian Savages, and we felt sure that we could treat with them on friendly terms.

"My father took up a farm a few miles south of Salt Lake City. He soon learned to conduct a farm, and the other members of the family, as many others did at that time, lived in the town and went to and from the town and farm to help raise food for man and beast.

"I wish here to describe a little incident that illustrates the character and make-up of my father. One early morning on our way to the farm we observed some ten or fifteen cattle that had broken the fence and entered a field of wheat. Father said, 'We must stop here and drive those cattle out of the wheat and repair the fence.' We did so and drove those cattle some distance away and repaired the fence. That cost us an hour more, and we boys grumbled at the delay. But father said, 'We always should do to others as we would have them do to us.' This is a good illustration of my father's practical application of the Golden Rule. And we boys often talked together of father's honest and generous principles. We had often seen his generosity and kindnesses during the famine and grasshopper war, when grain was scarce and dear. We had seen him give to the needy.

"Our schools at that time were rather poor affairs. We boys were fortunate in having a mother who was able to teach us the rudiments of education, and she took pains to teach us and gave us good foundation for that purpose.

"In 1862 I drove four yoke of oxen and wagon from Utah to the Missouri river and return. I was then nineteen years of age, and in company with a train of sixty wagons. That was to me a wonderful trip. On my return to Utah I engaged in freighting to the mining camps of Nevada, Idaho and Montana. In Montana I went to the head waters of the Missouri River. I freighted over that country when there were no white settlers there except trappers, miners and freighters. They were a wild and lawless class of desperate characters. Life was filled with adventure and excitement. It was in the days of placer good mining. Lawlessness ruled the country. The citizens there organized a vigilance committee to enforce order.

"In 1867 I enlisted as a soldier in the Black Hawk Indian War and served several months, for which the U. S. Government gives me a pension. I worked nearly a year on the construction of the U. P. Railroad. In 1869 I went with my father on a visit to Massachusetts for six months. In 1873 I moved with my family to Meadowville, Utah, in company with my brothers, Elnathan and Joshua. There we took a contract from the U. S. Government to carry a tri-weekly mail from Evanston, Wyoming, to Paris, Idaho, going through the towns of Rich County, Utah. We also engaged in cattle and ranch business, buying, selling and raising. Then we remained in Rich County, and while there I was elected County Assessor and Collector of Taxes and served four years. There I took a contract to build railroad grade for fifty miles from Granger, Wyoming, through the coal fields; also installed a steam sawmill for making lumber. In 1884 I moved back to Salt Lake City, having disposed of my holdings in Rich County.

"That year I was called to go on a mission for the Church to the State of Virginia, returning to Utah in 1886.

"I have held the offices of deputy sheriff, assessor, collector, Clerk of Salt Lake County; was appointed clerk of Salt Lake City Court, and resigned from that position, after giving eight years to that office, to give attention to my own private affairs."

The best of twenty-five years of Mr. Payne's life was devoted to the study and teaching of music. He was connected with several of the largest conservatories in the West, including the "Manzo Academy of Music" of which he was the founder, and the "Payne Music School" of Spokane, Washington. Many of his compositionsand instruction books were published and distributed by such firms as Partee of New York City, F.O. Gutman, Cleveland, Ohio, and J. W. Jenkins of Kansas City, Mo. Guitar, mandolin and Italian harp were his instruments.

In later years poor health drove Mr. Payne back to the soil. It became a question with him to "get out of doors or die soon;" and he engaged in poultry farming in southern California, with remarkable success. His later years have been devoted to that industry. He was the founder of the first San Bernardino County Poultry Association, the first cooperative organization in southern California to pool poultry products for the markets, and for manufacturing and handling poultry feeds.

Mr. Payne's success in helping and advising his fellow poultrymen gained for him the honor of appointment as State Representative of the National Poultry Institute of Washington, D. C., and a member of the Advisory Board of that organization. Res. 322 So. Granada Ave., Alhambra, California.

When the Wixom Family Association of Illinois held their annual reunion in 1919, a plan was adopted to write a Wixom Family History and Genealogy, and Dr. Coltrin was appointed Family Historian and the compiler of this book was appointed his assistant. A year later Dr. Coltrin was compelled to withdraw from further work in that line on account of ill health and the pressure of professional work, and his assistant was assigned to the task of completing the book.

Dr. Coltrin was educated in the public schools and the Chicago

College of Dental Surgery, from which institution he graduated with the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery, March 28, 1887, having previously served three years apprenticeship with Dr. E. W. Olcott of Palatine, Illinois. Soon after graduation he formed a partnership with Dr. R. M. Putnam, an old practitioner in Palatine, with whom he continued in practice until the following spring, 1888, when the partnership was dissolved. He then moved to the village of Barrington, Cook County, Illinois, where he established his first independent practice. He remained in Barrington until the spring of 1890 when he moved to Nyack-on-Hudson, Rockland County, N. Y.

In the fall of 1892 he returned to Illinois and located in the village of Austin in Cook County (later annexed to the city of Chicago), where he resided for the remainder of his life. In 1912 he gave up his practice at Austin and moved his office to the Mallers Building, 59 East Madison Street, in the Loop District of Chicago, where he continued his professional work until his death.

During his professional life Dr. Coltrin was active in Dental Society work and had several times held office in both local and state dental organizations. He was a member of the following named clubs and societies: National Dental Association; Illinois State Dental Society, of which he was Vice-President, 1920-21; Chicago Dental Society of which he was Vice-President 1910-11; George H. Cushing Club (dental), President, 1914-15; Delta Sigma Delta Fraternity, Grand Master Chicago Auxiliary Chapter, 1916-17; Oaks Club, Austin; Illinois Society Sons of American Revolution; Medical Veterans of the World War; 123rd Field Artillery Association, acting President during the War.

Dr. Coltrin served in the World War as a member of the Medical Advisory Board No. 3 F, District No. 3, Selective Service System, Headquarters West Suburban Hospital, Oak Park, Illinois; discharged from Government service March 31, 1919. Res. 208 N. Mason Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Children: Vonda, Fred and Daisy

Of herself Mrs. Shaffer writes: "I think one could say that I belonged to Aunt Mary Sleight, for 'She, Aunt Mary, saw me first, having been in attendance with Midwife Gray when I was born.'

"I think I must have wanted very much to come to Earth Life to my dear parents and brothers and sisters, for with me came a happy nature and a love of people. I was blessed with a wonderful husband, Fred Shaffer. I rejoice that the privilege came to me to meet the author of this book, J.H. Wixom, and to have had the joy of working with May B. Findlay on the records of this book. J. H. Wixom, our historian, had the greatest respect for May B. Findlay and her expert manner of record keeping, and her great humility and trust in God. She was a shining light. Nell Wixom, Don's daughter, and I have held deep interest in this work, under the instruction of J. H. Wixom and May B. Findlay."

It might also be added that Mrs. Shaffer is a retired nurse, having helped those who were ill as much with her keen sense of humor as much as with her tender nursing care. She had to work and care for her small family after the death of her husband. With her perpetual optimism this never became a burden and she was always able to find a silver lining in any cloud that came her way. She has contributed very much to the Wixom genealogy and continues her research on this during her retirement.

Thomas George Sleight attended public schools in Paris, Idaho, and was called to take a missionary course in the Bear Lake Seminary at the high school in 1898. The high school was then Bear Lake Stake Academy.

He had a large farm in Sharon and raised the first dry farm grain there. As a lover of horses he owned some very fine trotters. As a prosperous farmer he was the first in Sharon to own an automobile, about 1916.

When he was 15 years old his father was called on a mission to England. George then had to provide for the family by running the farm and working at odd jobs. Much of his work was on the ranch of Hyrum S. Woolley and around his general merchandise store, which was located near the Sleight home. Mr. Woolley was very generous to the family.

In 1918 George sold the farm at Sharon and bought another near Paris and a home in town, so his boys could go to high school.

In later years he was a great reader of the Church works. He read through the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants several times. Until he became hard of hearing in 1940 he always attended church meetings, and until he retired from farm work, he always paid tithing. He donated the land in Sharon for the first meeting house and school and contributed nash and labor as well.

Emily Miles Sleight attended school at the Summit Stake Academy in Coalville, Utah, and at the Bear Lake Stake Academy in Paris, Idaho. She has always been an active member of the LDS Church. In civic activities she served in Sharon as School Trustee and Clerk of the School Board for four years, and as town Postmaster.

Her trim garden and beautiful flowers were always admired by neighbors and tourists alike. Flowers are among the favorite subjects for her ingenious oil paintings, the most recent addition to her list of achievements. Her res. Paris, Idaho.

The following from the Montpelier News-Examiner after her death:

"'Aunt Frances', as she was familiarly known by her many friends, was a very good lady, always willing to help out in time of need. Her pleasant disposition will long be remembered by all who knew her.

"She was born at Paris, Idaho, on April 4, 1870, the daughter of Thomas and Mary Wixom Sleight. In her youth she attended the elementary school and Fielding Academy at Paris.

"She was married to John A. Bunn at Paris in 1892, and shortly thereafter moved to Lanark, where they homesteaded and lived until 1938. Mr. Bunn died Jan. 11, 1938 and she moved to Paris the following summer, where she has since made her home.

"Mrs. Bunn was an active worker in the LDS Church organizations, being in the Ward Relief Society Presidency for five years. She was a teacher in the MIA and also the Primary association."

A niece writes: "Aunt Frances and Uncle John were two of the kindest people I have ever known. No one could have been more hospitable than they were whenever you were in their home. She was an excellent cook, mother, and homemaker. They were always willing to share whatever they had with their fellowman; and also willing to help in any time of need. Whenever there was sickness in our home Aunt Frances was always willing to come and help out, and Uncle John would urge her to go and he would take over in their home. She will always be remembered by our family, as well as many others, with love and gratitude for the association we had with her."

1399. HANNAH ANN SLEIGHT GRIMMETT, dau. of Mary (448), b. Mar. 23, 1872 at Paris, Idaho; died Sept. 6, 1951, at American Falls, Idaho (buried at Moreland, Idaho); md. June 12, 1895, at Dingle, Idaho, to Hyrum Grimmett (b. Jan. 6, 1854 at Birmingham, England), son of John Grimmett and Sarah Passey. Res. Moreland, Idaho; farmer.

Hannah Ann Sleight was the third in a family of nine children born to Thomas Sleight and Mary Matilda Wixom. She was born in the little pioneer settlement of Paris, Idaho, where she was reared to young womanhood and where she received the education afforded by the public schools of that time.

When she was twenty-two years of age she met and married Hyrum Grimmett, a widower with four children, whom she helped to rear. They were married June 12, 1895, and left the next day by covered wagon for Moreland, Idaho, where they established a home, which was destined to be her home through most of the remainder of her life. Here were born to them eleven children, five sons and six daughters, the last daughter succumbing shortly after birth.

She was a staunch Latter Day Saint, and next to her family her religion was her most priceless possession, and she lived it thoroughly in spite of many obstacles. She worked as a teacher in most of the auxiliary organizations of the church, and was a visiting teacher in Relief Society for many years. In those days when homes were so scattered the visiting teachers had to travel by horse and buggy, often taking the entire day to cover the assignment. She was president of the Religion Class for more than eight years, a position she filled with honor and dignity. She was made happy beyond expression when her husband became a member of her church in July 1908, and her greatest dream of happiness was fulfilled when five years later they journeyed together with their ten children to the Logan Temple and there were sealed "for time and all eternity."

She knew the burden of sacrifice when her two eldest sons joined the call of the colors during World War I, and although Truel, the oldest, was near the front lines in France, they were spared and both returned to their home safely. During World War II, her youngest son, Richard, served for two years in Alaska. During this conflict a son-in-law saw action in the South Pacific, and a grandson, Gordon Stirland, served for four years. During the Korean War another grandson, Robert Grimmett, answered the call of duty.

She was a self-sacrificing woman, always giving of herself and her possessions to make others comfortable and happy. Her home was ever open to friends and relatives, for her hospitality knew no bounds. She loved her children dearly, but always had love to spare for cousins and others who came to make their home with her.

In 1934 the first link in the golden chain of their family life was broken with the passing of her dear husband. And again in 1947 she was called to bear the burden of sorrow with the untimely death of her son, Arch. But as in all crises of her life she bore this with fortitude and continued to maintain the family home in Moreland. When in 1945 she suffered a severe illness, her children persuaded her to sell the home in Moreland and purchase one in Aberdeen, where three of her children then lived, and where she could be under their care. She loved this new little home with all its modern conveniences and she lived the remainder of her life there.

On March 23, 1951, when she was seventy-nine years of age, her daughters entertained for her at an open-house in her old hime in Moreland. Here she was privileged to meet and greet many of her old and dear neighbors and friends. That summer she made a visit to all of her children in their homes, and climaxed it with attending the Sleight Family Reunion at Lava Hot Springs, Idaho. Here she met most of her next of kin for a joyous celebration. After the festivities she went with her brothers and sister to Paris for four glorious days of renewing old acquaintances and visiting with loved ones. It was while on the way home from this visit, on Sept. 6, 1951, that they stopped at a cafe in American Falls, Idaho. She opened a door to go in, not knowing it opened onto a flight of stairs, and lost her footing and fell. She died almost instantly from the fall. She was buried in the family plot in the Moreland Cemetery beside her beloved husband.

Hyrum Grimmett was born in Birmingham, England, Jan. 6, 1854, the son of John Grimmett and Sarah Passey, and came to the United States with his parents when he was but a child.

He was a kind and loving man who was devoted to his home and family above all else. He was a man of many talents. In the early pioneer life he acquired much skill as a physician and was called upon many times to set broken bones, to diagnose various illnesses, and to administer aid to the sick and suffering. He practiced law in Idaho, after having passed the Bar Examination. He was the first school teacher in the Moreland area and all his life was devoted to the cause of education. He was instrumental in establishing the first high school in the town and served on the school board for many years. He took an active part in politics, serving several terms as County Sheriff and later as County Assessor. He was Moreland's first postmaster and he was excellent as a carpenter and builder. He loved to read and his private library was used for many years by most of the students in the town. He was the father of eighteen children, two of whom died in infancy, but the rest lived to maturity, and all survived his passing away on May 21, 1934 after a long illness.

He was married in 1875 to Emma Pomeroy, and she died in 1895 from a heart ailment. They had five children, and from his union with Hannah Ann Sleight, the following children were born:

She lives at Springville, Utah.

A cousin, Mrs. Lois Shaffer, writes: "Joseph had a friendly nature. He became a part of any home he entered, with his hearty laugh and keen sense of humor. He brought forth children as did the Pied Piper. They would climb on his lap, or stand nearby while he told them stories, and worked magic of all kinds. Joseph was dependable, a strength to the family, and on good terms with all."

Oct. 1, 1919, in LDS Temple at Salt Lake City, Utah, to Gussie Ann Goochey (Gouchi) (born August 13, 1894, at Prairie Hill, Mo.; d. Sept. 25, 1935), dau. of Augustus Goochey and Charlotte Harriman. Res. Burley, Idaho.

Orson was always faithful in all his church duties from the time he was a child. He departed for an LDS mission to the Eastern States on October 12, 1904, and returned in October 1906.

He took up a farm in Raft River, Idaho and later moved to Burley. It was there that he met the girl who later became his wife. She was a convert to the church on Aug. 16, 1914. She had come west for her religion, as her parents were against Mormonism. They moved to Rupert and Minidoka, Idaho, and back to Burley, where they finally settled down. They were both ardent church workers and held many positions in their ward and stake.

Gussie was a good mother and teacher for her children. She was loved by all her associates. She was always thoughtful of others and helped many in various ways. After Lewis was born she took a fever, from which she never recovered. She suffered for four months before she passed away.

With seven children to clothe and feed in depression times, Orson took whatever work he could find. He worked in a store for a while and did carpentry work. He found it difficult to be mother too. He had to be on the job early, leaving the children to get themselves off to school. The winter of '35 and '36 found all the children down with scarlet fever. LaMona and Helen were hit hardest, causing them to miss that year of schooling. Later Alice Sleight, Orson's sister, took Helen for the winters. She went to school in Paris, Idaho, for five years, returning home only for the summer months.

In spite of the lack of a mother in the home, the family was happy together. They always went to a show once a week, enjoyed more social entertainments, and most of all enjoyed each other. He loved his children and grandchildren and they all loved him.

In April of 1953 he had pneumonia, and was taken to the hospital. Two weeks later he died.

A cousin, Mrs. Lois Shaffer writes, "Orson was a person with whom one could always have a good solid conversation on any important subject. He had a high sense of propriety and a knowledge of the Gospel, which he loved to explain. One didn't think of Orson as being humorous, and yet he had a sense of humor that fit any occasion. Anyone who couldn't see the humor in the home life of the Sleights missed the tie that bound them together."

1403. RICHARD SOLOMON SLEIGHT, son of Mary (448), born Mar. 2, 1885, at Paris, Idaho; m. Apr. 2, 1913 at Salt Lake City, Utah, to Laura May Hunsaker (b. July 16, 1888, at Elwood, Utah), dau. of Allen D. Hunsaker and Ivy May Green. Res. St. George, Utah.

Richard S. Sleight was born in Paris, Idaho, while his father was serving on an LDS mission to England. He received his education in the grade schools and the Bear Lake Stake Academy at Paris.

He left Salt Lake City October 5, 1910, to fill a mission for the LDS Church in the Netherlands; after six months he was transferred to England, where he labored for two years.

On his return home he met his companion, Miss Laura Hunsaker, at Salt Lake City, Utah, and they were united in marriage for time and eternity in the Salt Lake LDS Temple on April 2nd, 1913. They made their home at Paris, Idaho, where Mr. Sleight engaged in farming and stock raising until October, 1930, when he purchased a general merchandise business at Pegram, Idaho. In 1934 he opened a wholesale and retail gas business at Border, Wyoming. On July 1, 1934, he purchased the Redman store at Geneva, Idaho. In 1938 he purchased the F. W. Bacon store at Georgetown, Idaho, and after World War II he and his son purchased the Wm. Hoff store at Georgetown. He was postmaster at Pegram & Georgetown.

Mr. Sleight has held many positions in the LDS Church through the years. He was chosen to be the Bishop of the Georgetown Ward in February 1939, where he served until 1946. Then he sold his businesses to his sons and he and his wife and daughter moved to Smithfield, Utah. Their next 5 years were spent in traveling from Canada to Mexico and they made a trip east, visiting Church and national historical points of interest.

He had secured property in several places, which he looked after, but in the winters he and his wife went to Southern Utah, and Arizona. They purchased a home in St. George, Utah, and in 1955 he and his wife were called to be officiators in the St. George Temple, where they are still serving. Mr. Sleight states: "We are proud of our family of five sons and two daughters, and many grandchildren. The experience of raising a family is the choicest blessing that has come to us." He is interested in gathering the genealogy of his ancestors.

Mr. Sleight is largely responsible for the final publication of this history. During the time J. H. Wixom was working on these records he contributed money and has continued to do so through the years toward research for the Wixom family. He has served as president of the Wixom Family Organization. He has been the largest contributor, both financially and by lending encouragement and moral support to those engaged in the actual work of the publication. The work his daughter, Ruth, has done in the typing and editing of this book is done as a tribute to a wonderful father, who has been an inspiration to his family as long as they can remember. And to a wonderful mother who has stood beside him and worked and supported him in all of his undertakings.

Richard Sleight loves people, and is always interested in others. On one occasion two of his grandsons accompanied him and his wife on a little trip. On their return, one said, "Aunt Ruth, I'll bet there aren't ten people in the whole world Grandpa doesn't know."

A cousin, Mrs. Lois Shaffer, writes: "Richard was the balance-wheel for the entire family. This was true in the days of his youth and has continued so during his entire life. He has always been a comfort to all during times of trouble and sorrow. He is always ready to lend a helping hand, or give comfort and advice. Perhaps the best thing that ever happened to Richard, was Laura. She has truly been a helping hand to him throughout their entire lives, and together they have brought much joy and happiness to others."

1404. OLIVE IRENE SLEIGHT BAXTER, daughter of Mary (448), born Nov. 20, 1887, at Paris, Idaho; d. Feb. 18, 1938, at Preston, Idaho; md. July 26, 1906, at Blackfoot, Idaho, to Don Carlos Baxter (born May 13, 1886, at Aurora, Utah; d. Apr. 14, 1944, at Preston, Idaho), son of Zimery Hafford Baxter and Wealthy Matilda Higgins. Res. Banida, Idaho; farmer.

The following is taken from a history of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter by their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lyman Baxter:

"Mrs. Baxter received her schooling in the grade school of Paris and the Fielding Academy, and graduated with honors, proving she had the ability and willingness to learn.

"In 1906 while on a visit to Moreland, Idaho, she became acquainted with Don Carlos Baxter, a jolly good looking young fellow. He was born and reared in Aurora, Utah. They were married on July 25, 1906 and later moved to Moreland, Idaho, and took up farming. After their first son was born they moved to a little place called Banida, Idaho. They worked on a small farm known as the Bean Ranch.

"There was no electricity and many of the long winter evenings were spent sleigh riding to nearby neighbors and making candy, popping popcorn, playing games, or attending an LDS meeting.

"Although they were blessed with a large family, Mrs. Baxter was active in her LDS Church. She was MIA President for many years and worked in the Relief Society, Primary, Sunday School, Genealogy organization, choir, and she spent many hours helping the sick. She did a great deal of sewing for her friends, neighbors, and family and loved to do patchwork on quilts.

"One by one the boys married and moved away, or went away to school or for work. Then in 1938 real tragedy hit their home. Mrs. Baxter had just returned home from a funeral on Tuesday afternoon, when she took a sudden illness. It was a very rare strep throat, and even though the doctors and everyone around her tried to help, it became worse. They took her to the Preston City Hospital, and on Friday, February 18, 1938 she died----just two hours before the very rare drug known as penicillen arrived from Chicago---the one thing the doctors thought might help.

"The boys and Lasca were married and had started housekeeping for themselves. So this left two young girls for Mr. Baxter to raise and care for. He worked hard trying to be mother and father to them. Just a few years later he was bringing in a load of hay, when the wagon tipped over and threw him under the load. It broke and crushed his leg and he never walked again without the use of crutches or a cane. On April 14, 1944, a tragic car accident took his life."

A cousin, Mrs. Lois Shaffer, writes: "Olive possessed the quality of "live and let live" to the highest degree. She lived a full life, with a very pleasant nature. She passed judgment on no one. With a clear ringing laugh. She made no attempt to change people; she accepted them as they were.

"One can't speak of Olive without speaking of her husband, Don Baxter. They held a great love for each other and this spirit, with an outstanding welcome, filled their home."

In 1954 Mrs. Prescott wrote the following: "Three or four years before the death of my mother, she being very delicate and frail, asked my husband if anything should happen to her, would he take the little girls and care for them. To this my husband readily consented. When mother did pass away, James was in California and because of a mistaken address we were unable to notify him. But I took the children after the funeral, for I knew it would be alright with James.

"My husband was good to my brothers and sisters and tried very hard to partly take the place of the missing parents. We also, took the little daughter of my sister, Mae Viola. Some people said they could not tell the difference between the children of James and the ones that belonged to mother's family, for he was just as good and kind to one as to all the others.

"For a long time we had several children in school at a time, even eight. We bought 50 lbs. of flour every Saturday night. We ate that much bread each week. We all worked together, played together and were very happy.

"We have been married forty-three years and have twelve children, twenty-two grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

"I have had three sons-in-law and three sons in the service of their country. Wilford served in the Army in Alaska. Argyle was in the Air Force in England and Germany. He performed 31 missions. He served as an instructor for about two years. Cleo served in the Army in the states for 17 months. Kenneth served in the Navy for three or more years. Glen served in the Air Force and was shot down over New Guinea. He was missing for eight years before anyone knew whether he was dead or alive. His official death date was received Nov. 19 1941. He was buried in Portland, Oregon. Ralph served overseas for three or more years.

"I lost my husband on July 6, 1949. He was buried in the Heyburn Cemetery. It has been lonely without him, but I feel sure the Lord will continue to bless me and give me strength to keep his commandments, that I may go forward and do the job of finishing raising the children, as James and I had planned.

"I have worked in the Church all the days of my life and have truly enjoyed every moment of it. Today I am the President of the Burley Third Ward Primary. I have a testimony of the truthfulness of this Gospel and that is the best thing that could ever come into my life."

The following was written by J. H. Wixom: "It was thirty-two years ago when I first met that gentleman, Walter W. Wixom. He was a husky four-year-old. He and I became quite chummy on short acquaintance. In those early days he used to climb on my knee and I would ask, 'Who be you?' He would answer, 'Badboy Beeler.' Then I would ask, 'What do you need?' and the answer came, 'A "pankin".' Then I commenced to spank him, a little harder, then a little harder, until he said 'Nuff,' then the 'pankin' ceased. On one occasion I gave him a wicked lick with a shaving strap, without realizing until the blow was struck how it must have hurt him. Then I quickly petted him and rubbed the spot that was hurt, and was about to kiss the place to take off the sting, when 'Beeler' recovered quickly and said, 'Nuff!' and the incident was closed. Once 'Beeler's mother said I had spoiled her boy, for whenever she tried to punish him by spanking 'Beeler' would stand it for a moment, then 'Nuff, Mama;' then she would have to laugh and in the language of the army, 'cease firing.'"

Cardston--"Samuel H. Earl, 72, of Mountain View, who was seriously injured in a head-on collision between two cars on No. 5 highway about six miles east of Cardston Sunday evening, died in a Cardston hospital about 2:30 a.m. Tuesday without regaining consciousness. His wife, Mrs. Laura Earl, 68, was killed instantly in the crash.

"The condition of their four-year-old granddaughter, Shane Lybbert of Davenport, Wash., who was the only other occupant of the Earl's car and who suffered a fractured pelvis in the accident, was described as good by hospital officials in Cardston Tuesday morning.

"The six Indians, Eugene Henry and Mike Steinhauer, Albert Lapatak and Stanley Cardinal of the Saddle Lake Indian Reserve near Edmonton and Pete Warrior of the Brocket Indian Reserve who were in the other car involved in the accident, have all regained consciousness, according to Cardston Indian hospital officials.

"They all have extensive multiple injuries and their conditions are described as still only fair.

"At the time of the accident, Mr. and Mrs. Earl were returning to their home in Mountain View, which is about 16 miles west of Cardston, from Lethbridge where they had taken their daughter, Mrs. Beth Hackney of Denver, Colo., to catch a plane.

"Born in Middleton, Utah, the late Mr. Earl came to the Mountain View district about 1898, where he has resided ever since.

"He had been postmaster at Mountain View during the past 15 years and police magistrate in Cardston during the past eight years.

"An active LDS church Member, Mr. Earl was ward clerk at the Mountain View LDS church for many years.

"Besides their son Aubrey, who is provincial inspector of schools in Edmonton, the Earls are survived by five daughters, another son and 19 grandchildren."

1835. EMMA WIXOM PALMER, known to the musical world as "Emma Nevada," was born about 1858 in Nevada County, Calif., whence she takes her stage name. She was an adopted daughter of Dr. William W. Wixom, who married her widowed mother. She is now the wife of Raymond W. Palmer, and lives in retirement in Paris. In her days of glory many of the monarchs of Europe threw bouquets at her feet. She sang for a season on alternate nights with Patti in New York, and again in San Francisco.

This picture was furnished by Prof. Evan Stephens, of Salt Lake City, who knew the great singer in days gone by, who says that she is here represented at the age of 22 in the opera La Somnambula, by Bellini, in a sleep-walking scene. Prof. Stephens says, "The youthful freshness and velvet tone of Emma Nevada was something never to be forgotten. Her stage presence was most charming."

About the year 1860, somewhere in central California, Dr. William W. Wixom married a widow woman who had a little baby girl about two years old. That little girl was given the name of her stepfather and became Emma Wixom. Our story here is about that little girl. She became the most famous person who ever bore the name Wixom and is therefore entitled to a place in this book, by way of explanation, even though she carried no Wixom blood in her veins.

From chapter, "DAUGHTERS OF BONANZA YEARS," Mills College History, now being prepared for publication (1931) we take the following extract:

"How can a narrator of the mechanistic 1930's portray the girlhood life of two generations ago? Perhaps the maiden with the most picturesque history, among the hundreds of daughters registered as students at Mills during the famous bonanza years, was Emma Wixom, '76,' who came to be known the world around as 'Emma Nevada.' She lived in a day less concerned with library and laboratory than is our own and she was to win fame by her singing before kings and queens but she won the hearts of girlhood friends and of the alumnae of Mills College through her rare charm and beauty of character.

"Emma Wixom, born in Nevada City, California, spent her girlhood in her native city. Her father, Dr. William W. Wixom, practiced medicine and, as what strong man did not, became interested in mines. When Emma was only five years old, so the family annals record, she showed marked talent and often sang with a chair for her stage, her father as conductor, and her adoring mother, aunts, and cousins forming her enthusiastic audience. Tales are told of how this wee tot captivated the hearts of the big, rough miners with her remarkable voice and lovable ways, how fives and tens and twenties in gold were showered at her feet when, clad in a little gingham frock, she stood on a doorstep and sang quaint songs in a sweet childish treble. At the time of her mother's death, she was sent to Mills to begin her musical education under Alfred Kelleher, a graduate of the Royal Academy of London. Today her classmates still tell how they used to gather around her after dinner and listen spellbound as she sang and resang her limited repertoire, which during the years has grown to dozens of operas.

"Emma Nevada" Wixom (1835

"It was through the efforts of Mrs. Mills, whom Emma loved to call her foster mother, that the young girl was given an opportunity to study in Europe. Her father, like many another who put his faith into the uncertain metal of the mines, suffered financial reverses and could do little for her. Dr. Adrain Ebell, the naturalist, became interested in Emma's singing and he and Mrs. Ebell took her with them to Paris. When his sudden death necessitated the return of Mrs. Ebell to America Emma Wixom was left alone with more ambition than money. A new friend, Mrs. John W. Mackay, believing that the girl possessed great talent, made it possible for her to study under one of the most inspiring teachers of the day, Madame Marchesi. After three years of hard work came her first appearance as a trained singer. Her medium was opera. One of her classmates recalls her in her California premiere: 'The most enthusiastic audience I have ever seen in the old Opera House in San Francisco was when "Nevada" returned to America just after she had made her debut in Paris. We were all there, at twenty dollars a head, waving and cheering like mad.'

"The life of this young Nevada maid has been romantic in every chapter. She took as her artist name that of her native county. 'Nevada' was to sing before many crowned heads of Europe, but one of the happiest occasions was when a childhood wish came true, and she sang before Queen Victoria at Osborne. In describing the interview that followed she wrote to Mrs. Mills, 'Her Majesty asked me if I was not an American and I proudly answered "from California" and almost said from Mills.'

"The following editorial in the local newspaper tells of a concert she gave in 1902 in Nevada City, California, the town of her birth:

> 'The theatre was packed to the doors. It was not one of the most fashionable gatherings the old theatre has ever seen, for they came from the far ends of the county, and even beyond the county. The valleys yielded up their farmers, the hills and mountains, their sturdy miners. Old age joined with lusty youth, rank and station were leveled last night. Was not the name of Emma Nevada enough to stir long buried memories and bring the hoary-headed, horny-handed miners from the ravine and the flat? Aye, for it recalled to them the days of long ago when she, but a lisping tot, charmed their rough hearts with her sweet, childish melody and set them attuned to the music of the angels.'

"From the campus publication of that date, The White and Gold, we select a description of her college concert:

> 'At last the day came when she was to sing again for her Alma Mater. The day was not the perfect one for which she had hoped; but the sunshine was not missed, for within our beautiful music hall all was bright with the gold of California poppies. The audience was large and enthusiastic. Every number was encored again and again, and the singer responded with the songs everyone loves, such favorites as "Home Sweet Home," "You and I," and "The Mocking Bird"..... But Madame Nevada's unfeigned pleasure in the pleasure she was giving was the most charming part of the afternoon.'

"Nevada became Mrs. Raymond Palmer and later left the life of a public singer. Her daughter, Mignon, inherits her mother's voice and dramatic gift. Her mother believes that she has a greater future ahead of her than her own. If California should have the opportunity of judging Mignon Nevada's powers, college historians might make comparisons. Until then, our allegiance goes to the gifted maid of bonanza years."

We have the following letter from Boston Conservatory of Music, 250 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass.:

> "Emma (Nevada) Wixom, was born at Alpha, near Nevada City, Calif. She was taught singing by Mme. Marchesi, and in May, 1880, made her debut, under the name of Nevada, with success. She then sang in all of the great cities of Italy. In 1885 she sang in Italian operas on alternate nights with Patti at New York, San Francisco, etc., with greatest success. On October 1, 1885 she married at Paris, Dr. Raymond Palmer. She returned to America and after she sang in Holland, Germany, Russia, Italy, Portugal and Spain. In 1892 she sang at Convent Garden, London, and in 1898 at Opera Comique, Paris."

The compiler of this book has been unable to trace the ancestry of Dr. William W. Wixom, stepfather of Emma Nevada, with certainty; but by a process of elimination and some guessing, he thinks that Dr. William W. Wixom was a son of Leroy Swamstead Wixom (182). When about 18 years of age Mr. Hodgins learned the trade of photographer at the time when old tin types were in used, and worked at the trade for some time in partnership with a man named Van Dussen. The partnership was dissolved, and at the time of his marriage Hodgins was a laborer on a farm. Then he became a shingle sawyer, and followed the shingle and lumber mills in north-central Michigan until about 1896 when he met his old partner, Van Dussen, and took up the photographic business once more. After traveling from place to place the family finally settled at Mesick, Mich., where Mrs. Hodgins died in 1905. Mr. Hodgins then drifted from place to place until 1907, when he lived with his son Wilbur until the summer of 1913. He then went to Marietta, Ohio, where he died.

Mrs. Hodgins was a dressmaker, and her income was all spent to take care of and raise her children. Mr. Hodgin's money was nearly all spent for drink, and after he went into the lumber woods where there was no dressmaking, his wife cooked in the lumber camps, sometimes for 150 men. She was a wonderful little woman and mother and an earnest church member, and died after a few days of illness.

Albion F. Wixson was first employed in the office of the Registrar of Deeds, Sanilac Co., Mich.; then entered the hardware business at Lexington. At the age of 21 he settled in Detroit where he continued in the hardware business and became a commercial traveler for a Detroit hardware house in the Lake Superior territory. In 1910 he moved to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he represents a Duluth hardware company.

He was the second Michigan Wixson to join the Masonic Lodge. Almost all the members of the family were anti-secret society men--particularly anti-Masons. They were raised in western New York during the Morgan trouble.

Albion F. Wixson is the father of the present Absent Voters Law in Michigan. He first proposed such a law in an address before the Michigan State Hardware Association at Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 6, 1896; devoted many years to the cause as Sec. and Treas. of the National Absent Voters League. Today absent voting is in effect in nearly every state and bids fair to become a national reality. Res. 2801 Park Ave., Apt. 309, Minneapolis, Minn.

At the age of one year Chester A. Wixson moved with his parents to Grand Haven, Michigan, where they lived until the year 1883, when the family moved to Escanaba, Michigan, where Chester attended the public school until 1890, when he entered Lawrence University at Appleton, Wisconsin. In the fall of 1893 he was taken very sick and was forced to leave school. After recovery he went into photographic business with his father. Chester married in 1895 and moved to Gladstone, Mich., to take charge of a branch of the business, where he remained until Jan. 1, 1898. He then moved to Rhinelander, Wis., where he purchased the electric light plant operated by steam with fuel from the refuse of the sawmill there. A few years later the sawmill moved away and Mr. Wixson developed water power on the Wisconsin River at Hat Rapids, and also developed another water power plant on the White River near Ashland, Wis., which furnished the electric power to operate the street railway at Ashland and Washburn and Nach, followed by the development of power on the Montreal River and the lighting of the towns of Ironwood, Michigan, and Hurley, Wisconsin.

Mr. Wixson retired from active business in Jan. 1916 and moved to California. When war was declared in 1917 Mr. Wixson was appointed a Field Director of the Pacific Division of the Red Cross, and on May 8, 1918 was commissioned a Major and assigned to Maj. Gen. Stringer's staff of the 40th Division located at Camp Kearney, near San Diego, Calif. 2001. WALTER SCOTT WIXSON, son of Philip (665), born Sept. 17, 1863, at Lexington, Mich.; d. Jan. 29, 1928, at Lapeer, Mich.; md. Jan. 26, 1893, at Toledo, Ohio, to Florence Dodge (b. Oct. 3, 1863, at Toledo), dau. of Charles Dodge and Calista E. Palmer.

Mrs. Wixson's father, Charles Dodge, was born in Hawley, Mass., Oct. 19, 1821. He was the son of Silas Dodge and Content Brown. Her mother, Calista Palmer Dodge, was a daughter of Benjamin Palmer and Statira Treat. Benjamin Palmer was a descendant of William Palmer of Plymouth. Statira Treat was a descendant of Richard Treat of Weatherfield, Connecticut.

Walter S. Wixson was educated in the public schools of his native county and later took a course in the New York Collegiate Institute. In 1883 he graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, the youngest member in his class. He was not eligible at that time to secure a license to practice law in Michigan, as he was not yet twenty-one years of age. He therefore went to Chicago to accept a responsible position with the accounting department of the American Express Co. He remained there ten years, receiving several promotions.

Returning to his native town he began the practice of law and was successful from the start. In 1897 he formed a partnership with the late T. C. Quinn, under the style of Quinn & Wixson, and has made his home in Caro since that time.

In 1915 the late John W. Quinn was admitted to the partnership, the name of the firm becoming Quinn, Wixson & Quinn. About 1918 Mr. Wixson became associated with John C. Hewitt, an eminent attorney of Bay City, and was largely engaged in cases between railroads and other corporations. This connection took him away from home much of the time. Upon the death of John W. Quinn in 1924 Mr. Wixson and Mr. Hewitt organized the firm of Hewitt, Wixson, Brooker & Kern, with offices in Bay City and Caro. This partnership continued until Mr. Wixson's appointment by the Governor of Michigan to the vacant judgeship of the Fortieth Judicial Circuit of the State in May, 1928. At the following regular election he was re-elected to the office by a large majority of the voters of the Circuit.

Mr. Wixson's work in public and official capacity included six years in the office of prosecuting attorney, three years as Circuit Court Commissioner, and he was also a member of the Constitutional Convention to frame a new Constitution of the State in 1908-9.

His law practice was of a general nature, which gave him a broad experience in the trial of cases, many of which were held in other parts of the state where he was called to conduct or assist other attorneys in handling cases. He appeared before the Supreme Court of the State in more than forty cases, and had the remarkable record of losing but two.

He was appointed to the bench to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. W. B. Williams of Lapeer, and in the short period of nine months' service Judge Wixson demonstrated his fitness for the exalted station. He was of a studious nature and possessed a judicial mind. Careful and painstaking in the preparation of his cases, he went into court after a thorough examination of the evidence, and the law applicable thereto; and with a keen intellect and habit of close analysis of facts, he became a wise counsellor and forceful in argument. His high sense of honor inspired confidence in his clients who came to him in great numbers for advice.

The demands upon his time and talents through his connection with the Bay City firm greatly increased the burden under which he labored. It became necessary for him to make frequent journeys to New York and other distant cities, and he thus became almost a stranger to his home and Caro friends. This condition was unwelcome for him, as he was happiest at home, among his beloved books and the society of home-town folks. His sense of humor was keen; he greatly enjoyed a joke; and his fund of anecdotes, largely developed from his practice in the courts, helped to brighten his more serious conversation and made him a delightful companion. He was an excellent mixer. He could easily hold his own with the most eminent and scholarly persons, and he could make the commonest man feel easy in his presence.

Judge Wixson's uncle, the late Levi L. Wixson (677), was for many years Judge of the 24th Judicial Circuit, of which Tuscola County was then a part. And from early youth the nephew cherished the ambition to succeed him. The attainment of that ambition was naturally highly gratifying to him.

He looked upon the duties of his high office with a serious eye that inspired confidence in all who witnessed his work in the court. He brought to the bench a thorough knowledge of the law, which made it possible for him to give decisions promptly. That ability, sincerity, and fairness, and his unfailing courtesy to all--these qualities won for him the regard and affection of all who knew him. He was probably the best fitted for a Judge of a high court than any man named in this book. Res. 521 W. Burnside, Caro, Mich.

In the days of youth Mr. Fox received an education in agriculture on his father's farm. He spent two winters at northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, and probably received much inspiration, as well as instruction, from Professors Brown, Boucher and Bogarte.

But Mr. Fox was always a lumberman. In his early career he was employed to draw logs to a sawmill. He worked in Bayne City loading lumber and in the millyard of Godfrey von Platen. There he became assistant foreman, then foreman, then superintendent in full charge, while his employer, Mr. von Platen, lived elsewhere.

In January 1910 Mr. Fox made a trip to the Upper Peninsula of Michigan to secure a proper location and construct a new sawmill. He found what he wanted, constructed the new mill at the City of Iron Mountain, and that mill began running on the 19th day of December, 1910; and it is still running. It is a big institution.

There is a story going the rounds that a certain young lady school teacher refused to teach the school in the schoolhouse located near the sawmill because she was so modest that it shocked her to look at undressed lumber.

Mr. Merton J. Fox is a leading man in his home city. Since residing there he has held the following named positions of trust and honor thrust upon him by his neighbors: President of City Hospital Association, President of Rotary Club, Chairman of County Republican Club, President of Upper Peninsula Development Association, President Upper Peninsula Golf Association, President Hardwood Association, Director in Commercial Bank, Director in Trout Creek Bank, Director in Newberry Chemical and Lumber Co., member of Conservation Co. of the state and chairman of several committees of bigger community enterprises. He has been the leading spirit in almost every worthwhile movement in his community; hosts of people he has helped in time of need; and he is not a politician fishing for votes. Res. Iron Mountain, Mich.

In the days of his youth and early manhood David W. Sherwood occasionally walked from his home at Owego, a distance of thirty miles, to visit the family of Elnathan Wixom, a cousin of his father. Elnathan was a wealthy farmer and raised large fields of wheat and corn. In the winter time Elnathan would make trips to the poor families and distribute provisions among them, and frequently David W. Sherwood would accompany Elnathan on those happy journeys. Elnathan was a Quaker and when the Civil War came on, Elnathan offered to pay for a substitute to serve in David's place, if David should be drafted, if David would come and live with him; but David enlisted and he was the only one who went to the war of all the Sherwood families. He enlisted Aug. 27, 1862, and served in the Army of the Potomac to the end of the war, all through the Wilderness, Cold Harbor, before Petersburg, and was discharged as Orderly Sergeant, Co. H., 109th Regiment, N. Y. Vol. Inft.

He is now (1925) the oldest Civil War Veteran and G.A.R. member in his county, an active member in the Masonic Lodge No. 474 at Belmont, and holds the office of Marshall.

(2) March 7, 1897, in Tioga Co., N.Y., to Delphine Alice Williams, dau. of Justice Andrew Williams and Olive Farlin.

James B. Courtright had an eventful life. When he was about four years old his mother died and he went to live with his mother's parents. Later his father remarried and he returned to the home nest. Later he went to Pennsylvania, where he followed railroading, then bridge building. At the age of twenty-five he returned to the farm near Waverly, N. Y., and followed farming until 1903 when a tornado took away the barn and all the contents, which left him broke. He went to the town, but four years later returned to the farm. In 1925 his buildings were struck by lightning, which destroyed all he had, and he returned to the town.

On Nov. 20, 1926, as he was driving his team with wagon on the street of Endicott, someone grabbed the horses by the bits and another person started back toward him. That was the last he remembered, and did not remember that clearly for nearly eight weeks, and he lived only one day more than eight weeks. The side of his skull was crushed.

The perpetrators of the assault were never found, and the cause of it is still a mystery. He was always kind and courteous to everybody and was not known to have an enemy.

Louise Arline Peck Ross (3151)

Louise Arline Peck

Mrs. Ross is a professional nurse. She entered the L.D.S. Hospital at Salt Lake City on June 1, 1916, and graduated therefrom in May 1919. That year she was one of the two nurses chosen from that hospital to attend the Rotary Convention in Salt Lake City for emergency calls.

In August 1919 she was selected as Office Nurse with a firm of six doctors in Salt Lake City, which position she held for a year. She then served as Special Duty Nurse in the same city until the fall of 1921, when she received the appointment of nurse in the Star Valley High School at Afton, Wyoming, where she taught the theoretical part of physical education, and a class of First Aid and Home Nursing, with a special class once a week for mothers, and twice a week an extension course for the University of Utah for teachers trying to get college credit. There she also served as examiner of students of the different schools of the district for bad teeth, diseased tonsils, defective hearing and eyesight, malnutrition, etc. She says that she enjoyed this work more than any other work taken up in her profession, as it gave her the pleasant opportunity of teaching the young boys and girls the things they should know to enable them to meet the problems of life.

She says, "So many parents neglect the fundamental principles of a child's training, then blame the child if it falls by the wayside. Feeling that information in this line is so important and so far reaching for good, there is a natural joy in giving the instruction." Res. 1230 Elgin Ave., Salt Lake City, Utah; he is a salesman.

Nov. 28, 1903, at Bridgeport, Nebraska), dau. of John Henry Nunn and Mary Ann Markham. Marriage sealed in the Logan LDS Temple, Sept. 21, 1927.

Earl and Olive Wixom both had pioneering experiences. Olive came in a covered wagon from Bridgeport, Nebraska to Idaho Falls, Idaho, when she was a young girl--her oldest brother driving one wagon and her mother the other. After finishing grade school, she learned chocolate dipping in a candy factory. During the time her children were growing up, she was known as the "Candy Lady" and manufactured her own brand under the name of "Mrs. Wixom's Frontier Lady Chocolates." She has a very pleasing personality and is loved by a large number of friends and associates.

Earl went with his parents from Fillmore to Little Basin, Idaho, and from there to Raymond, Alberta, Canada. He drove a covered outfit in a wagon train from that place to Idaho again in 1914. He can remember Alberta as unbroken plains inhabited by painted, long-haired Indians, whom he visited at times in their tents.

He was in the regular United States Army as a radio Signal Corps man from 1919 to 1921. He worked on his father's ranches and on various types of construction. His education was obtained with the assistance of his wife after he was married, since which time he has been an art and ceramics teacher in various locations, with the exception of the years of the second world war, when he worked for the Signal Corps and the Air Force. Earl has some artistic and literary pretensions, having won the Vernon gold medal for Short Story, and published a Master's theses in Education while still in college. His poetry is included in the first edition of "Utah Sings," and "Contemporary Men Poets of America." While in college he was co-editor of "Scribble," U.S.U. Literary Magazine. During the last twenty summers he and his wife have traveled extensively over North America. He is a past president of the Wixom Family Organization.

Sept. 23, 1916, at Freedom, Wyo.; d. Nov. 9, 1958, at Preston), dau. of John T. Nelson and Ivy Emogene Ashment. Following is the Newspaper account of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter:

"A rolling flaming automobile Sunday Morning claimed the lives of a popular and well-known Preston couple, Mr. and Mrs. Dorald H. Baxter, and made orphans of four children.

"Mr. Baxter, 44, and his wife, Hazel, 42, were returning from Brookside Inn where they had eaten dinner Saturday evening. Slowing down at the intersection by the Roper and McEntire homes, on highway 91, north and west of Preston to turn southward toward their home, their car was struck with terrific impact from the rear by an automobile driven by Max Coburn of Preston.

"The collision broke open the Baxter car's gasoline tank, and the car exploded in flames. It rolled out of control for more than 250 feet and came to rest, in flames, almost on the front lawn of the McEntire home on the south side of the highway.

"People in other cars nearby at the time were helpless to do anything to save Mr. and Mrs. Baxter. An alarm was turned into the Preston Fire Department and police, but otherwise all the onlookers could do was stand by and watch the blazing inferno. Mr. and Mrs. Baxter were almost cremated. They were burned so badly that identification was almost impossible. Time of the accident was about 12:45 a.m. Sunday.

"Mr. Baxter had lived at Banida and Preston during his entire life. He married Hazel Mildred Nelson Sept. 19, 1936, at Paris, Idaho, and later the marriage was solemnized in the Logan Temple. He had engaged in farming and for three years was a member of Preston city police force.

"Mrs. Baxter was born at Freedom, Wyoming, and had lived in Freedom until hermarriage, when she moved to Banida. She has taken an active part in church organizations, serving in Primary and Mutual Improvement associations."

From there we were to Nampa for a short time. There we had many good friends. In 1950 we went to Elgin, Oregon, where we have had the grand privilege of working in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I have been President of the Relief Society, organist of the Ward, Teacher in the Primary and a teacher in the Mutual. My husband has served as first and second counselor in the Bishopric under the present Bishop. He has also been a Ward Teacher and Priesthood Advisor.

The following was written by Mrs. Reedy: "We have spent most of our lives in Burley, until the spring of 1946 we went to Salem, Oregon, and spent the summer working. The two older children, Betty Mae and Ernest Earl and their father worked in the hops field. I worked at the cannery at night.

"We then returned to Burley for the children to go to school. After school was out the next spring we then moved back to Salem for a year and a half. Here my youngest son was born February 10, 1948.

"My father, James Thomas Presocott, passed away July 6, 1949, and we came home for his funeral. The four children and myself did not return to Salem, while my husband and Betty Mae returned to Oregon and brought back all our possessions.

"We next moved on a farm in Heyburn, Idaho. Then we moved back to good old Burley and then our last baby was born in April 1954. She was a mostwelcomed little chap. We are trying very hard to live our religion and to do our part in the responsibilities that are given to us by the leaders placed over us.

Ligonier, Indiana; m. June 12, 1921, to Adolph R. Hayes (b. December 28, 1896). Res. 316 Riverview Drive, Decorah, Iowa.

The following was written by Mrs. Hayes: "My mother was Anna Earl, the fourth child of Robert and Eliza. They spelled their name with just one 'L' in the old days. I knew my great grandfather's name was Palmer William and that the family moved from Ohio when the children were well grown for they all received good educations in a Christian Seminary. At least most of them were school teachers in an early day in Indiana.

"After building a nice home in Noble County (Ind.), great grandfather Palmer W. with the pioneer spirit moved on to Missouri long before the Civil War. He was killed hauling logs to build a home in Missouri--I think near Springfield. Having no word from him in over a year, the daughter, Elizabeth, married a Beezely of Washington Township, Noble Co., Ind., and they immediately set off to Missouri in search of her father, and when they arrived in Missouri they were told he had been killed by a fallen tree. Great grandmother died a few years later of a sudden heart attack. All of my grandfather's brothers and sisters lived and died in Noble Co. or the adjoining counties, except Mrs. Beezely and two sisters who died when young.

"I remember grandfather well---Robert M. Earll. He was a kind, loving person, very soft spoken, rather tall and heavy set, large brown eyes and dark hair when he was young. He was a good teacher, very painstaking in explaining.

"His family were Baptists and he was one of the leaders in founding a Sunday School in the community, and later helped to build what was known as the Stringtown Christian Church.

"One of the things I have learned from the Earl family, they were seldom known to speak an ill word of anyone. My mother always taught us to say something good of people."

Mr. Scofield writes: "I was born and raised a Baptist, went to Sunday School and learned the Bible scriptures all during my childhood in Littleton, N. C. After graduating from high school I came to Calif. with a boy friend, leaving all my family behind. After about one year I met the girl I was to marry, and we were married six months later.

"I have worked in building construction since I came to Calif., 12 years in building and supervising domestic homes and 10 years in supervising commercial buildings. I am mechanically inclined, can repair anything mechanical. It is one of God's gifts.

"My wife was born in the L.D.S. Church and her family comes from Pioneer stock. Her grandfather and grandmother both crossed the plains with their parents in 1863 and 1864. Her grandfather, Thomas Cheshire, was a bodyguard to Brigham Young for a while; he was a policeman in Salt Lake City, Utah; helped to build the St. George Temple; was Marshall of Ferron, Utah, for three terms and a plasterer by trade. Her grandmother, Mary Ann Elizabeth Abbott, was a midwife and delivered all the babies in Ferron, Utah. My wife's parents had 11 children, 6 boys and 5 girls.

"My grandparents, Charles Scofield and Florence Wixon, were both born in Wayne, N.Y. When my father was about 8 years old, my grandmother died, and my grandfather took my father and an uncle to North Carolina to live, and that's how my parents happened to meet. Nothing more is known of my grandmother. My grandfather lived with my parents until his death. My parents had five children. My mother was raised on a large plantation in North Carolina. They raised cotton, tobacco and peanuts. She had five brothers and four sisters.

"I spent many happy hours with my grandfather Reid in this country. We used to fish and hunt together when I was a young boy. My mother also likes to fish; it is one of her favorite pastimes. My father had only one brother--there were only two in the family. Since I left home my parents have moved to Wilkes Barre, Pa., a small mining community. They still reside there. My two brothers are living in Pa., and my two sisters are living in Roanoke Rapids, N. C. All are married and have families."

The following article was printed in the Boise, Idaho, newspaper about the triplets, Calvin (1430), Kleo (1431), and Kenneth (1432):

"A sister in Fruitland and two brothers in Montpelier, reputed to be Idaho's first triplets, couldn't be together for their joint 50th birthday on their church's Pioneer Day, July 24, but they had a visit by telephone before the day ended.

"Mrs. Ben Blackburn, the former Kleo Wixom, who was born at Liberty, 10 miles west of Montpelier, along with her two brothers on July 24, 1911, is the sister at Fruitland. The brothers are Kenneth George Wixom, a school employee, and Calvin Reed Wixom who has the Sunset Motel and Cafe, both at Montpelier.

The triplets were the first in Idaho 'until triplet girls at Pocatello came along,' Mrs. Blackburn said Monday.

"They were the last of 14 children born to Mr. and Mrs. John Steven Wixom, an LDS family who lived on a farm near Liberty. The family also had one set of twins, Simpson Montgomery Wixom, now deceased, and Ethel Mary Wixom, now Mrs. Sherman Burdine of Long Beach, Calif.

"The three infants were presented a souvenir Idaho silver spoon apiece, the spoons engraved with each of their names and the name of the donor, Governor J. H. Hawley of Idaho, for their honor of being the state's first triplets. The Borden Milk Company also gave each infant a medal.

"When the three were three years old, their father lost his eyesight and the family moved into Montpelier where the triplets went to school.

".....When asked how triplets reacted to one another, Mrs. Blackburn said, 'Oh, we were very close. In school we never got ahead of each other, and out of school the boys were always patient with my wanting to go where they went. When I'd cry, "Wait for me!" they always waited.'

"And when the telephone calls went through Monday evening, the sister found the brothers were still waiting for her. 'I had you on my mind all day,' each said, 'and there's a present in the mails for you.'"

2597. The following letter was received by D. Clyde Wixom from Mrs. Alice W. Sibley, of Pontiac, Mich.:

July 18, 1958

"I was very glad to receive your letter yesterday and hope that I can give you some information that will be of interest to you.

"My grandfather, Ahijah Wixom, took up land from the government in 1831 and it was on a part of this land that the village of Wixom was built. It was founded by my father, Willard Wixom in 1871, and was given his name. I have the original plat. It is still just a small village, but recently a huge factory was built about a mile from town for the manufacture of Lincoln cars, and since then there has been a great deal of activity in real estate, and business is improving rapidly. It has very recently been incorporated as a city.

"My father and J. L. Sibley--later my father-in-law--were partners in the lumber and produce business for 30 years, until my father's death in 1901. I married Dr. Harry Sibley in 1911 and we lived in Pontiac until his death 2 years ago. I will probably remain here for the rest of my life.

"I have two sons, Dr. Wixom Sibley, who was in the U. S. Public Health Service for several years. After war was declared, he enlisted in the Navy, and after special training in epidemiology and malariology, was sent to the S. W. Pacific, where he spent 18 months. After his discharge from the Navy, he came back to San Francisco and spent 3 years specializing in ophthalmology. He is now practicing in Redwood City, Cal. My younger son, Forbes, has his Master's Degree in Chemical Engineering; he lives in Birmingham, about 10 miles from Pontiac, and works in Detroit.

"My husband graduated from U. of M. Medical School; Wixom from U. of M. Medical School; Forbes from the music dept. of Mich. State College (now Mich. State University). After returning from military service he decided to take up Chemistry at U. of M., where he received his Master's Degree. I graduated from Albion College in 1903.

"A cousin of my father's, Dr. Wallace Wixom, went to Cal. at the time of the Gold Rush and later located in Austin, Nev. His father, Dr. Isaac Wixom, was a noted surgeon, and his daughter, Emma (Wixom) Nevada, was a famous opera star.

"I have given you the facts most closely connected with my branch of the family, and if there is anything further that you want to ask about, I'll answer as well as I can." Address: 15 Matthews St., Pontiac, Mich.

TESTIMONIALS
(received by J. H. Wixom)

Some time ago a cousin living in Idaho asked me for considerable information from my writings, to be used in certain work that she was preparing of a genealogical nature. I therefore loaned her the duplicate copy of my manuscripts. She has since written me as follows:

"Bloomington, Idaho, March 30, 1929.

"For fourteen years I was in the employ of the Genealogical Society of Utah, at Salt Lake City, which is probably the greatest institution of its kind in the world. During that time I had the privilege of studying books of biography and genealogy. I have, therefore, read many of the best books on those subjects with deep interest. With that experience I do unqualifiedly state that your book, the Wixom Family, is the best book of the kind that I have ever read. I feel that your book will excel the best thus far written and will be taken as a model for subsequent works on genealogy and family history.

"In your biographical sketches you seem to bring our incidents in the lives of different persons described that make them impressive and beautiful, so that one must stop and study the mental pictures you draw.

"I have taken the liberty of loaning your book to Mr. Roy A. Welker, of Paris, Idaho, who had heard of the work you are doing and wanted to examine it. He may write you a review.

"I expect to visit Salt Lake City in a few days and will take the liberty of submitting your writings to the best genealogical scholar there, and ask his opinion of your work. You may hear from him.

"Your cousin,

"MAE B. FINDLAY"

Later the following letters were received:

Genealogical Society of Utah,
47 East South Temple Street,
Salt Lake City, Utah, April 9, 1929.

"I have examined with care and considerable interest the manuscript genealogy of the Wixom Family, compiled by you.

"Fortunate indeed is any descendant of Robert Wixom to have prepared for him such a complete, accurate, and readable record of his family. This book should form part of the bequest left by every Wixom descendant to his children and should be a part of the household equipment with which every youth with that blood in his veins begins his own housekeeping.

"One feels instinctively, in pursuing this record, that the work has been one of love; that the author has labored on it hard and long with untiring energy to bring it to perfection, and preserve a history worthy of the men and women whose lives are chronicled. It may well stand as the crowning achievement of a well spent life.

"Not only does it bear evidence of loving care but of rare discrimination and painstaking accuracy. Every available source appears to have been searched and references have been given. It is a book that begets confidence in its truthfulness.

"Without haste, with the deliberative resolve to devote several years of most arduous labor to give it more completeness, this family record has been compiled, family by family, and name by name. Each name has been numbered, and a comprehensive index will enable one to find any name therein, rapidly and with ease.

"It is impossible to compute the real value of such a genealogy. It will be a welcome addition to any genealogical library in the land, and should prove a prized possession of every living person whose name or family has found a place in it.

"Sincerely yours,
"A. F. BENNETT,
"Secretary Genealogical Society of Utah."

"Paris, Idaho, April 10, 1929

"It has been my privilege and pleasure recently to examine manuscripts of the forthcoming book of genealogy of the Wixom Family by Justin H. Wixom.

"I consider it, in many respects, the most important and valuable work of its kind that has come to my attention. It seems almost incredible that one man could discover and so splendidly arrange so much vital material as Mr. Wixom has done. Truly it has been a giant task, and if ever Providence has lent a helping hand to a toiler, it has here.

"Not only should the members of the Wixom family be grateful for such a work, binding and relating together the various branches of that expanded family, as it does, but all others interested in genealogy will find in this book a masterpiece, a model, which clearly points out the method to be followed if ever they venture to pursue a similar worthy task.

"Very sincerely,
ROY A. WELKER."

These unsolicited testimonials from such eminent students of genealogy give me much courage. They are better than my own ideas of my work, but no better than my ambition and aspirations called for. I am not a competent person to form a correct judgment on my own work. Others must do that. But in regard to what is said concerning the enormous amount of labor expended, and the loving devotion to the work, there is no exaggeration.

Yours very cousinly,
J. H. WIXOM.
